JORDAN JOINS MIDEAST WAR

Troops Sent Into Syria To Aid In Checking Israeli Advancement

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Jordan entered the war today, sending a detachment of its "most efficient" troops into Syria to join the battle against Israeli forces advancing toward Damascus in the second week of the new Middle East conflict. Israel said its troops crushed two Iraqi brigades also sent to the aid of Syria.

An Israeli armored spearhead was reported closing in slowly on Damascus, after pausing in its advance to smash a force of 13,000 to 15,000 Iraqi troops. The Syrian capital was now within range of the 175mm howitzers of Moshe Dayan as the Israeli spearhead inched ahead less than 20 miles from Damascus.

The announcement that King Hussein, after a week of hesitation, had decided to join the Arab fight against Israel came a few minutes after an air alert sent thousands of Israelis to shelters. The Israeli army followed the alert by an emergency broadcast calling up more reserves.

There was no immediate indication Hussein had thrown his full 70,000-man army or relatively small 200-plane air force into the struggle or that he was opening a third front against Israel's eastern flank as he did in the six-day war of June, 1967. The Jordanin army has log been regarded by experts as the best fighting force in the Arab world.

In the Sinai desert, Israeli military spokesmen reported continued tank sparring along the southern front with Egypt, but said the Egyptians launched no extensive attacks. Cairo had a brief air alert shortly after a loud explosion was heard throughout the city. There was no explanation of the blast.

An announcement as broadcast by official Amman Radio said Jordan has sent "a group of our most efficient military formations" to fight in Syria alongside embattled Syrian and Iraqi troops struggling desperately to stem the mounting Israeli threat against Damascus.

Hussein had been reported as saying recently he would not enter the war unless he saw a better than 50 per cent chance of an Arab victory.

The broadcast came soon after Damascus Radio reported fighting still raging along the entire length of the front in Syria.

Syrian military communiques said Syrian jet fighters and missile crews fought off a wave of Israeli air attacks that started at dawn Saturday.

The Damascus communiques said Israeli planes struck at targets near Damascus and at Syrian spearheads in the Golan Heights where fresh Iraqi troops were fighting alongside Syrians and Moroccans.

The Syrians announced last night they had stopped an Israeli offensive along the highway leading to Damascus and forced the Israeli troops and tanks into retreat.

An Israeli military spokesman, however, said Israeli forces were still making a slow but steady advance toward the Syrian capital. Official sources said the troops spent the night within 20 miles of the city. It was believed the decision on how far the Israelis would go had become more a political than military decision.

Israel's military command said its troops had smashed Iraqi forces newly committed to the battle, crushing Baghdad's two front-line brigades in Syria without slowing the drive on Damascus.

An Israeli military spokesman said 80 Iraqi tanks were knocked out. The Iraqi experience, he added, demonstrated "the success of the Arabs recruiting a foreign legion with Iraqi cannon fodder."

Hop-scotching Israeli commandoes before dawn went far behind enemy lines, 60 miles northeast of Damascus, to raid an Iraqi reinforcement column, the command said, and reported damaging the convoy and blowing a bridge before returning home safely.

Iraq yesterday had committed a force of 13,000 to 15,000 men and 250 tanks to the Golan Heights front to free Syrian troops there to race toward their capital and take up final defense lines for the first Israeli assault on an Arab capital.

The Tel Aviv command said "most of the Iraqi troops that entered the Golan Heights front were destroyed by Israel in a battle this morning. The remnant of the Iraqi force is in retreat."

Military sources said the Israeli destruction unit had split off from the spearhead toward Damascus to turn south and attack the Iraqis 8 miles opposite the prewar cease-fire line. Israeli losses were not report-

Nixon Picks Ford; Quick Action Seen

Has First Official Meeting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Republican Leader Gerald Ford, President Nixon's surprise candidate for the vacant vice presidency, today was given congressional promises of swift action on his nomination and his first official Presidential briefing.

Ford, with only three hours sleep since the President told the nation last night he wanted the Michigan Republican as his new vice-president, touched base at both Congress and the White House and then set out for a brief home-state visit. (See other stories pages 3, and 31.)

Both the House and Senate, in rare Satarday morning sessions, received the President's nomination of Ford and passed it on to committee, with predictions confirmation could come by the end of the month.

Ford sat quietly in his usual seat in the House as the formal nomination message was read, then hurried to the White House for what Nixon called "our first official meeting."

Nixon, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, and White House chief of staff Alexander M. Haig took part in briefing Ford on the Middle East situation.

Nixon told newsmen Ford will get an Executive Office Building office next to the White House, daily intelligence briefings, and "will participate in National Security Council and Cabinet meetings —the same as a vice president would participate, once confirmed."

After the White House session, Ford left for Cedar Springs and East Lansing, Mich., to fulfill long-standing engagements. However, he canceled a continuation to Salt Lake City, Utah, to visit his son Jack, in order to fly back to Washington tonight to attend White House religious services on tomorrow.

He started his day with a reiteration to Capitol newsmen that he did not plan to use his new office as a stepping stone to the Presidency in 1976.

"I have no intention of being a candidate for any political office in 1976. I say that as forcefully as I can," Ford told newsmen after arriving at his Capitol office.

Asked what if he was to assume the presidency through some misfortune during the next three years Ford said: "That is so speculative, it's such a contingency. Really I don't ... It's my firm determination ... I have no intention of running for political office in 1976."

Ford said he talked with former Vice President Agnew following the announcement last night, but did not discuss either Agnew's troubles or his future.

Ford said when he returned home at about 11 p.m., he had a message from Agnew and returned the call.

"He was very complimentary and congratulated me," Ford said. "I wished him and his family the best."

Nixon's message to Congress was brief. Hand-delivered to both houses by White House messengers, it said only, "Pursuant to the provisions of Section Two of the 25th amendment to the Constitution of the United States, I hereby nominate Gerald R. Ford of Michigan to be the Vice-President of the United States."

Ford was up at 5:15 a.m. after less than three hours sleep, following Nixon's historic announcement at the White House. He swam in his outdoor, heated pool at 6:30 a.m. as his daily custom. "I surprised the secret service agent stationed in the yard, " Ford said.

One of his first chores was to visit with Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield and Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott for a private picture taking session. "They were very nice. Mansfield was very complimentary. So was Senator Scott," he said.

Ford said he first learned that he was the nominee when Nixon telephoned him at home at 7:30 p.m. yesterday as he was preparing to leave for the White House gathering.

"He said, 'Gerry, I have some good news for you. I'm going to put Al Haig on the phone to give it to you.'" Haig is Alexander Haig, Nixon's new White House chief of staff.

Ford, 60, once the square-jawed center on the University of Michigan's depression-era football teams, was selected before a national television audience under the chandeliers of the White House East Room, and to the raucous cheers of his House colleagues and smiles of relief and approval by senators.

Ford is the first man in history to be nominated rather than elected vice president, a result of the new 25th Amendment to the Constitution. He will take office if majorities of the House and Senate vote to confirm him. Until then, Speaker Carl Albert is still the first in line to succeed the President should he vacate the office for any rea-

$5 Million Suit Over Marshland

The owner of a Corte Madera marshland has filed a $5 million suit against federal, state and local agencies, charging they have conspired to take his property without paying a fair price.

In the suit, filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court in San Francisco, Dominic Muzzi, owner of some 550 acres of marsh and tidal lands, alleged that the agencies have conspired since 1965 to undermine the value of his holdings.

He named the Town of Corte Madera, Corte Madera Redevelopment Agency, Golden Gate Bridge District and Army Corps of Engineers. Including the Army in the suit put the case in federal court.

The legal challenge was reported yesterday to the bridge district board by its attorney, Thomas M. Jenkins, who has been negotiating to buy the entire Muzzi property.

The district wants to use the marshland portion — about 250 acres — to dump dredged mud spoils from its proposed Larkspur ferry terminal. Its plan calls for filling the site so that it can become a healthy marsh again.

Jenkins told district directors Muzzi's suit came as a surprise. "I thought we had an agreement," he said referring to his negotiations with the property owner's attorneys.

The suit asserted the four agencies have conspired to block various proposals to develop the property and asked that Muzzi be paid its fair market value, which he claims is $5 million.

The bridge board, which has already authorized Jenkins to ask the federal Urban Mass Transportation Administration for authority to initiate condemnation proceedings against the properth, reaffirmed that action yesterday.

The district still hopes to

Court Rules Nixon Must Release Tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A federal appeals court has told President Nixon he has no constitutional right to keep his Watergate tapes from a grand jury unless he can prove that releasing them may harm national security.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia yesterday ordered Nixon to surrender the tapes to Chief U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica, ruling that only the courts can determine whether any part of them may be kept secret.

"To leave the proper scope and application of executive privilege to the President's sole discretion would represent a mixing, rather than a separation of executive and judicial

San Rafael Tackles Future Development

Differing viewpoints on growth policies were voiced today during San Rafael's first town meeting, called to examine the problems and future of the city.

Friendly applause from about 150 persons greeted speakers in the opening session at Terra Linda High School.

James Ring of the Citizens' Advisory Committee on Econimic Development for the general plan warned "that San Rafael is going to become a little Atherton" if business is not encouraged and the city does not support continued economic development.

Brian McCarthy, San Rafael lawyer and businessman, said "no growth is slow death" for the city.

But Julian Lifschiz took a different tack, foreshadowing disagreements over growth which will probably surface during the remainder of the day long session. He said that the citizens' advisory committee on

Threat Made To Shut Oil Lines

CAIRO (UPI) —Arab oil workers stand fully ready to use a shutdown of Arab oil supplies as a weapon against Israeli allies, Amin Noureddin, assistant secretary general of the Confederation of Arab Oil Workers said today.

"Arab oil workers will not permit allies and friends of Israel to benefit from one drop of Arab oil and will not hesitate to use all possible means to achieve this objective," Noureddin said.

He said oil workers are "fully ready to give Arab oil its effective role in the battle."

Noureddin said he has sent a cable to oil workers throughout the Arab world notifying them of ttis decision.

The confederation is a Cairo-based union which carries considerable weight among oil unions in other Arab headquarters in view of Egypt's leading role in the Arab world.

Arab oil unions met in Cairo earlier this year. They discussed proposals by some Arab leaders to cut off oil supplies to the United States and other countries which support Israel, but did not announce any decisions.

Noureddin's appeal was not intended as a call for strike action, Arab affairs experts said. It probably was designed as an expression of support for current moves by Kuwait for a conference of oil-producing nations to discuss using the "oil weapon" in the current war.

Baghdad radio meanwhile broadcast a statement by the General Federation of Iraqi Workers urging all Arab workers to use the oil weapon against Israel and its allies immediately.

The Cairo newspaper Al Gomhouriya told Arab countries today: "It is our duty to use all other (nonmilitary) weapons capable of influencing America and putting an end to its continous support of Israel, and the oil weapon is first on the list.

"There is no need to shout 'go ahead, Arabs' because American hostility has become provocative to our national and pan-Arabic feelings and we should not remain silent in face of this provocation."

The syndicate of Egyptian journalists met in an emergency session in Cairo last night and called on Arab oil-producing nations to "strike at American interests immediately."

Soybean, Corn Crops Showing Slight Drops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American farmers are gathering the biggest crop harvest in history this fall, but prospects for several key crops including corn and soybeans are down fractionally from a month ago, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday.

The report indicated that the United States will have to dip further into its already-skimpy reserves of wheat and livestock feed grains in order to meet booming export demands and expand domestic supplies of meat, poultry and milk.

The department's October crop report, however, contained a cheerful note for the future. It said heavy rains in the Great Plains, which delayed seeding of the 1974 winter wheat crop, left soil moisture supplies in that key wheat growing area plentiful as of Oct. 1. Experts added that "rapid progress" on the 1974 wheat crop, which officials hope will top this year's record, can be expected when the Plains soils dry out.

The crop report estimated the 1973 corn harvest at a record 5.763 billion bushels, some 5 million bushels below a month earlier but 210 million bushels bigger than last year and 122 million above the previous record crop in 1971.

Soybean prospects declined 1 per cent from September to 1.588 billion bushels. But that was still a record, up 24 per cent from last year and above government demand estimates.

Although corn prospects declined, the report noted grain sorghum estimates improved 2 per cent, lifting that crop to a record 999 million bushels. As a result, overall production of all livestock feed grains rose to 211 million tons, a new record and slightly above a month earlier.

With domestic and foreign demand for grains booming despite prices which have been averaging higher than ever before, experts estimate U.S. feed grain reserves, which stood at about 34 million tons this fall, may be pulled down by nearly another 3 million tons by a year from now. Wheat reserves also are expected to decline to bare-minimum levels and there is sharp dispute over how far the drop will go. Government experts dispute bakery industry claims that stocks may be wiped out completely before next year's crop is harvested.

Iron In Bread To Be Doubled

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has ordered the nation's bakeries to double the iron content of white bread beginning in April, 1974.

A spokesman said yesterday the agency was issuing the order because research indicated Americans are not getting enough iron in their diet. The decision came after three years of study.

The order drew immediate criticism by some doctors as a dangerous human experiment.

Dr. William H. Crosby, chief of hematology at the Scripps Clinic in La Jolla, said there has been "absolutely no work done" to demonstrate that more iron in bread would be safe or effective.

Crosby said excessive iron can cause cirrhosis of the liver and pancreas, diabetes, heart failure and impotence in males.

Dr. Margaret Ann Krikker of Albany, N.Y., a general practitioner who has treated iron-related disorders and who helped circulate a petition against the proposal signed by more than 100 doctors, told UPI:

"This is an experiment, in my view an irresponsible experiment, unprecedented in the history of mankind ... I predict a very significant portion of the population will shave an iron overload in 10 years."

Dr. Alexander Schmidt, FDA commissioner, told UPI he realized there was "legitimate concern" from physicians but added: "As people's eating habits change, a significant number of people in the United States are getting less and less iron and becoming anemic."

War Limiting Powers Bill Sent To Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Congress has completed action on legislation that imposes a 90-day limit on unauthorized presidential war-making powers. The bill was sent to the White House where President Nixon was expected to veto it.

The House passed the bill yesterday on a 238 to 123 vote, despite veto predictions from Republican Leader Gerald Ford —now the vice presidential nominee—and Peter Freylinghuesen, R-N.J.

The vote was three short of the two-thirds majority necessary to override a presidential veto among those casting ballots Friday, but the total of 238 ayes was far less than two-thirds of the entire House.

The Senate earlier had given the bill a 75-20 margin, well above the number needed for an override.

Congress has failed on seven previous attempts this year to override Nixon's vetos.

The bill, largely a reaction to presidentially-ordered Indochina operations without a declaration of war, sets a limit of 60 days on military involvement without congressional sanction, and gives the President 30 more days on a simple declaration.

It also gives Congress the right to order the troops out before the 60 days are up by a simple concurrent resolution not subject to veto, and it makes such a war automatically illegal if Congress fails to act.

Agnew Case Prosecutor 'Frightened'

BALTIMORE (UPI) —Maryland's federal prosecutor says he was "scared" and "frightened" when he first learned Spiro T. Agnew might be involved on the wrong side of a now-historic political corruption investigation.

"I was scared. I was frightened. It seemed like an unbelievable prospect," U.S. Attorney George Beall said yesterday, two days after Agnew resigned the vice presidency and pleaded no contest to a negotiated tax evasion charge.

"As the evidence firmed up, the fear subsided because from our standpoint, we became persuaded our obligation was to the nation's system of justice," Beall said.

The boyish-looking prosecutor, 36, a Nixon appointee and brother of Sen. J. Glenn Beall, R-Md., showed relief that the four-month Agnew investigation was over.

MORE TALKATIVE

He was more talkative, smiled with ease and was back on friendly terms with reporters after a necessary period of silence.

"I'm truly relieved," he said. "The entire proceeding has been one that was not a source of personal satisfaction for me. This case, with its unique impact on the country and the individuals concerned, was one of high emotion and sometimes excruciating discomfort.

"But our responsibility through it all has been to put personal considerations aside as much as humanly possible and enforce the law with firmness and even-handedness."

Beall said he notified attorney General Elliot L. Richardson immediately when Agnew's involvement became clear.

IN JUNE

"The first indication Agnew was involved came shortly before a June 12th meeting with the attorney general. A few days earlier we had gotten the first clouded suggestion that it might eventually involve the vice president," he said.

"In late June the possibility became a probability. I think my initial feeling was one of initial skepticism and even stronger than that, wishful disbelief," Beall said.

"We were in the midst of Watergate, the country was confronted with that awful problem and I couldn't help think what impact this investigation would have on the country and national interest."

Beall gave much of the credit for the investigation's smooth running and swift conclusion to Richardson:

"The attorney general was a tremendous source for the strength during the entire investigation. He was personally involved every step of the way," Beall said.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Last Resort

SANGATTE, France (UPI) — Rescuers said today they would use explosives only as a last resort to free six or seven seamen trapped more than 50 hours within the steel hull of a capsized French dredge.

Throughout the rescue operations the trapped men have pounded periodically against the hull but rescuers feared the men had died when the pounding slackened Friday afternoon.

Operations continued in an effort to cut a hole in the thick steel plating of the Cap de la Hague and free the men trapped inside when the dredge overturned Thursday in rough channel waters.

Wants Testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., wants the Senate Watergate committee to hear from the former chief aide to J. Edgar Hoover about FBI intelligence activities during the 1972 presidential campaign.

Weicker formally requested the committee yesterday to call William C. Sullivan, who headed the FBI's intelligence arm for nine years and later served as right hand man to the late FBI director.

Not Harmless

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A former national mental health drug researcher says marijuana is not only harmless but less addictive than coffee.

Dr. Louis Lemberger, a pharmacologist who studied marijuana, drug abuse and amphetamines as a staff member of the National Institute of Mental Health, said the week produces no ill effects on the bodies of frequent users.

"The person who goes without his morning cup of coffee has withdrawal symptoms all day," Lemberger told a luncheon of physicians Thursday. "Marijuana has no withdrawal."

Volunteers Forces

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — President Idi Amin today volunteered to join the Ugandan forces being sent to the Middle East to fight for the Arabs, a government spokesman said.

Defense Minister Maj. Gen. Francis Nyangweso and Armed Forces Chief of Staff Brig. Gen. Ali Fadhul have also volunteered for the force, the spokesman said.

14-Hour Attack

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist forces mounted a 14-hour shelling and ground attack west of the old imperial capital of Hue and overran an 80-man regional militia outpost southeast of the city, military reports said today.

The high command said two paratroopers were killed today and 19 wounded in the shelling and ground assault nine miles west of Hue on an airborne position near the unit's headquarters, formerly an American base maned Sally. A government spokesman said the position was hit by 50 rounds of 82mm mortars.

Forty-five minutes after the shelling ended, the Communists launched a ground attack but were repulsed, he said.

Cambodian Talks

Threat Made To Shut Oil Lines

CAIRO (UPI) —Arab oil workers stand fully ready to use a shutdown of Arab oil supplies as a weapon against Israeli allies, Amin Noureddin, assistant secretary general of the Confederation of Arab Oil Workers said today.

"Arab oil workers will not permit allies and friends of Israel to benefit from one drop of Arab oil and will not hesitate to use all possible means to achieve this objective," Noureddin said.

He said oil workers are "fully ready to give Arab oil its effective role in the battle."

Noureddin said he has sent a cable to oil workers throughout the Arab world notifying them of ttis decision.

The confederation is a Cairo-based union which carries considerable weight among oil unions in other Arab headquarters in view of Egypt's leading role in the Arab world.

Arab oil unions met in Cairo earlier this year. They discussed proposals by some Arab leaders to cut off oil supplies to the United States and other countries which support Israel, but did not announce any decisions.

Noureddin's appeal was not intended as a call for strike action, Arab affairs experts said. It probably was designed as an expression of support for current moves by Kuwait for a conference of oil-producing nations to discuss using the "oil weapon" in the current war.

Baghdad radio meanwhile broadcast a statement by the General Federation of Iraqi Workers urging all Arab workers to use the oil weapon against Israel and its allies immediately.

The Cairo newspaper Al Gomhouriya told Arab countries today: "It is our duty to use all other (nonmilitary) weapons capable of influencing America and putting an end to its continous support of Israel, and the oil weapon is first on the list.

"There is no need to shout 'go ahead, Arabs' because American hostility has become provocative to our national and pan-Arabic feelings and we should not remain silent in face of this provocation."

The syndicate of Egyptian journalists met in an emergency session in Cairo last night and called on Arab oil-producing nations to "strike at American interests immediately."

Soybean, Corn Crops Showing Slight Drops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American farmers are gathering the biggest crop harvest in history this fall, but prospects for several key crops including corn and soybeans are down fractionally from a month ago, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday.

The report indicated that the United States will have to dip further into its already-skimpy reserves of wheat and livestock feed grains in order to meet booming export demands and expand domestic supplies of meat, poultry and milk.

The department's October crop report, however, contained a cheerful note for the future. It said heavy rains in the Great Plains, which delayed seeding of the 1974 winter wheat crop, left soil moisture supplies in that key wheat growing area plentiful as of Oct. 1. Experts added that "rapid progress" on the 1974 wheat crop, which officials hope will top this year's record, can be expected when the Plains soils dry out.

The crop report estimated the 1973 corn harvest at a record 5.763 billion bushels, some 5 million bushels below a month earlier but 210 million bushels bigger than last year and 122 million above the previous record crop in 1971.

Spring wheat prospects declined slightly during the month, but left the overall wheat harvest estimated at a record 1,726,805,000 bushels compared with 1,727,485,000 bushels a month earlier and 1.545 billion bushels last year.

Soybean prospects declined 1 per cent from September to 1.588 billion bushels. But that was still a record, up 24 per cent from last year and above government demand estimates.

Although corn prospects declined, the report noted grain sorghum estimates improved 2 per cent, lifting that crop to a record 999 million bushels. As a result, overall production of all livestock feed grains rose to 211 million tons, a new record and slightly above a month earlier.

Festive Air Prevails In Historic East Room For Announcement

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The elegant East Room of the White House erupted with cheers and wild applause last night as President Nixon announced his choice of House Leader Gerald R. Ford to be the 40th vice president of the United States.

Even before Nixon got the name out, when the President came to the words "25 years in the House," government dignitaries, senators and congressmen who were present began prolonged applause.

Under the ballroom chandeliers, amid Marine musicians and full-length portraits of George and Martha Washington, Spiro T. Agnew suddenly was a forgotten man.

Early that morning a smiling president had flown back to Washington from Camp David, Md., had gathered his aides and sworn them to secrecy. He met in relays with prominent figures including Ford, all the time building suspense. Early in the day Ford was told by Nixon that he was among a few being given priority consideration.

A BEAMING COUPLE — House Republican Leader Gerald Ford and his wife, Betty, share the big moment after President Nixon selected him the vice president designate. The announcement came last night in the White House's historic East Room. (UPI Telephoto)

As the hours went by, Ford got more than an inkling he was the choice. He went home, took a swim and dressed in a striped blue suit, pale blue shirt and a tie patterned with U.S. emblems.

Betty, the red-haired Powers model he married before coming to Congress, was still casually attired in slacks, and he teased her about putting on a dress and combing her hair.

At 7:30 p.m. EDT the phone rang. Ford picked it up and heard the President say: "Al has something to tell you."

Then the President's staff chief, Alexander M. Haig, came on the line and informed him of the choice.

Mrs. Ford was on another line with her son, Michael, 24, a seminary student in Boston, who had called to ask about "the rumors."

She hung up quickly to listen in on the call from the White House switchboard.

When Ford arrived, the coongressional leaders had gathered in the Green Room, where they, too, were given the word by Haig. They trooped into the East Room. The Marine Band struck up "Hail to the Chief," and in walked the President and Mrs. Nixon.

After the announcement and tumultuous response, the Nixons and Fords went to the Blue Room, where the guests filed through to offer congratulations. Drinks were passed. The Nixons stayed long to chat with the guests.

As Ford and his wife left by the North Portico, he obligingly kissed her several times for the cameras.

"I've always been proud of Gerry," Mrs. Ford said. "I know it's going to be very demanding."

Then they stepped into the long black vice presidential limousine, and for the first time, as they drove home, they were followed by an open car full of Secret Servicemen.

Agnew To Give Talk On Monday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew was conspicously absent from last night's White House gathering where President Nixon named House Republican leader Gerald R. Ford as Agnew's successor.

A spokesman said Agnew was presumably watching the event on television from his suburban Maryland home after having asked two broadcast networks for time to make a speech of his own on Monday night.

NBC said it would give Agnew television time at 7:30 p.m. EDT Monday and CBS said Agnew would be on its radio network at 8 p.m.

ABC was not contacted yesterday.

Agnew's press secretary J. Marsh Thomson said he had not seen the former vice president all day Friday. Thomson said Nixon's choice of Ford was "fine, just fine," but emphasized he was speaking only for himself.

Developers To Ask Full Plan Again

Developers of the on-again, off-again Madera del Presidio housing development in Corte Madera have withdrawn their plan for a smaller project and will ask the town council Monday to reapprove the project's original master plan.

In a letter to the council, J. Dan Schuhmann Jr., administrator for the developer, Cal-West Communities Inc. withdrew the firm's proposal to reduce the project from 528 to 365 townhouses. The development is planned for 90 acres south of the Koch luggage plant.

Original plans were approved by the council but were halted by a citizens' suit last January. Plans for the project's first phase, 128 townhouses, were then resubmitted and approved by the town planning commission in August.

A public hearing before the town council on the first phase was scheduled for Oct. 1 but developer's attorneys halted that hearing by presenting town officials with a court order forbidding any discussion of a tentative map of the development until after a court appearance to justify such a hearing.

At that time, an attorney for the developer told the Independent-Journal the council's failure to act on the project constituted approval. He referred to delays and litigation on the tentative map filed April 2.

Town Atty. Albert Bianchi, who obtained a reversal of the order barring discussion from Superior Court Judge E. Warren McGuire on Tuesday, said in a letter to Town Mgr. Ronald E. Bartels that the developer's request to withdraw the smaller plan would negate McGuire's ruling.

An environmental impact report on the project was rejected by the council Oct. 1 because it applied to the original 528-unit project and not to the reduced 365-unit plan.

In the letter, Bianchi said that, because the environmental report was rejected, there is no basis for the town to act to approve the original plan.

The attorney went on to recommend that the council should rescind both approval of the planned unit development of the original plan and the tentative map of the project's first phase.

Bianchi said it would then be up to the developer to decide whether to resubmit additional applications for the project.

Leaders Of Beauty Contest File Suit

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Miss Sepia American Beauty Contest and its director filed a $3 million damage suit in federal court Friday, charging that the motion picture "The Landlord," which featured the late actress Diana Sands as Miss Sepia of 1957, degraded the contest..

The plaintiffs said they were subjected to "embarrassment and ridicule" as a result of the film. The suit charged the character portrayed by Miss Sands was depicted as a "woman of easy virtue" and the contest and its trophy were degraded by the depiction of one character converting the trophy into a lamp.

Festive Air Prevails In Historic East Room For Announcement

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The elegant East Room of the White House erupted with cheers and wild applause last night as President Nixon announced his choice of House Leader Gerald R. Ford to be the 40th vice president of the United States.

Even before Nixon got the name out, when the President came to the words "25 years in the House," government dignitaries, senators and congressmen who were present began prolonged applause.

Under the ballroom chandeliers, amid Marine musicians and full-length portraits of George and Martha Washington, Spiro T. Agnew suddenly was a forgotten man.

Early that morning a smiling president had flown back to Washington from Camp David, Md., had gathered his aides and sworn them to secrecy. He met in relays with prominent figures including Ford, all the time building suspense. Early in the day Ford was told by Nixon that he was among a few being given priority consideration.

As the hours went by, Ford got more than an inkling he was the choice. He went home, took a swim and dressed in a striped blue suit, pale blue shirt and a tie patterned with U.S. emblems.

Betty, the red-haired Powers model he married before coming to Congress, was still casually attired in slacks, and he teased her about putting on a dress and combing her hair.

At 7:30 p.m. EDT the phone rang. Ford picked it up and heard the President say: "Al has something to tell you."

Then the President's staff chief, Alexander M. Haig, came on the line and informed him of the choice.

Mrs. Ford was on another line with her son, Michael, 24, a seminary student in Boston, who had called to ask about "the rumors."

She hung up quickly to listen in on the call from the White House switchboard.

A BEAMING COUPLE — House Republican Leader Gerald Ford and his wife, Betty, share the big moment after President Nixon selected him the vice president designate. The announcement came last night in the White House's historic East Room. (UPI Telephoto)

When Ford arrived, the congressional leaders had gathered in the Green Room, where they, too, were given the word by Haig. They trooped into the East Room. The Marine Band struck up "Hail to the Chief," and in walked the President and Mrs. Nixon.

After the announcement and tumultuous response, the Nixons and Fords went to the Blue Room, where the guests filed through to offer congratulations. Drinks were passed. The Nixons stayed long to chat with the guests.

As Ford and his wife left by the North Portico, he obligingly kissed her several times for the cameras.

"I've always been proud of Gerry," Mrs. Ford said. "I know it's going to be very demanding."

Then they stepped into the long black vice presidential limousine, and for the first time, as they drove home, they were followed by an open car full of Secret Servicemen.

Agnew To Give Talk On Monday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew was conspicously absent from last night's White House gathering where President Nixon named House Republican leader Gerald R. Ford as Agnew's successor.

A spokesman said Agnew was presumably watching the event on television from his suburban Maryland home after having asked two broadcast networks for time to make a speech of his own on Monday night.

NBC said it would give Agnew television time at 7:30 p.m. EDT Monday and CBS said Agnew would be on its radio network at 8 p.m.

ABC was not contacted yesterday.

Agnew's press secretary J. Marsh Thomson said he had not seen the former vice president all day Friday. Thomson said Nixon's choice of Ford was "fine, just fine," but emphasized he was speaking only for himself.

Bar Firebombed; Damage Not Serious

The Sundance Saloon in Novato was firebombed early today, but the owner managed to douse flames before they could cause serious damage.

Police said owner Russell Grabb was inside the bar at 5420 Redwood Highway when he heard an explosion outside at 12:12 a.m. He opened the door to find flames licking at the front of the building. He called firemen but was able to extinguish the blaze before they arrived.

Grabb told officers he had kicked two men out of the bar earlier for boisterous behavior which was disturbing other customers.

When Grabb threatened to call police, one of the men said that, if he were arrested, he would return to kill the bar owner.

Police said they found the remains of what appeared to be a Molotov cocktail, a glass jar containing a liquid, probably gasoline.

Nixon's insistence that his political mandate and the Constitution give him an absolute right to keep anything he chooses secret, the court said, "are invitations to refashion the Constitution, and we reject them."

Anticipating a certain White House appeal to the Supreme Court, the court stayed its order directing Nixon to surrender the tapes for five days.

The decision was issued in the name of all seven judges who heard the historic case. But two of them, Nixon appointees George MacKinnon and Malcolm Wilkey, attached separate opinions totalling 144 pages disagreeing strongly with the court's reasoning in reaching its decision.

The court urged Nixon and Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox —who is seeking tape recordings of nine Nixon conversations with his aides — to try again to reach agreement about which portions should go to the grand jury. Previous efforts at out-of-court settlement collapsed three weeks ago.

Should renewed efforts fail, the court said, Nixon must cooperate with Sirica—who ruled Aug. 26 that Nixon must submit the tapes to him for review. The appeals court said Nixon "may decline to transmit that portion of the material" in the tapes that "relates to national defense or foreign relations."

But it said Cox would be entitled to "inspect" the President's claim of secrecy for such material and that Sirica would decide whether the claim were valid.

A spokesman for Cox said he was "very pleased with the decision" and agreed that another attempt at negotiations should be made.

In Cairo a loud explosion was heard throughout the city at early Saturday afternoon. A few seconds later an air raid alert sounded.

The alert lasted four minutes, but no further explosions were heard. Traffic resumed normally afterward. No communque was issued to explain the explosion.

Up until late afternoon there were no announcements by the Egyptian military command about the fighting in the Sinai desert.

Israeli military spokesmen, however, reported continued tank sparring along the southern front with Egypt, whose army launched no extensive attacks to draw attention away from the northern front and Israel's first advance on an Arab capital.

The Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said Egyptian troops in Sinai are not seeking at the moment to win territory but to "inflict the greatest possible losses on Israeli troops."

The newspaper reflects Egyptian government thinking. Its comment was the first semiofficial indication of current Egyptian strategy in the two front war against Israel.

Egypt today followed the example of Syria and introduced a "war tax" on high income workers and luxuries.

More Rain In Already Deluged Area

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Showers dumped more rain today over flood-ravaged Texas and Oklahoma, and a spokesman for Oklahoma's govvernor said "the disaster may be much worse than feared."

At least 11 persons have died in the flooding. Authorities expectt to find more bodies.

Rain fell today along a stationary front curling across the nation from Michigan to Texas. Flash flood warnings were issued for southern Texas.

Rescue workers sloshed through rain and mud searching for at least eight persons still missing in Oklahoma.

"We are almost certain one of these will be found dead," said Ed Hardy, press aide to Gov. David Hall. He said there was "growing danger that the disaster may be much worse than feared."

National Guardsmen and police at Enid, Okla., counted seven persons dead in flooding triggered by 15.68 inches of rain Wednesday night and Thursday.

A pest control company reported the loss of 100 canisters of an insecticide. Police warned the canisters could explode and were poisonous.

Damage estimates in Enid ranged up to $10 million.

Flooding in Texas has taken the lives of at least four persons, three of them children. More than one inch of rain pounded Mineral Wells, Tex., and Corpus Christi, Tex., Wednesday night.

Gov. J. J. Exon of Nebraska said flood damage to public facilities alone in the state had passed the $3 million mark. He said he would ask President Nixon to declare an emergency.

FORD

The only questiion remaining today appeared to be when Ford's confirmation would occur. The 25th Amendment establishes no time limit and, although initial congressional reaction was highly favorable, some members were calling for a painstaking, thorough inquiry of Ford's background—to establish a precedent for the future, if nothing else.

Smiling and drenched with sweat after the East Room announcement, Ford told reporters, "I have no intentions of running for president or vice president" in 1976.

But presidential counselor Melvin R. Laird, when asked if Ford was presidential material, said, "You bet. He's qualified to be president. I would expect him to run."

Ford, from Grand Rapids, Mich., is a 25-year veteran of Congress and has been the House Republican Leader since 1963. He has been an unswerving and diligent worker for the President's major congressional programs. He played a major role in recent months in keeping Republican loyalists and Democratic conservatives together to sustain Presidential vetoes.

Nixon, in announcing his choice, said Ford had "been unwaivering in his support for the policies that brought peace with honor for America in Vietnam and in support of a policy for a strong national defense for this country, which is so essential if we are to have peace in the world."

He said Ford "is a man who, if the responsibilities of the great office that I hold should fall upon him, as has been the case with eight vice presidents in our history, we could all say, the leadership of America is in good hands."

The President said Ford met three criteria he had set for his choice—he was qualified to be president, shared Nixon's main views and could work with both parties in Congress. He urged Congress to move "expeditiously" on the nomination. Citing economic problems and dangers in the Middle East, he urged the nation to "turn away from the obsessions of the past" —an apparent reference to Watergate—and go on to "a new beginning."

Ford said he was "extremely grateful and I am terribly humble."

"I hope I have some assets that might be helpful in working with the Congress in doing what I can throughout our country to make America a United America."

Congressional reaction to Ford's nomination was overwhelmingly approving. Conservatives like Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., and liberals like Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said they were happy with the choice and would vote for Ford.

Chairman Howard Cannon, D-Nev., of the Senate Rules Committee and Peter Rodino, R-N.J., of the House Judiciary Committee both pledged thorough and painstaking hearings and a staff investigation.

There were expressions of relief that President Nixon had not chosen anyone controversial, like former Texas Gov. John Connally. Said Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio: "John Connally would have been the bloddiest battle since Gettysburg."

Bar Firebombed; Damage Not Serious

The Sundance Saloon in Novato was firebombed early today, but the owner managed to douse flames before they could cause serious damage.

Police said owner Russell Grabb was inside the bar at 5420 Redwood Highway when he heard an explosion outside at 12:12 a.m. He opened the door to find flames licking at the front of the building. He called firemen but was able to extinguish the blaze before they arrived.

Grabb told officers he had kicked two men out of the bar earlier for boisterous behavior which was disturbing other customers.

When Grabb threatened to call police, one of the men said that, if he were arrested, he would return to kill the bar owner.

Police said they found the remains of what appeared to be a Molotov cocktail, a glass jar containing a liquid, probably gasoline.

Nixon's insistence that his political mandate and the Constitution give him an absolute right to keep anything he chooses secret, the court said, "are invitations to refashion the Constitution, and we reject them."

Anticipating a certain White House appeal to the Supreme Court, the court stayed its order directing Nixon to surrender the tapes for five days.

The decision was issued in the name of all seven judges who heard the historic case. But two of them, Nixon appointees George MacKinnon and Malcolm Wilkey, attached separate opinions totalling 144 pages disagreeing strongly with the court's reasoning in reaching its decision.

The court urged Nixon and Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox —who is seeking tape recordings of nine Nixon conversations with his aides — to try again to reach agreement about which portions should go to the grand jury. Previous efforts at out-of-court settlement collapsed three weeks ago.

Should renewed efforts fail, the court said, Nixon must cooperate with Sirica—who ruled Aug. 26 that Nixon must submit the tapes to him for review. The appeals court said Nixon "may decline to transmit that portion of the material" in the tapes that "relates to national defense or foreign relations."

But it said Cox would be entitled to "inspect" the President's claim of secrecy for such material and that Sirica would decide whether the claim were valid.

A spokesman for Cox said he was "very pleased with the decision" and agreed that another attempt at negotiations should be made.

In Cairo a loud explosion was heard throughout the city at early Saturday afternoon. A few seconds later an air raid alert sounded.

The alert lasted four minutes, but no further explosions were heard. Traffic resumed normally afterward. No communque was issued to explain the explosion.

Up until late afternoon there were no announcements by the Egyptian military command about the fighting in the Sinai desert.

Israeli military spokesmen, however, reported continued tank sparring along the southern front with Egypt, whose army launched no extensive attacks to draw attention away from the northern front and Israel's first advance on an Arab capital.

The Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said Egyptian troops in Sinai are not seeking at the moment to win territory but to "inflict the greatest possible losses on Israeli troops."

The newspaper reflects Egyptian government thinking. Its comment was the first semiofficial indication of current Egyptian strategy in the two front war against Israel.

Egypt today followed the example of Syria and introduced a "war tax" on high income workers and luxuries.

More Rain In Already Deluged Area

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Showers dumped more rain today over flood-ravaged Texas and Oklahoma, and a spokesman for Oklahoma's govvernor said "the disaster may be much worse than feared."

At least 11 persons have died in the flooding. Authorities expectt to find more bodies.

Rain fell today along a stationary front curling across the nation from Michigan to Texas. Flash flood warnings were issued for southern Texas.

Rescue workers sloshed through rain and mud searching for at least eight persons still missing in Oklahoma.

"We are almost certain one of these will be found dead," said Ed Hardy, press aide to Gov. David Hall. He said there was "growing danger that the disaster may be much worse than feared."

National Guardsmen and police at Enid, Okla., counted seven persons dead in flooding triggered by 15.68 inches of rain Wednesday night and Thursday.

A pest control company reported the loss of 100 canisters of an insecticide. Police warned the canisters could explode and were poisonous.

Damage estimates in Enid ranged up to $10 million.

Flooding in Texas has taken the lives of at least four persons, three of them children. More than one inch of rain pounded Mineral Wells, Tex., and Corpus Christi, Tex., Wednesday night.

Gov. J. J. Exon of Nebraska said flood damage to public facilities alone in the state had passed the $3 million mark. He said he would ask President Nixon to declare an emergency.

Hearing Set On Robbery

A preliminary hearing for a Tiburon man and an ex-convict recently released from San Quentin on an armed robbery charge was set for Tuesday yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

The only questiion remaining today appeared to be when Ford's confirmation would occur. The 25th Amendment establishes no time limit and, although initial congressional reaction was highly favorable, some members were calling for a painstaking, thorough inquiry of Ford's background—to establish a precedent for the future, if nothing else.

Smiling and drenched with sweat after the East Room announcement, Ford told reporters, "I have no intentions of running for president or vice president" in 1976.

But presidential counselor Melvin R. Laird, when asked if Ford was presidential material, said, "You bet. He's qualified to be president. I would expect him to run."

Ford, from Grand Rapids, Mich., is a 25-year veteran of Congress and has been the House Republican Leader since 1963. He has been an unswerving and diligent worker for the President's major congressional programs. He played a major role in recent months in keeping Republican loyalists and Democratic conservatives together to sustain Presidential vetoes.

Nixon, in announcing his choice, said Ford had "been unwaivering in his support for the policies that brought peace with honor for America in Vietnam and in support of a policy for a strong national defense for this country, which is so essential if we are to have peace in the world."

He said Ford "is a man who, if the responsibilities of the great office that I hold should fall upon him, as has been the case with eight vice presidents in our history, we could all say, the leadership of America is in good hands."

The President said Ford met three criteria he had set for his choice—he was qualified to be president, shared Nixon's main views and could work with both parties in Congress. He urged Congress to move "expeditiously" on the nomination. Citing economic problems and dangers in the Middle East, he urged the nation to "turn away from the obsessions of the past" —an apparent reference to Watergate—and go on to "a new beginning."

Ford said he was "extremely grateful and I am terribly humble."

"I hope I have some assets that might be helpful in working with the Congress in doing what I can throughout our country to make America a United America."

Congressional reaction to Ford's nomination was overwhelmingly approving. Conservatives like Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., and liberals like Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said they were happy with the choice and would vote for Ford.

Chairman Howard Cannon, D-Nev., of the Senate Rules Committee and Peter Rodino, R-N.J., of the House Judiciary Committee both pledged thorough and painstaking hearings and a staff investigation.

There were expressions of relief that President Nixon had not chosen anyone controversial, like former Texas Gov. John Connally. Said Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio: "John Connally would have been the bloddiest battle since Gettysburg."

Rights Panel To Investigate History Books Used At School

The Marin County Human Rights Commission has agreed to investigate complaints that Neil Cummins School in Corte Madera is using textbooks which misrepresent the role of the American Indian in the nation's history.

Leatrice Mikkelson, a member of the Native American Women's Action Council, told commissioners Thursday that history books used at the school are "biased and factually wrong."

Mrs. Mikkelson, a Corte Madera resident, urged that the books be changed and that teachers take special instruction on the American Indian before teaching American history.

She told the Independent-Journal that the school district also should consider using American Indians to teach the subject.

"People at the school say they recognize the problem but that's where it always seems to end," Mrs. Mikkelson said. "We want them to commit themselves to changing the books."

She called the history books "inaccurate and degrading" to the American Indian and said they foster stereotyped impressions.

Leo Zaro, Neil Cummins principal, said today the school's textbooks are supplied by the state as part of its statewide educational program.

"We have nothing different than any other school," he said. "I don't think the books are biased, but if they are it's not intentional."

"It's impossible to get one book that pleases everyone," he said, but promised to look into criticism of the textbooks once Mrs. Mikkelson completes her evaluation of their content.

The rights commission unanimously agreed Thursday to study the textbooks and determine if change is needed.

In other action, the commission decided to ask Marin cities with anticommune ordinances to scrap them as unconstitutional.

A committee to work on beautifying downtown Tiburon has been appointed by the city parks and recreation commission.

Commissioner Phyllis Ellman said the committee would work on such items as coordinating plantings in front of businesses and designing litter boxes and planters if the city should allow development of the downtown area Southern Pacific Railroad property.

She said the commission on Thursday also decided to ask the city engineer to begin planning the development of a large green playing field in Blackie's Pasture near Tiburon and Trestle Glen Boulevard, where the city is planning its Richardson Bay lineal park.

The group also set Nov. 4 for a commission walk on open space and bicycle paths in the city.

Hughes Official Confirms Nixon Fund, But No Favors

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A top official of the Howard Hughes organization confirmed yesterday that he gave $100,000 to Charles G. (Bebe) Rebozo for President Nixon's campaign fund.

Richard Danner, general manager of the Sands Hotel in Las Vegas, testified in a deposition prepared for filing in federal court that no favors were expected in return for the cash.

"Never was (there) any discussion, nor any intimation, that this was a quid pro quo, that if they would do something for us we would do something for them," Danner said. "Absolutely not."

Rebozo reportedly told investigators from the Senate Watergate Committee that he gave the money back after keeping it in safe deposit boxes for nearly three years. The committee also was said to be investigating whether any of the cash was diverted to help purchase the President's Western White House in San Clemente.

At the time, in 1969 and 1970, Hughes was seeking a favorable ruling from the Justice Department in an antitrust case. Then Att. Gen. John N. Mitchell later ruled in Hughes' favor.

Danner's description of the transaction itself agreed with the main points in an earlier deposition by Robert Maheu, Hughes' onetime chief of Nevada operations who is suing his former boss for libel.

Maheu claimed that Hughes wanted to "own the President, choose his successor, members of the Supreme Court, senators, congressmen and politicians at all levels."

Maheu, in his deposition, also referred to a "handwritten memorandum from Mr. Hughes wherein Mr. Hughes was asking me to make a million dollar payoff to a President of the United States." Lyndon B. Johnson was President at the time of the memo in 1967. Maheu did not give further details.

Danner, onetime FBI man and city manager of Miami, said in his document that he gave Rebozo, friend and confidant of the President, two payments of $50,000 each in $100 bills. One of the payments was in 1970 and the other in either 1969 or 1970, Danner testified.

McCloskey: Agnew Fine Not Enough

PALO ALTO (AP) — Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-Calif., said today that former Vice President Spiro Agnew "should have been jailed" to restore public faith in the government. He called Agnew "crookeder than a dog's hind leg.

"The vice president has been one of the most accomplished political criminals in history," McCloskey said in an interview. "He should have been jailed to prove that high government officials are treated like everyone else in the country."

U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman imposed a $10,000 fine and three years' probation on Agnew Thursday after the vice president resigned his office and pleaded no contest to one count of evading income taxes in 1972.

"Your everyday man is given one year in jail for smoking marijuana," McCloskey said, "but the man holding the second highest office in the land is not jailed for income tax evasion."

McCloskey, liberal who challenged President Nixon in the 1972 primary over the Vietnam War, said he disagreed with statements by Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson that Agnew's public humiliation was sufficient punishment.

"The higher the office of trust, the less reason to lessen the sentence," McCloskey said.

School Closings Asked—Fuel Crisis

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — Gov. Tom McCall yesterday asked all Oregon elementary and secondary schools to close from Dec. 14 to Jan. 14 to conserve electricity and heating fuel.

The governor's request would extend the normal school Christmas holiday from an average of seven school days to about 20 school days.

The move was the latest in McCall's continuing efforts to conserve power in the face of a critical Northwest shortage expected this winter.

With reservoirs which provide water for the hydorelectric generators that supply most of the region's electricty at near record low levels, the Northwest faces possible brownouts, spotty blackouts or wholesale industrial closures.

In August, Bonneville Power Administration, the federal agency which coordinates the Northwest power supply, called for a 7.5 per cent reduction in power use. Last month it said usage had been 6 per cent below predicted levels, falling somewhere short of the hoped for savings.

McCall earlier had ordered hot water faucet handles removed from sinks in state office buildings, turned off every other light along state highways and issued a ban on outdoor decorative and advertising lighting.

Yesterday, McCall said Dr. Dale Parnell, state superintendent of public instruction, agreed with his proposal and will ask school boards throughout the state to comply with the suggestion.

School districts are not required by law to comply with the governor's suggestion, but McCall's office said it is hoped all districts would do so.

McCall was told by Seaside, Ore., School District Superintendent Charles E. Smith, who offered the suggestion, that the mid-December to mid-January period is the highest fuel and electricity consumption period of the year.

The extended closure would force school districts to move the end of the school year to late June or to reduce the number of days for spring vacations to meet the legal requirement for a 175 day school year.

The governor's office said an extension of the school year might require some contract negotiations with teachers in some districts since some teacher contracts end with the close of the school year. His office said, however, that no difficulty is expected in any such renegotiation.

Black Canyon Area Annexed

The Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission has approved annexation of the Black Canyon area to the City of San Rafael.

According to commission officials, the annexation included the city's Harry A. Barbier Park on the San Pedro Ridge and several smaller holdings.

There was no protest to the annexation application which was approved unanimously Wednesday by the commission.

Novato Hostess Club To Observe 10 Years Of Active Civic Service

By DOROTHY NEWELL

Thursday will be a big day for some 130 women who are members of the Novato Hostess Club. That's their 10th anniversary as a club, and Mayor Fred F. Ruegg has proclaimed it Novato Hostess Club Day.

Members will have a luncheon celebration at noon at the Alvarado Inn in Ignacio.

"Friendship Through Service and Fun" is the club's slogan, president Mrs. Jerry Gardner said, and through the past decade the group has managed to donate over $5,000 to community projects.

They've raised the $5,235 from fashion shows, card parties, rummage sales, luncheons and running a booth at Novato's Western Weekend.

The money was donated to needy families, the London House Rest Home, Novato parks, Novato Little League and Babe Ruth League, Novato High School Band, a veterans' memorial plaque, cystic fibrosis, drug abuse pamphlets, Novato Boys Club, Novato Choraliers, Novato Christmas, nativity scene, Sinaloa Junior High School reading clinic, the Hawaiian trip for autistic children and to an injured Novato football player and student.

The club's largest donation came in 1968 when members sold tickets and raised $1,581.46 for the Novato Civic Foundation.

Service projects for these active Novato women have included making lap robes for the London House Rest Home, Christmas packages for men serving in Vietnam, making cookies since 1965 for volunteers giving blood in Novato to the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, giving Christmas trees to the cottages at Sunny Hills and Hanna Boys Center in Sonoma, muu muus for Marin Aid to Retarded Children, serving as volunteers at the special education classes at Lu Sutton School and giving Easter baskets to needy children in Novato.

The club members donated household items, food and clothing to flood victims in 1965, and planted all the ivy around Gerner Park near the library. They also served the refreshments at the Trash Bash in 1971.

The club is a founding member of the Novato Civic Foundation, which helps to obtain parks and landscape them. The club members are also members of the Novato Chamber of Commerce and Western Weekend, Inc. Mrs. Lynn Scott of the Marin Hostess Service is club sponsor.

For the past 10 years the members have emphasized the service part of their slogan and managed to have fun doing it.

The No-Furniture Look In Decorating

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's a trend to the no-furniture look in decorating. It is part of the search for a natural environment to escape tensions of everyday living.

A no-furniture pad may resemble a carpeted grotto that uses spun nylon on everything — from shag rugs to movable mounds that become chairs, couches and even tables.

Some decorators call such a scene a modern caveman's castle. The movable mounds — chairs and such — are made of nylon stuffed with soft plastic pellets or shredded plastic foam.

Joe Brinskele of Novato was best man and ushers were Ken Carter and Donovan Johnston of San Rafael, Richard Neilsen of San Anselmo, and Tom Fountain, brother of the bride.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the Non-Commissioned Officers Club at Hamilton Air Force Base.

The bride was graduated from St. Vincent's High School in Petaluma. She is employed at Disco in San Rafael as a secretary. She is the granddaughter of Carl Blank of Ipswich, S. D., who attended the wedding.

Symphony Conductor To Present Lecture Series

Marin Symphony conductor Sandor Salgo is giving a series of lectures beginning Oct. 24 on Wednesdays at 1 p.m. in the Dominican College Library.

The series is sponsored by the Marinymphony Association and has the dual purpose of increasing the enjoyment of symphony audiences and training a group of persons to become docents.

Docents will be expected to give at least 20 hours per year in classrooms and before groups explaining specific programs of the orchestra. Those wishing to audit the course will have no obligation.

An extra workshop will be given each week for docents, directed toward in depth analysis of the previous lecture in the hopes of developing further understanding of the program and to better the approach toward teaching.

Stanford Doctor Wins Arthritis Fellowship

Joan Press of the Stanford University School of Medicine is the recipient of the Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority International Arthritis Research Fellowship.

Members of the Marin Chapter, Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority Alumnae, helped raise funds for the $7,500 fellowship, which is presented through the Northern California Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation.

Dr. Press will investigate the genetic control of the immune response, according to Mrs. Robert Goldsmith of Kentfield, president of the Marin chapter of the sorority. Immunology, the study of the body's defense system, is of great concern in arthritis research because the antibodies, designed to protect the body, seem to be triggered to attach joints and connective tissue, she said.

Since 1963 the sorority has given $63,000 for research in arthritis, the nation's number one crippling disease, often affecting women between the ages of 20 and 35.

Members this year have given 10,000 hours and $15,000 to local arthritis projects.

Career Woman Blasts Myths

By PAT BALMES

"Don't put up with people who put you down," said career counselor Carol Horan, seeking to boost the self-esteem of the women who came to hear her views on careers for women at the Community Congregational Church in Tiburon Thursday.

The informal discussion was the first in a series of five consecutive Thursday morning public talks entitled "Women and Their Opportunities."

Mrs. Horan invited those interested in employment to make appointments with her in the Marin Regional Occupational Program Department at Marin County Superintendent of Schools Office. Beside counseling, guidance and testing, the office provides vocational, technical and occupational training for adults and teen-agers.

The 42-year-old mother of three children repeated some fading myths to change any negative attitudes the women might have toward themselves.

"Women are lesser, smaller, more passive, shallow, trivial, have trouble coping with men on the job. Men are incapable of dealing with women on the job. Successful women are hard and bitchy. We can't get ahead because men are against us," she intoned the old cliches.

Ignore that sort of thing and the women who allow it, she advised.

"Women should turn on any woman who deals at that level," she said. Reality is the fact that nine out of 10 women will marry. Eight out of 10 will have children. Three out of 10 will divorce. Eight out of 10 will sometime in their lives work outside the home.

"A woman today has 40 years of life ahead of her after her youngest child enters school," she pointed out.

To make high school girls realize that they need career training Mrs. Horan sets a hypothetical situation.

"What would you do if you were 40 with two children and had just been divorced?"

About married women who express guilt feelings about their duties to housework and children, Mrs. Horan said, they have to decide what is important to them.

"For everything we gain, we have to give up something," she said.

"Think of yourself as a person. Do you have to accept all of the responsibilities for household duties and children?" she said.

She told of experimenting to gauge the attitude of men in two different age groups toward helping with housework if their wives went to work full time. The young men's answers reflected that they were going to be "the man of the house" and not do housework. The men between 45 and 50 were more realistic and indicated they would help.

Carol Horan amused the gathering with an account of presenting each of her two teenage sons with a laundry basket filled with green grass and candy on Easter morning.

"I told them they could do their own laundry from now on. Sunday afternoons we all fight over who gets the washing machine," she said.

Concerning the care of young children, Mrs. Horan said that somebody should be around; it is the responsibility that we have as adults to children.

"There are guilt feelings," she acknowledged.

After being a homemaker for years, Mrs. Horan came to the decision that she was not going to stay home any longer and devote all her time and energy to her children "so that when they left I would be a bitter, dull woman.

"I was going to be more interesting to myself. It took me a long time to admit I wanted the prestige. There is a person here and I have to keep that person alive," she said. "I am having a ball and I am ambitious. These things are good for me."

The next speaker in the series will be Lee Slimmen, educational director of Marin County Catholic Social Service, who will talk about "Value Exploration — Where Am I As A Person and What Are My Priorities?"

Beside counseling, guidance and testing, the office provides vocational, technical and occupational training for adults and teen-agers.

The 42-year-old mother of three children repeated some fading myths to change any negative attitudes the women might have toward themselves.

"Women are lesser, smaller, more passive, shallow, trivial, have trouble coping with men on the job. Men are incapable of dealing with women on the job. Successful women are hard and bitchy. We can't get ahead because men are against us," she intoned the old cliches.

Ignore that sort of thing and the women who allow it, she advised.

"Women should turn on any woman who deals at that level," she said. Reality is the fact that nine out of 10 women will marry. Eight out of 10 will have children. Three out of 10 will divorce. Eight out of 10 will sometime in their lives work outside the home.

"A woman today has 40 years of life ahead of her after her youngest child enters school," she pointed out.

To make high school girls realize that they need career training Mrs. Horan sets a hypothetical situation.

"What would you do if you were 40 with two children and had just been divorced?"

About married women who express guilt feelings about their duties to housework and children, Mrs. Horan said, they have to decide what is important to them.

"For everything we gain, we have to give up something," she said.

"Think of yourself as a person. Do you have to accept all of the responsibilities for household duties and children?" she said.

She told of experimenting to gauge the attitude of men in two different age groups toward helping with housework if their wives went to work full time. The young men's answers reflected that they were going to be "the man of the house" and not do housework. The men between 45 and 50 were more realistic and indicated they would help.

Carol Horan amused the gathering with an account of presenting each of her two teenage sons with a laundry basket filled with green grass and candy on Easter morning.

"I told them they could do their own laundry from now on. Sunday afternoons we all fight over who gets the washing machine," she said.

Concerning the care of young children, Mrs. Horan said that somebody should be around; it is the responsibility that we have as adults to children.

"There are guilt feelings," she acknowledged.

After being a homemaker for years, Mrs. Horan came to the decision that she was not going to stay home any longer and devote all her time and energy to her children "so that when they left I would be a bitter, dull woman.

"I was going to be more interesting to myself. It took me a long time to admit I wanted the prestige. There is a person here and I have to keep that person alive," she said. "I am having a ball and I am ambitious. These things are good for me."

The next speaker in the series will be Lee Slimmen, educational director of Marin County Catholic Social Service, who will talk about "Value Exploration — Where Am I As A Person and What Are My Priorities?"

Treat Blisters

Blisters on hands and heels are more than a bother, as they can cause infection if opened accidentally. Medical authorities advise prompt washing with soap and water if a blister does open. Then treat it as you would any small wound.

Club For Shy Persons A Great Idea: How Do You Start One?

RAP:

Your idea for a club for shy people is great! I hope someone organizes one in our town. I think I could talk to persons I knew had the same problem and wouldn't put me down. At least I'm willing to try. But how to get a "Shyners' Club" started? — ANOTHER SHY ONE (Male, 16)

DEAR SHY:

Talk to your school counselor. Perhaps he or she will get something going, if enough students show interest. (According to our mail from shy ones, many many young people out there are anxious to join such a club — but they lack the push to start it.) — HELEN AND SUE

P.S. Read on:

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I've tried group therapy but it's too expensive. I don't need psychiatry, but rather large shots of courage so that I can talk without feeling ridiculous.

A "Chickens Anonymous" club would be right down my alley. I finally got up nerve enough to talk to the editor of the school paper, and she is going to try getting it going. Will let you know if anything develops.

Thanks for the suggestion. — ANOTHER CHICKEN

HELEN AND SUE:

I was one of those kids who never opened his mouth — you know, big on books but no social life.

My therapy was — active involvement in our local 4-H Club. There you learn to speak in front of small groups and, because you're really interested in your projects, it isn't all that hard.

There's also a leadership conference each summer. Even the governor of our state gave up his busy time to talk to us. And the county competitions give us confidence, as we give demonstrations on various subjects.

Of course this wouldn't be for everybody, but if you join some sort of special interest club, a lot of your shyness disappears — because you're with people who understand you. — BURSTING WITH PRIDE IN MERCED COUNTY

RAP:

The problem with shyness is — it's just too hard trying to talk to someone as shy as you are. You're both afraid, so who starts? Group therapy finally opened me up, but it took a lot of years. — BEEN IN THAT CORNER

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I'm writing this with the hope of sparing the shy 18-year-old the years of suffering and misery I experienced.

When I was that age, I was extremely shy and self-conscious. Asked to recite in front of a class, I'd sometimes end in tears. Job interviews, making friends, simple conversations, all were terrifying experiences. I tried to hide my shyness by withdrawing. That I had above-average grades and was fairly attractive meant nothing.

I tried therapy, charm school, marijuana, psychiatry. Learned the causes of my shyness, but never managed to cope with it. In my early 20s I discovered alcohol, and by my late 20s I was a full-fledged alcoholic who had attempted suicide during a blackout.

I joined AA and managed to play sober for four years, but I still had the plague of shyness. Still blushed and stammered, I was still struck dumb in front of people.

Then I discovered Recovery, Inc., a non-profit self-help organization which brings togethr people in need of self-assurance: people who have fears, who are nervous, who may have compulsions or obsessions. Its methods work! For members gain confidence in themselves.

National headquarters are at 116 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill., 60603, and there are Recovery groups in almost every medium-sized town. Hope I've helped. — READER IN EDISON

Trim Excess Fullness At The Dress Waistline

By EUNICE FARMER
Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate

I haven't much of a waistline and still would love to wear those belted sheath dresses that everyone is wearing. When I belt one of these straight dresses, I look like a sack of flour because I don't have the advantage of a small waistline. Is there any way to eliminate some of the excess fullness that is at the waistline or is there any pattern that would be more flattering? — MRS. T.T.

DEAR MRS. T.T.,

There are many of us with the same problem and after searching the pattern books, I have decided there are two solutions. First, choose a pattern with a waistline seam instead of without. Usually the skirt will be semi-fitted down to the hipline, eliminating much fullness and bulk.

Secondly, there is another pattern available. It works beautifully because the body of the shirt dress is cut on the bias, enabling it to hang closer to the body which will eliminate a lot of fullness.

This pattern (Vogue 2862) is a little more difficult to execute, so don't attempt it if you are a rank beginner. I have sketched the pattern for you. Look for it in the pattern book at your local pattern counter. It can be made jacket or full length.

One of our top designers, Pauline Trigere has made such a great success in expensive clothes because she eliminates excess bulk by cutting coats, capes, and dresses on the bias. Let's try some of her tricks. This is the fun of making our own clothes.

DEAR EUNICE,

Many of the knits available today seem to be tubular instead of having selvage edges. Is this more difficult to use and what is the best way of placing the pattern? — MRS. P.S.

DEAR MRS. P.S.,

Actually, the tube knits are easier to work with because one side is not stretched out of shape.

You must check the fold edges, however. They are naturally stretched a little more than normal and also could have a permanent crease.

Change the original fold to the center of the tube. The original fold will now appear at the center. Be sure when refolding the knit that you use one of the "ribs" as a guide for even folding. Now any piece of your pattern to be cut on the fold will not have a crease and will not be out of shape.

DEAR EUNICE,

Is it possible to use elastic in the waistline of any pattern even though it originally has darts and a fitted waistband? — MRS. F.M.

DEAR MRS. F.M.,

Yes, it is possible to use elastic in the waistline of any skirt or pants pattern if you take a few extra steps.

Be sure the fabric isn't too bulky for this type of finish. Most woven fabrics look better with darts and a waistband because they look too bulky when gathered in with elastic.

Knits work beautifully with elastic. If your pattern doesn't have elastic, you will have to make the following changes. Eliminate any fitting darts. It is even better to cut the side seams with less curve at the waistline. Add the extra length at the waistline in order to double over the fabric and insert the elastic.

When purchasing the elastic, there is a wonderful elastic available called non-roll. It can be purchased in two widths, so choose the one you like best.

If you can't find the non-roll elastic, adjust the fullness evenly and then sew through the elastic and the skirt casing at four even places. Usually, stitching at the center front, center back and each side will help keep the fullness even and also help keep the elastic from rolling and twisting.

Turkey continues one of the best food buys, but many families do not want to roast a whole bird at once. Many markets feature turkeys either cut in half or in smaller parts.

Be sure the fabric isn't too bulky for this type of finish. Most woven fabrics look better with darts and a waistband because they look too bulky when gathered in with elastic.

Knits work beautifully with elastic. If your pattern doesn't have elastic, you will have to make the following changes. Eliminate any fitting darts. It is even better to cut the side seams with less curve at the waistline. Add the extra length at the waistline in order to double over the fabric and insert the elastic.

When purchasing the elastic, there is a wonderful elastic available called non-roll. It can be purchased in two widths, so choose the one you like best.

If you can't find the non-roll elastic, adjust the fullness evenly and then sew through the elastic and the skirt casing at four even places. Usually, stitching at the center front, center back and each side will help keep the fullness even and also help keep the elastic from rolling and twisting.

Turkey Remains A Best Food Buy

Turkey continues one of the best food buys, but many families do not want to roast a whole bird at once. Many markets feature turkeys either cut in half or in smaller parts.

Or, ask your butcher to halve or quarter one. Cook the amount you need at one time and keep the rest solidly frozen and tightly wrapped.

Riles, State Education Board Split On Support Of Tax Plan

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The state Board of Education, splitting with state schools chief Wilson Riles, has endorsed Gog. Ronald Reagan's tax limitation initiative on the Nov. 6. ballot.

Meeting in San Diego yesterday, the board voted 7-1 to support the measure in adopting a resolution expressing "confidence that the provisions of Prop. 1 will result in a more equitable and rational tax structure which will benefit all segments of society, including education."

Riles, school superintendent of public instruction, recently declared his opposition to the initiative, saying it could threaten the future education of California schoolchildren.

Also in San Diego, yesterday, Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. labeled the measure a "two-headed monster" which will give tax breaks to the rich and undermine California's public school system.

Brown told the California Teachers Association that if the initiative passes, "families with an annual income of $10,000 will receive an initial income tax reduction of only $4, but families with an income of $100,000 will receive a $650 tax reduction."

In Sacramento, Democratic State Chairman John L. Burton challenged Robert Brown, executive vice president of the California Taxpayers Association, to debate the tax initiative. The association is a major supporter of the measure.

Brown earlier this week offered to stand in for Reagan to debate Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, but Moretti refused Brown's challenge, Reagan earlier had declined debate challenges issued by Moretti.

A spokesman for the association had no comment on the challenge by Burto, a San Francisco assemblyman who opposes the initiative.

In Los Angeles, two decisions were rendered yesterday strengthening anti-Proposition 1 forces.

Superior Court Judge Campbell M. Lucas declined to enjoin the Los Angeles Unified School District from setting up a $23,500 "information center" to distribute data on Proposition 1. The school board previously voted 6-1 to oppose the Tax Limitation Initiative saying it would financially harm the district.

At the suggestion of the school district's attorney, Lucas ruled that all pamphlets be suubmitted to Walter Sharman, attorney for several groups who charged the school district was making illegal use of public money for partisan political purposes, at least 36 hours before they are handed out to determine their impartiality.

And Chief Administrative Officer Arthur G. Will recommended that the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors oppose the Governor's initiative because similar controls are already in effect as part of the Reagan-Moretti Tax Reform Act.

Revised Plan For Bank Is Approved

Revised plans for a new bank have been approved by the Cotati Planning Commission.

Codding Enterprises received design approval by a Crocker Bank branch Thursday after scrapping more modern bank designs that had been rejected by the commission.

Planning Director Mark Thysen said the new plan calls for a wooden exterior rather than a masonry facade and was considered more compatible with the design of other buildings in the shopping center at 500 East Cotati Avenue.

The Cotati Planning Commission also:

CHURCH — Approved plans by the Assembly of God for a new church at 810 East Cotati Avenue.

ZONING — Agreed to a plan to rezone property on Cypress Avenue Nov. 5 at 7:30 p.m.

HEARING — Set a public hearing for Oct. 25 at 7:30 p.m. on plans to allow residential uses in commercial zones.

Group Will Fight Water Bond Issue

A citizens group, The Committee to Save Marin, has been formed to work for the defeat of Measure E, the Marin Municipal Water District's bond issue to finance a water supply project. The measure will be presented to district voters Nov. 6.

Committee member Mary Conte said group members Tina Ferris, Connie Johnstone, Robert Young, Joan Seminario and Roger Panek will be available to speak before local groups.

She said the group opposes the bond issue because members believe there is no need to import water from the Russian River during dry periods in Marin.

The November bond issue will be for $7.5 million, to pay for one part of the four-part water project. But Mrs. Conte said the entire project will eventually cost $90 million, including interest, and the price tag is another reason for the group's opposition.

Other groups who oppose the measure include the Sierra Club, Marin Conservation League, Homestead Valley Association, Marin Alternative, the Las Gallinas Valley President's Council, and the Irate Taxpayers of Marin.

Judge Gives Volunteer Work Terms

Two Santa Venetia women, arrested in a drug raid at their home which reportedly netted two pounds of marijuana, have escaped jail sentences.

Jean Mira Kubicki and Lynda Rae Stefko, both 25, pleaded guilty Tuesday to misdemeanor counts of being in a place where narcotics are used.

Each was placed on a year's probation and ordered to perform 40 hours of volunteer work — Miss Stefko for the Haight-Ashbury Medical Clinic and Miss Kubicki for the Volunteer Bureau of Marin.

Three men arrested in the March 20 raid have been bound over to Marin Superior Court on a felony charge of possessing marijuana for sale. They are Jason Keith Anderson, 24; David Fremont Witty, 23, and Eric Landon Rice, 23.

Peugeot Diesel Planned For US

NEW YORK (UPI) —The French Peugeot Motor Co. has announced it will introduce a diesel powered automobile in the United States in January.

President Pierre de Montmarin of Peugeot's American subsidiary said the diesel powered model 504 has been sold in Europe for some time. The decision to introduce it in the United States was reached because of the energy crisis.

Judge Gives Ranch Hand A Stiff Order

A Marin Municipal Court judge has ordered a Valley Ford ranch hand not to set foot west of the Petaluma-Point Reyes Road.

The order was part of a sentence imposed Tuesday on Galien J.S. Kitchens, 46, by Judge David R. Baty.

Under no circumstance, Baty told Kitchens, is he to annoy Alice M. Gotterdam, 49, owner of the Gam Ranch on Fallon Road.

Kitchens was convicted of assaulting Miss Gotterdam — whom he described as his wife-to-be — and given a six-month suspended jail term on condition he spend 120 days in jail and three years' probation.

Kitchens still faces a felony count of assaulting Miss Gotterdam with a deadly weapon. He is alleged to have jumped on her Sept. 26, sending her to the hospital with broken ribs and possible internal injuries.

A preliminary hearing is set for Tuesday.

Copies Of Budget

Copies of the 1973-74 Marin County budget are available at the county auditor-controller's office at Civic Center. The document approved by supervisors last June gives a detailed description of how the county will spend $50.5 million this fiscal year.

Four Nabbed In Cocaine Haul

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Federal Drug Enforcement Administration announced yesterday the arrest of four suspects and the seizure of 1,233 grams of cocaine with a street value of $250,000.

James R. Bland, DEA regional director, named the suspects arrested at New Orleans International Airport as Girts Langins, 30, and Nancy E. Doyle, 23, La Mesa, Calif.; Douglas Jeffrey Miller, 19; and Michele Glynn, former California residents now living in New Orleans.

Bland said the cocaine was found in a suitcase in the vehicle occupied by the suspects.

Group Will Fight Water Bond Issue

A citizens group, The Committee to Save Marin, has been formed to work for the defeat of Measure E, the Marin Municipal Water District's bond issue to finance a water supply project. The measure will be presented to district voters Nov. 6.

Judge Gives Volunteer Work Terms

Two Santa Venetia women, arrested in a drug raid at their home which reportedly netted two pounds of marijuana, have escaped jail sentences.

Jean Mira Kubicki and Lynda Rae Stefko, both 25, pleaded guilty Tuesday to misdemeanor counts of being in a place where narcotics are used.

Each was placed on a year's probation and ordered to perform 40 hours of volunteer work — Miss Stefko for the Haight-Ashbury Medical Clinic and Miss Kubicki for the Volunteer Bureau of Marin.

Three men arrested in the March 20 raid have been bound over to Marin Superior Court on a felony charge of possessing marijuana for sale. They are Jason Keith Anderson, 24; David Fremont Witty, 23, and Eric Landon Rice, 23.

Peugeot Diesel Planned For US

NEW YORK (UPI) —The French Peugeot Motor Co. has announced it will introduce a diesel powered automobile in the United States in January.

President Pierre de Montmarin of Peugeot's American subsidiary said the diesel powered model 504 has been sold in Europe for some time. The decision to introduce it in the United States was reached because of the energy crisis.

Judge Gives Ranch Hand A Stiff Order

A Marin Municipal Court judge has ordered a Valley Ford ranch hand not to set foot west of the Petaluma-Point Reyes Road.

The order was part of a sentence imposed Tuesday on Galien J.S. Kitchens, 46, by Judge David R. Baty.

Under no circumstance, Baty told Kitchens, is he to annoy Alice M. Gotterdam, 49, owner of the Gam Ranch on Fallon Road.

Kitchens was convicted of assaulting Miss Gotterdam — whom he described as his wife-to-be — and given a six-month suspended jail term on condition he spend 120 days in jail and three years' probation.

Kitchens still faces a felony count of assaulting Miss Gotterdam with a deadly weapon. He is alleged to have jumped on her Sept. 26, sending her to the hospital with broken ribs and possible internal injuries.

A preliminary hearing is set for Tuesday.

Copies Of Budget

Copies of the 1973-74 Marin County budget are available at the county auditor-controller's office at Civic Center. The document approved by supervisors last June gives a detailed description of how the county will spend $50.5 million this fiscal year.

Four Nabbed In Cocaine Haul

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Federal Drug Enforcement Administration announced yesterday the arrest of four suspects and the seizure of 1,233 grams of cocaine with a street value of $250,000.

James R. Bland, DEA regional director, named the suspects arrested at New Orleans International Airport as Girts Langins, 30, and Nancy E. Doyle, 23, La Mesa, Calif.; Douglas Jeffrey Miller, 19; and Michele Glynn, former California residents now living in New Orleans.

Bland said the cocaine was found in a suitcase in the vehicle occupied by the suspects.

Gals' Bowling On Rise In Popularity

By RON LENT

Statistics show that nearly half of the 52 million bowlers in the United States are women, and the same ratio on a reduced scale applies in Marin County where half of the approximately 10,000 league and nonleague keglers are gals.

The latter figure, which represents a gradual increase since World War II, means little on face value. Its significance rests with its ramifications. In general, bowling is growing in popularity, and Marin County serves as an excellent microcosm on the female kegler issue.

The 1972 statistics show that Marin had 2,068 men and 2,042 women bowling in county leagues.

Marin County Women's Bowling Association President Ann Arnott asserts that "More women are getting into bowling than ever before." The reasons are many, but let's explore a few.

Local distaff bowlers claim that, basically, they can compete on equal footing with a man. A bowler is not limited by age or sex, because strength is not the key — techniques and skills are.

Additionally, bowling does not have to be a team sport where one individual depends on another for advancement. In recreation bowling, "You are competing only against yourself. You may shoot a 522 series one week, and then decide 'I can do better next time.' And you have only yourself to answer to if you do or don't," Mrs. Arnott continued.

Bowling popularity is also attributable to the increased recreation time and appeal to youth. People simply have more time for sports due to shorter work weeks and the commercial attention devoted to sports in general. "You see bowling on TV all the time, and kids watch a lot of TV, so you can see where they get that from.

"And the bowling houses (such as Greenbrae Lanes, Nave Lanes in Ignacio, and Country Club Bowl in San Rafael) encourage juniors and women to bowl."

The Marin County Men's Bowling Association and the Marin County Women's Bowling Association names and averages are contained in the official Blue Book. The bowling houses contact persons listed in the book and keep regulars abreast of local league activities. This is the approach used in getting the women into the houses' day leagues.

By telephoning the MCWBA members, the houses discover that the gals are interested in loop play, and the interest is further spurred by the free nursery facilities at the local bowling establishments. All three Marin houses have free nurseries.

Added enticements include time and equipment factors. Bowlers claim that the game is "not too expensive." Golf and tennis equipment can add up where competitors generally supply their own racquets, clubs, and shoes — not to mention balls.

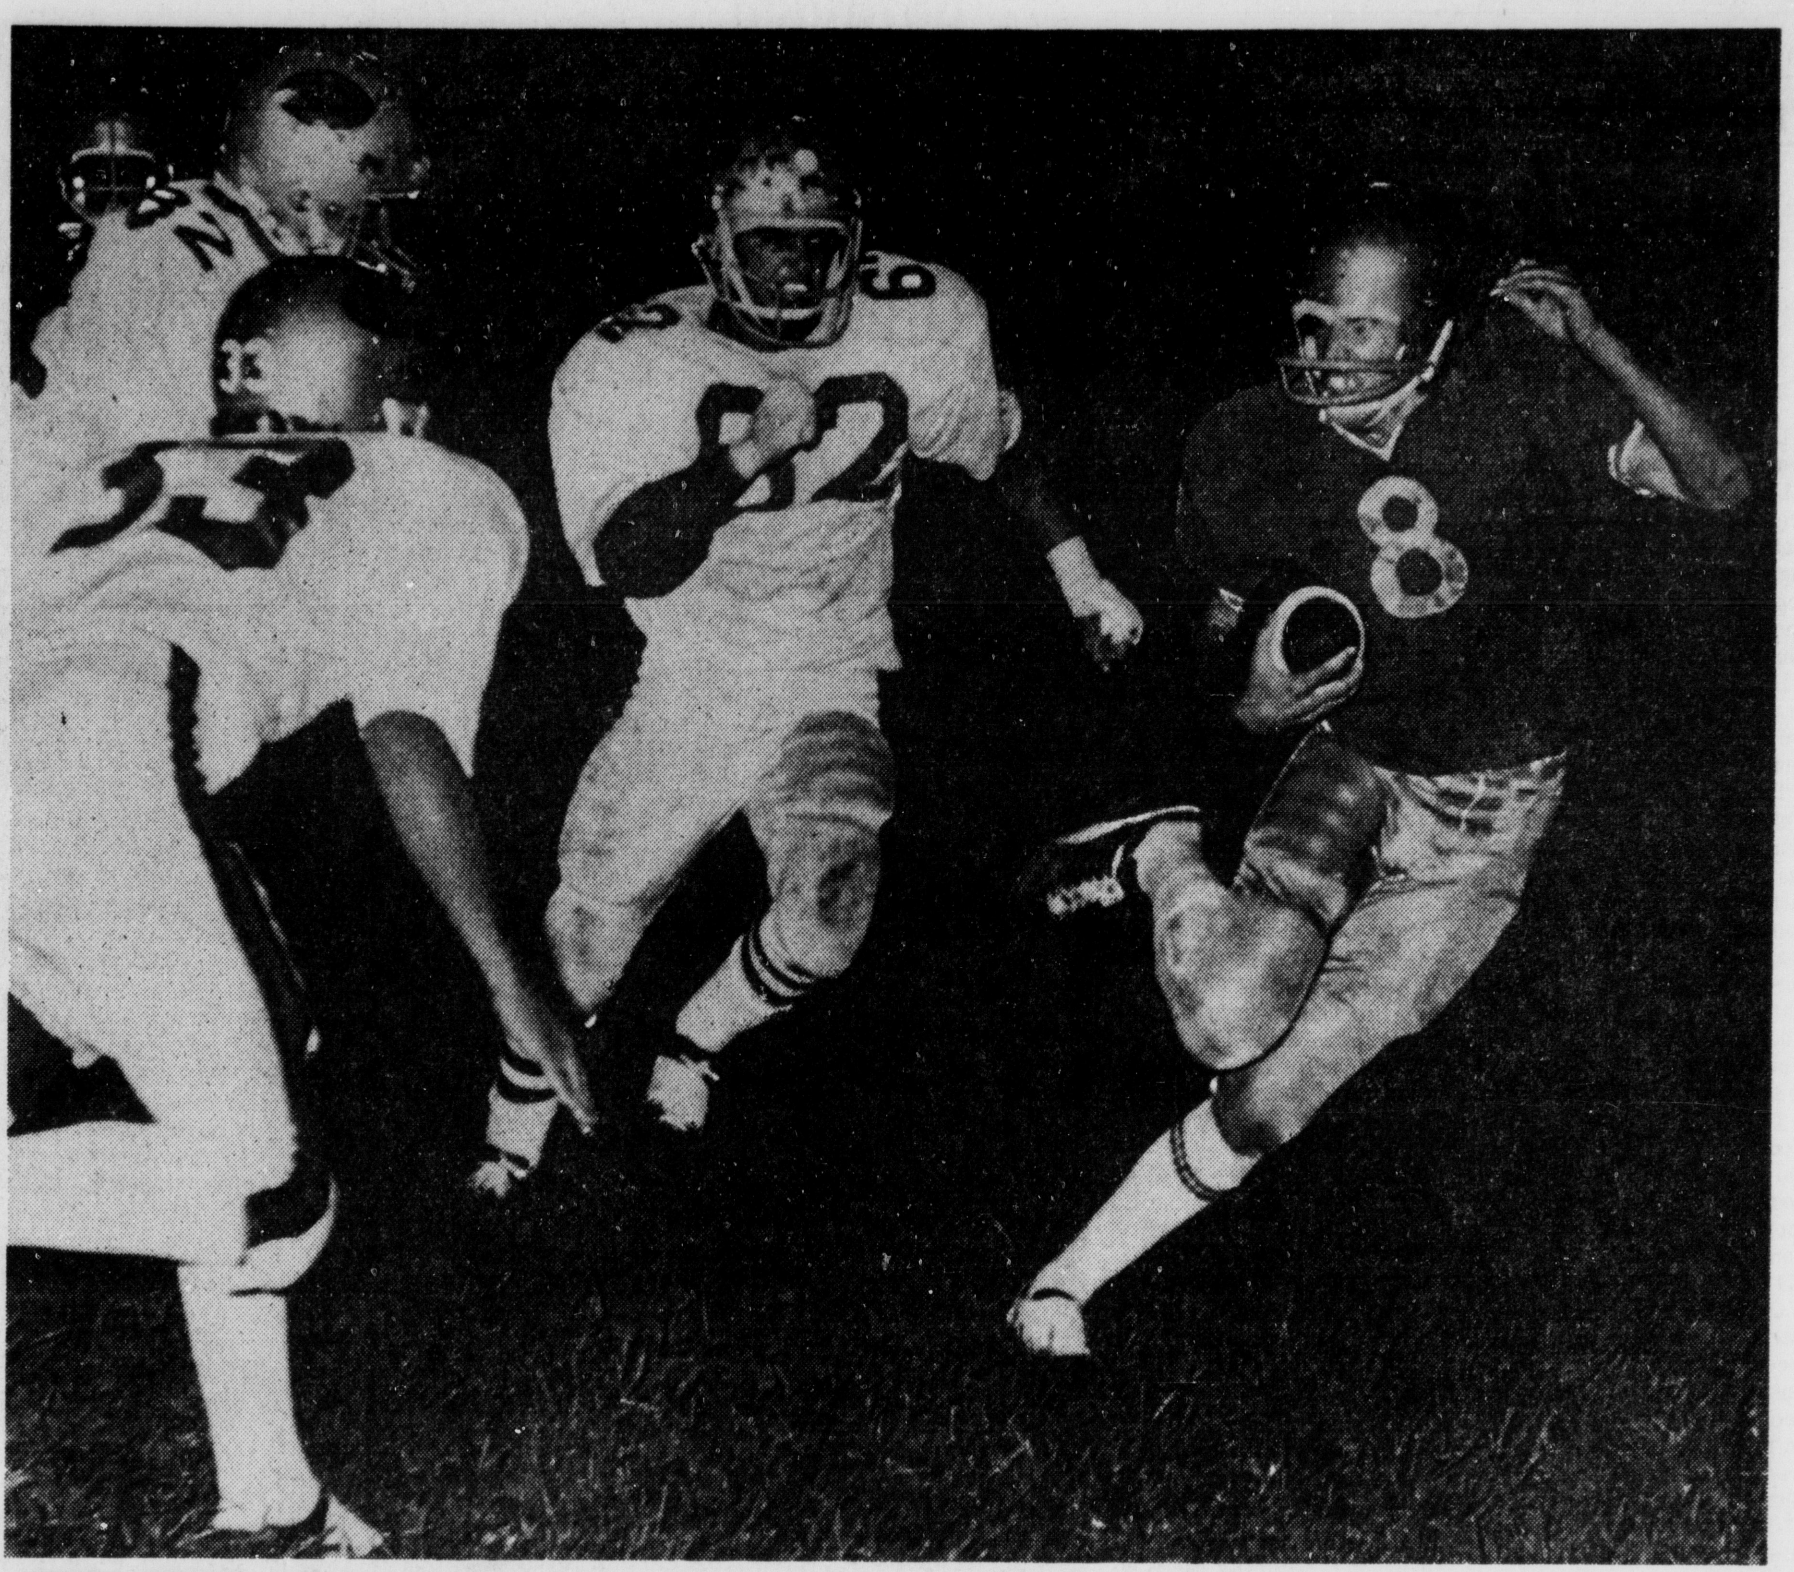
The alleys supply the balls and charge nominally for shoes. Once you get into bowling, you usually buy your own ball and shoes, bowlers say, but such purchases are not mandatory.

Regarding the time issue, the women maintain they can go out there "most any time, because it doesn't take all day. You can go out there, bowl three games, and spend as little or as much time as you want," according to the women's consensus. The women are wont to go to the alleys alone without a need for a partner as in other recreational sports — another plus.

Mrs. Arnott commented that "You don't have to go there with a friend, you just can bowl with people from your league. And you all have a common interest (bowling)."

This "interest" mushroomed after World War II and the Korean War after being an industrial sport in the 1920s where businesses conducted their own leagues and pins were handset. Media influence, most notably television, brought bowling into family living rooms starting in the 1950s, arousing U.S. citizenry interest.

The game blossomed into a family sport where the women and children could also benefit from a sport with healthy exercise. And the 208,230,000 American population as of 1972, including the 215,000 Marin inhabitants, can certainly relate to the game eminating from 19th Century Germany.



DON'T FENCE ME IN, PART 1 — Terra Linda High School's Mike Kirby (8) sought to return a first-half punt last night against Redwood, but was surrounded and eventually brought down by Mike Robinson (33), Doug MacRae (82) and Pete Massoletti (62). Hard Giant tackling prevailed throughout the game as Redwood pulled out a 6-3 victory before 3,000 fans at San Rafael High to lift its Marin County Athletic League football record to 2-0. Mets Rallying Around Quote

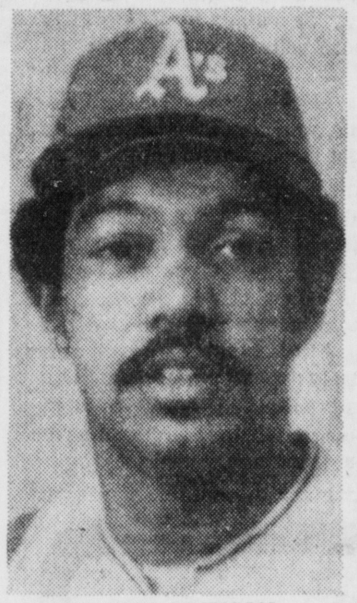
OAKLAND (UPI) — The Miami Dolphins stole the tag a long time ago, but some people are starting to call the New York Mets the "no-names," too.



REGGIE JACKSON
Prefers Reds

Reggie Jackson has made no secret of the fact that he wanted Cincinnati to win the National League pennant because "You beat them and you're beating the best."

"I want to play against guys like (Pete) Rose and (Johnny) Bench and (Tony) Perez," Jackson said. "Except for (Tom) Seaver and (Rusty) Staub, the Mets don't have any big-name players."

"Maybe they'll know who we are when we leave town," cracked Tug McGraw, the New York relief ace.

None of the A's, least of all Manager Dick Williiams, are particularvy concerned that news of the discord on the club continually keeps getting in print.

"We're arguing all year long on our ball club," Williams said. "You can't live together all year without having some friction."

Oakland's latest clubhouse "incident" occurred Wednesday with the A's blew a 4-0 lead and lost the fourth playoff game, 5-4, to Baltimore.

Reliever Rollie Fingers, who was the losing pitcher, told a reporter that (Vida) Blue has to pitch better than that with a 4-0 lead," and Blue Moon Odom overheard him.

"If you hadn't given up the homer, we'd still be out there," Odom shouted at Fingers.

"We have a club that speaks its mind," said Williams. "They're all over 21. They can speak out.

Williams isn't particularly worried about the greeting the A's may get from the fans at Shea Stadium, who acted like so many animals during the National League playoffs.

"Fans are Fans," Williams said. "They just have super fans. I think that's terrific. The interest that was shown was good for baseball —not the throwing things or going on the field —but the pure baseball interest."

"It's drilled into me all my life that the fans aren't really there," said Mets pitcher Jon Matlack. "You have to block out the crowd noise. They'll bother you as much as you let them."

Happy Seals' Fans Celebrate Upset Victory

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

It looked and sounded as though the rag-tag California Golden Seals had just won a Stanley Cup game from the Montreal Canadiens.

Programs, beer, paper cups and coins sailed onto the ice of the Coliseum-Arena last night after the Seals had beaten the Chicago Black Hawks 3-2. The skimpy crowd of 6,041 gave the Seals a standing ovation for several minutes after the final horn.

The hometown fans were merely showing their appreciation for the way the young Seals outhustled, outhit and outshot the defending Western Division champions of the National Hockey League.

Though it was only the second game of the season, it kept the Seals unbeaten and winners in their last six games over two seasons, longest streak in the NHL.

Play-making center Walt McKechnie scored what proved to be the winning goal four seconds from the end of the middle period. At that time, California led 3-1 and outshot the Hawks 28-7 over the first two periods.

Craig Patrick and Joey Johnston scored early in the opening period to give the Seals a 2-0 lead. Patrick's goal came only 11 seconds after the opening faceoff. Johnston, who also had two assists, added an unassisted tally while the Seals were shorthanded with 4:57 remain-

Aaron Sees Pitchers' Battle With Koosman As Series' Star

ATLANTA (UPI)—Home run slugger Hank Aaron says the World Series will be a pitchers' battle all the way with the Mets' Jerry Koosman turning in the star performance.

Aaron made his predictions in an article written for today's editions of the Atlanta Constitution. He said Oakland has the edge with "depth and talent," but the Mets are riding high on a winning streak and could pull a repeat of the 1969 win.

"I think this is going to be a pitchers' Series, and I have a feeling the star is going to turn out to be Jerry Koosman of the Mets," Aaron said.

"I think lefthanders can give Oakland trouble, and Koosman, in my opinion, is one of the best lefthanders in the National League."

Aaron, who ended the season only one home run short of Babe Ruth's 714 mark, said the Mets have the same enthusiasm as in 1969 "when they couldn't do much wrong."

"Personally, I don't think they have that good a club," he said. "They got hot at the right time, though, in the right division. They have a great pitching staff, but their club is not as good as Cincinnati's."

Aaron said Oakland has the edge in all-around talent.

"They have ballplayers all over the place," he said. "They're loaded with them, and they can play long ball better than the Mets."

But the slugger said he would be pulling for the Mets because they represent his league.

"And with that pitching, in a short series, they could win it," he added.

Aaron said the secret of winning "will depend on whose bullpen comes around."

"The thing that made the difference for the Mets in winning their division was Tug McGraw," he said. "He got knocked all over the place in the first half, but he was unhittable in the second half."

Aaron also showered praise on Met's pitchers Tom Seaver, Jon Matlack and George Stone and the A's Ken Holtzman, Vida Blue, and Jim Hunter.

Aaron, who was asked to throw out the opening pitch today, said he was proud to be part of the series.

"And maybe next year," he added, "we'll have something to say about it—the Braves, I mean. There's nothing I'd like better than to play in one more World Series before I hang 'em up."

Olga Ahead Of Schedule

By LARRY ELDRIDGE
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

HINGHAM, Mass. — The Soviet Union has only recently launched its bid to become a world tennis power and will need a few more years to approach that goal, but Olga Morozova's personal timetable could be a little quicker.

OLGA MOROZOVA
Russian netter

The 24-year-old Russian women's champion is already ranked 10th in the world, and but for a pair of heartbreaking losses last year to Chris Evert and Evonne Goolagong it could be a few notches higher.

"Those were the two saddest moments for me so far," recalls Olga. "I had Evonne down 5-3 on my serve in the last set of our fourth round match at Wimbledon, and I still lost. Then I lost a last set tiebreaker to Chris in the quarterfinals at Forest Hills."

Even getting that far in tournaments of this stature says a lot, of course, and during her career Olga has also enjoyed her share of successes. She has the fast, mobile, aggressive game to get more of the latter, too, and she's waiting now for her next chances against the Misses Evert and Goolagong.

Olga learned tennis from a friend in her native Moscow at the age of 10. She just fooled around with the game for about two years, then began playing in competition.

"I remember the first time I lost," she says. "It was to a big girl. I cried, as any little girl would. But the coach said, 'If I see anymore crying, you're going home. No more tennis.'

"After that I tried not to cry, because I wanted to keep playing. But it still happens. I couldn't help the tears after those matches with Chris and Evonne."

By the time she was in her mid-teens, Olga was making waves in the tennis world. She won the USSR 18-and-under championship at the age of 15, and also took the Wimbledon junior girls' tournament.

During the next few years Olga and Alex Metrevelli became the only Russians yet to reach an adult Wimbledon final, doing it in mixed doubles in 1968 and again in 1970. In singles she has won three straight Russian titles, and last year in her best international result to date she reached the singles final at the Italian Open and won the doubles with Lesley Hunt.

The current trip to the United States is the third for Mrs. Morozova, who is married to a former Russian junior champion who eventually gave up the competitive game to concentrate on his electrical engineering career.

She speaks excellent English and says she has enjoyed her experiences in this country so far. She likes meeting people, and says she doesn't mind the traveling as long as it doesn't keep her away from home too long at a time.

In some ways, Olga says, she would rather play before American crowds than those back home, where her No. 1 standing often induces the spectators to root for the underdog against her.

"The people in the United States know tennis very well," she says. "At Forest Hills they helped me. They were very

Redwood Tops Terra Linda In Football

By LEW CODDINGTON

Like an angry bear who had suffered a painful but non-fatal wound, Redwood High School attacked its tormentor last night, scoring a touchdown with 38 seconds left for a 6-3 football victory over Terra Linda.

Terra Linda drew blood on a 27-yard field goal by Cam Leith with 4:49 remaining, but Redwood moved 67 yards in 10 plays for the kill, achieved on a one-yard run by halfback Ed Andersen.

"What a comeback," cheered Redwood coach Phil Roark after the much-craved victory. Strong Giant teams have lost to the Trojans the past two years. "We worked all week on our poise, and we conditioned our tails off."

Pending the outcome of today's games, Redwood (3-1 overall) moved into undisputed first place in the Marin County Athletic League at 2-0. Terra Linda is 1-1 and 2-3. About 3,000 fans watched at San Rafael High.

"Tropp is gaining a lot of confidence out there," said Roark of senior quarterback John Troppmann, who completed passes of 10 and 16 yards to Andersen on the march. A roughing the passer penalty on the Trojans and gains of 12 and seven yards by Giant halfback Mark Richter also were criti-

IN NON-LEAGUE GRID

St. Mary's Strange Victory Over Tam

By TOM THOMPSON

Host Tamalpais High School lost to St. Mary's of Berkeley yesterday, 22-6, in what will have to stand up as one of the strangest games of the 1973 Marin County Football season. About 400 fans watched the non-league contest.

Neither team could get much of an offense rolling with St. Mary's leading the total statistical battle, 121-120. The Panthers scored all their touchdowns in the first half, on the benefit of a single first down.

The scores came pretty easily though, thanks to a couple of disastrous Tam errors, and a long pass by St. Mary's quarterback Ray Strong. The scoring opened on the game's third play when Mike Gray caught a 55-yard pass from Strong. As it turned out, Gray conversion run after the touchdown was all the visitors needed to win.

The Panthers (3-1) blocked a couple of Tam quick-kicks to score their other touchdowns. Mike Castro blocked one late in the first quarter and ran it back 40 yards to score, while Gray ran in six yards to tally again after being set up by a Keith Hines block.

Tamalpais (2-3) couldn't score until it was much too late to get back into the contest. With 2:47 left to play, end John Hanley caught a 50-yard scoring pass from quarterback Mark Davis.

For the second straight week, the Indians fumbled in excess, giving the ball up four times. Tam got six of the game's 10 first downs.

Local distaff bowlers claim that, basically, they can compete on equal footing with a man. A bowler is not limited by age or sex, because strength is not the key — techniques and skills are.

Additionally, bowling does not have to be a team sport where one individual depends on another for advancement. In recreation bowling, "You are competing only against yourself. You may shoot a 522 series one week, and then decide 'I can do better next time.' And you have only yourself to answer to if you do or don't," Mrs. Arnott continued.

Bowling popularity is also attributable to the increased recreation time and appeal to youth. People simply have more time for sports due to shorter work weeks and the commercial attention devoted to sports in general. "You see bowling on TV all the time, and kids watch a lot of TV, so you can see where they get that from.

"And the bowling houses (such as Greenbrae Lanes, Nave Lanes in Ignacio, and Country Club Bowl in San Rafael) encourage juniors and women to bowl."

The Marin County Men's Bowling Association and the Marin County Women's Bowling Association names and averages are contained in the official Blue Book. The bowling houses contact persons listed in the book and keep regulars abreast of local league activities. This is the approach used in getting the women into the houses' day leagues.

By telephoning the MCWBA members, the houses discover that the gals are interested in loop play, and the interest is further spurred by the free nursery facilities at the local bowling establishments. All three Marin houses have free nurseries.

Added enticements include time and equipment factors. Bowlers claim that the game is "not too expensive." Golf and tennis equipment can add up where competitors generally supply their own racquets, clubs, and shoes — not to mention balls.

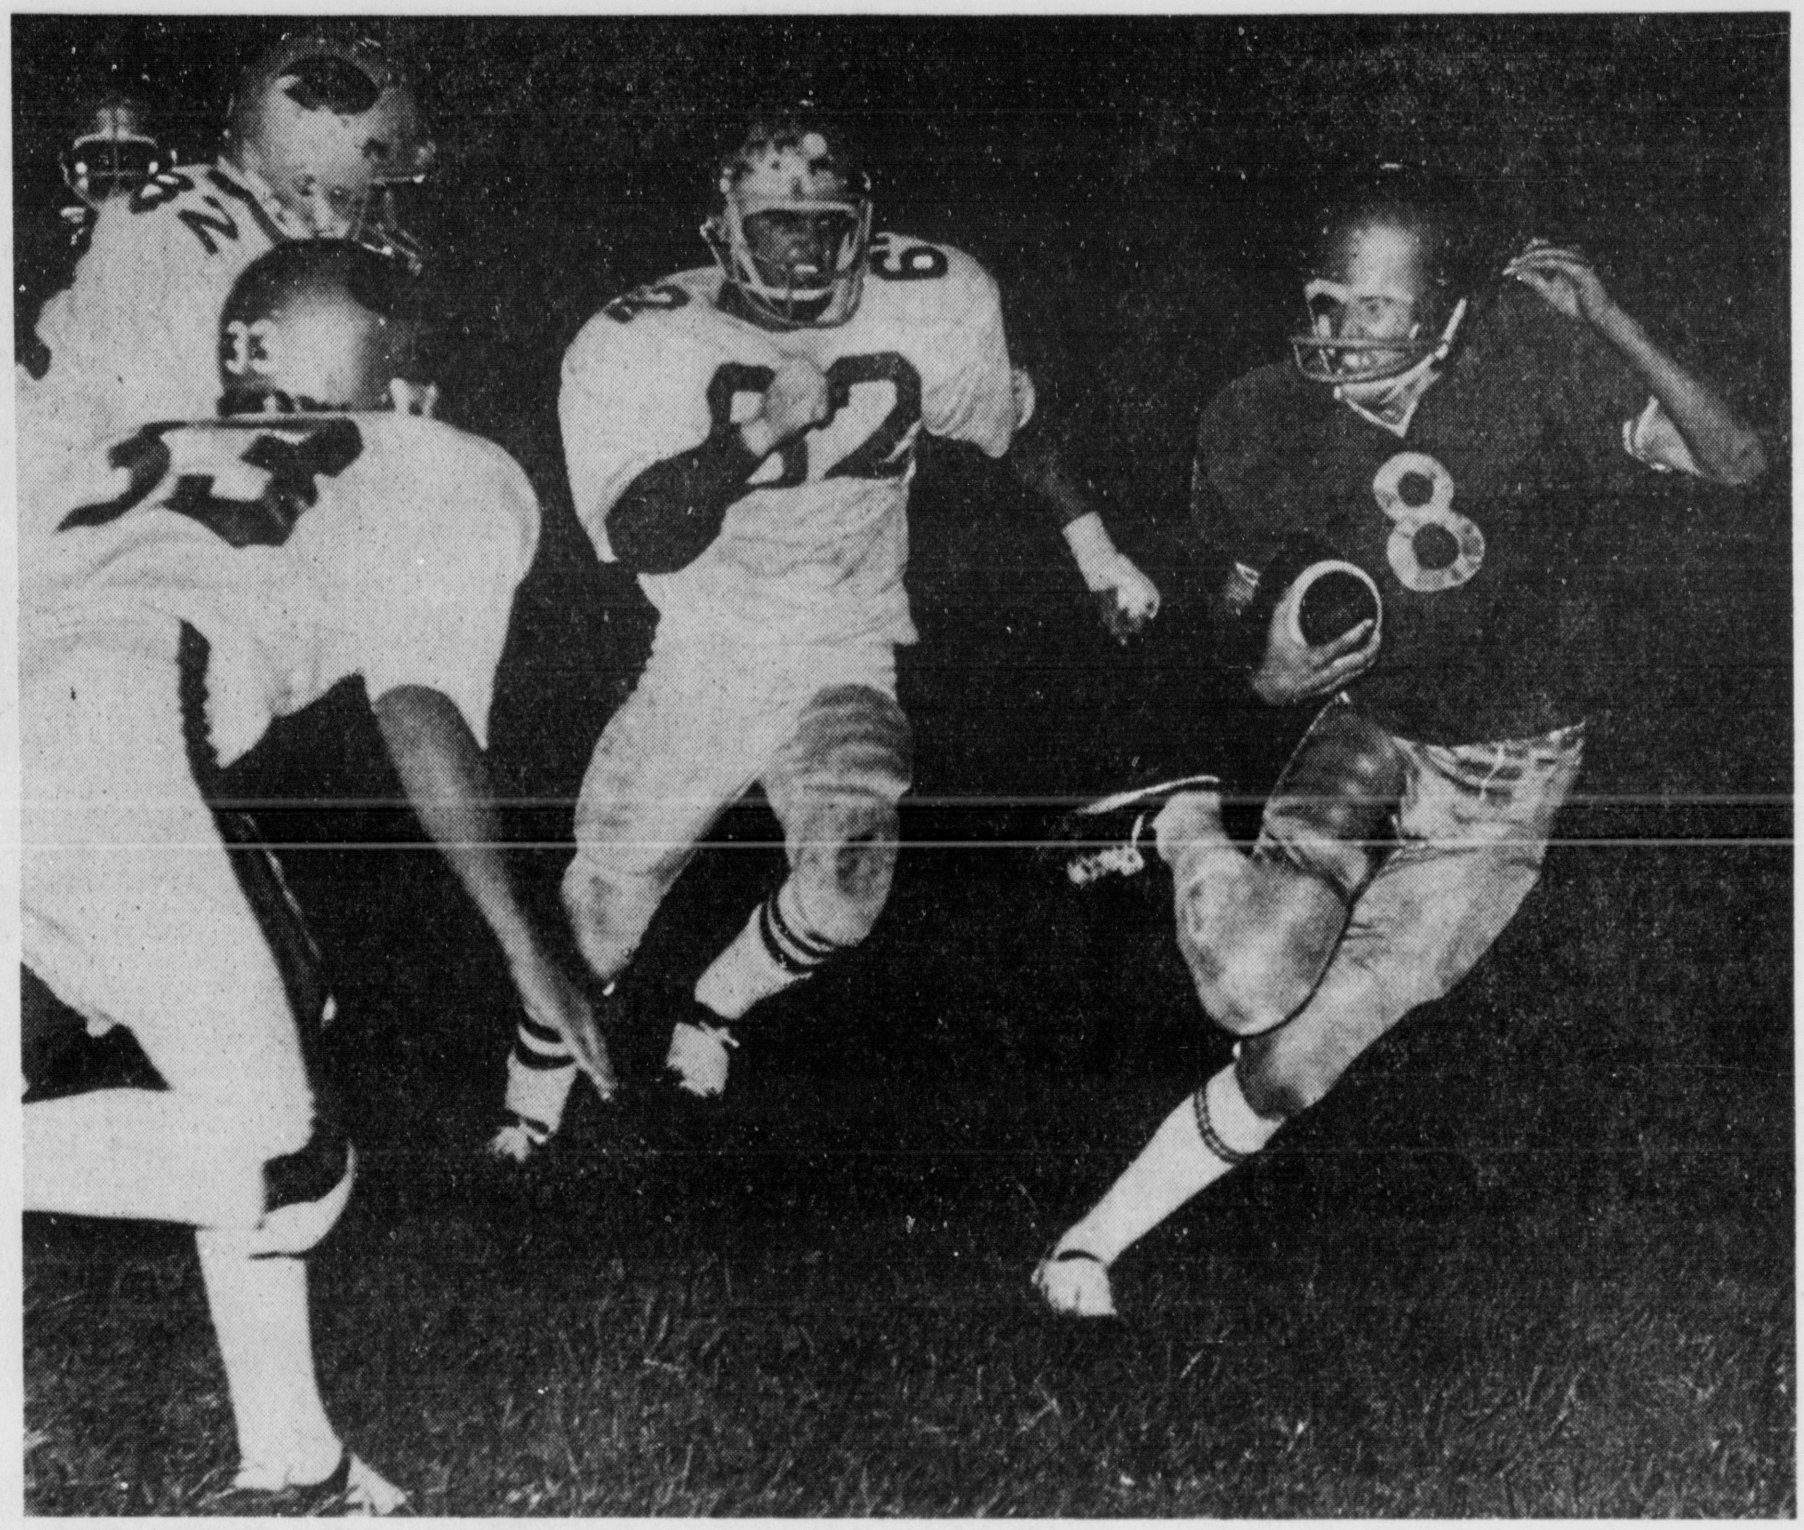
The alleys supply the balls and charge nominally for shoes. Once you get into bowling, you usually buy your own ball and shoes, bowlers say, but such purchases are not mandatory.

Regarding the time issue, the women maintain they can go out there "most any time, because it doesn't take all day. You can go out there, bowl three games, and spend as little or as much time as you want," according to the women's consensus. The women are wont to go to the alleys alone without a need for a partner as in other recreational sports — another plus.

Mrs. Arnott commented that "You don't have to go there with a friend, you just can bowl with people from your league. And you all have a common interest (bowling)."

This "interest" mushroomed after World War II and the Korean War after being an industrial sport in the 1920s where businesses conducted their own leagues and pins were handset. Media influence, most notably television, brought bowling into family living rooms starting in the 1950s, arousing U.S. citizenry interest.

The game blossomed into a family sport where the women and children could also benefit from a sport with healthy exercise. And the 208,230,000 American population as of 1972, including the 215,000 Marin inhabitants, can certainly relate to the game eminating from 19th Century Germany.



DON'T FENCE ME IN, PART 1 — Terra Linda High School's Mike Kirby (8) sought to return a first-half punt last night against Redwood, but was surrounded and eventually brought down by Mike Robinson (33), Doug MacRae (82) and Pete Massoletti (62). Hard Giant tackling prevailed throughout the game as Redwood pulled out a 6-3 victory before 3,000 fans at San Rafael High to lift its Marin County Athletic League football record to 2-0. Mets Rallying Around Quote

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Miami Dolphins stole the tag a long time ago, but some people are starting to call the New York Mets the "no-names," too.

Reggie Jackson has made no secret of the fact that he wanted Cincinnati to win the National League pennant because "You beat them and you're beating the best."

"I want to play against guys like (Pete) Rose and (Johnny) Bench and (Tony) Perez," Jackson said. "Except for (Tom) Seaver and (Rusty) Staub, the Mets don't have any big-name players."

"Maybe they'll know who we are when we leave town," cracked Tug McGraw, the New York relief ace.

None of the A's, least of all Manager Dick Williiams, are particularvy concerned that news of the discord on the club continually keeps getting in print.

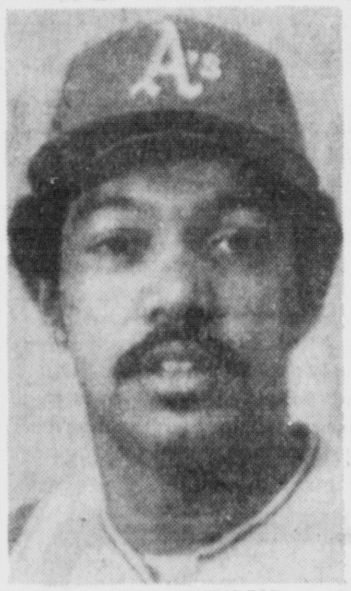
"We're arguing all year long on our ball club," Williams said. "You can't live together all year without having some friction."

Oakland's latest clubhouse "incident" occurred Wednesday with the A's blew a 4-0 lead and lost the fourth playoff game, 5-4, to Baltimore.

Reliever Rollie Fingers, who was the losing pitcher, told a reporter that (Vida) Blue has to pitch better than that with a 4-0 lead," and Blue Moon Odom overheard him.

"If you hadn't given up the homer, we'd still be out there," Odom shouted at Fingers.

"We have a club that speaks its mind," said Williams. "They're all over 21. They can speak out.



REGGIE JACKSON
Prefers Reds

Williams isn't particularly worried about the greeting the A's may get from the fans at Shea Stadium, who acted like so many animals during the National League playoffs.

"Fans are Fans," Williams said. "They just have super fans. I think that's terrific. The interest that was shown was good for baseball —not the throwing things or going on the field —but the pure baseball interest."

"It's drilled into me all my life that the fans aren't really there," said Mets pitcher Jon Matlack. "You have to block out the crowd noise. They'll bother you as much as you let them."

Happy Seals' Fans Celebrate Upset Victory

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

It looked and sounded as though the rag-tag California Golden Seals had just won a Stanley Cup game from the Montreal Canadiens.

Programs, beer, paper cups and coins sailed onto the ice of the Coliseum-Arena last night after the Seals had beaten the Chicago Black Hawks 3-2. The skimpy crowd of 6,041 gave the Seals a standing ovation for several minutes after the final horn.

The hometown fans were merely showing their appreciation for the way the young Seals outhustled, outhit and outshot the defending Western Division champions of the National Hockey League.

Though it was only the second game of the season, it kept the Seals unbeaten and winners in their last six games over two seasons, longest streak in the NHL.

Play-making center Walt McKechnie scored what proved to be the winning goal four seconds from the end of the middle period. At that time, California led 3-1 and outshot the Hawks 28-7 over the first two periods.

Craig Patrick and Joey Johnston scored early in the opening period to give the Seals a 2-0 lead. Patrick's goal came only 11 seconds after the opening faceoff. Johnston, who also had two assists, added an unassisted tally while the Seals were shorthanded with 4:57 remain-

Olga Ahead Of Schedule

By LARRY ELDRIDGE
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

HINGHAM, Mass. — The Soviet Union has only recently launched its bid to become a world tennis power and will need a few more years to approach that goal, but Olga Morozova's personal timetable could be a little quicker.

The 24-year-old Russian women's champion is already ranked 10th in the world, and but for a pair of heartbreaking losses last year to Chris Evert and Evonne Goolagong it could be a few notches higher.

"Those were the two saddest moments for me so far," recalls Olga. "I had Evonne down 5-3 on my serve in the last set of our fourth round match at Wimbledon, and I still lost. Then I lost a last set tiebreaker to Chris in the quarterfinals at Forest Hills."

Even getting that far in tournaments of this stature says a lot, of course, and during her career Olga has also enjoyed her share of successes. She has the fast, mobile, aggressive game to get more of the latter, too, and she's waiting now for her next chances against the Misses Evert and Goolagong.

Olga learned tennis from a friend in her native Moscow at the age of 10. She just fooled around with the game for about two years, then began playing in competition.

"I remember the first time I lost," she says. "It was to a big girl. I cried, as any little girl would. But the coach said, 'If I see anymore crying, you're going home. No more tennis.'

"After that I tried not to cry, because I wanted to keep playing. But it still happens. I couldn't help the tears after those matches with Chris and Evonne."

By the time she was in her mid-teens, Olga was making waves in the tennis world. She won the USSR 18-and-under championship at the age of 15, and also took the Wimbledon junior girls' tournament.

During the next few years Olga and Alex Metrevelli became the only Russians yet to reach an adult Wimbledon final, doing it in mixed doubles in 1968 and again in 1970. In singles she has won three straight Russian titles, and last year in her best international result to date she reached the singles final at the Italian Open and won the doubles with Lesley Hunt.

The current trip to the United States is the third for Mrs. Morozova, who is married to a former Russian junior champion who eventually gave up the competitive game to concentrate on his electrical engineering career.

She speaks excellent English and says she has enjoyed her experiences in this country so far. She likes meeting people, and says she doesn't mind the traveling as long as it doesn't keep her away from home too long at a time.

OLGA MOROZOVA

In some ways, Olga says, she would rather play before American crowds than those back home, where her No. 1 standing often induces the spectators to root for the underdog against her.

"The people in the United States know tennis very well," she says. "At Forest Hills they helped me. They were very

By LEW CODDINGTON

Like an angry bear who had suffered a painful but non-fatal wound, Redwood High School attacked its tormentor last night, scoring a touchdown with 38 seconds left for a 6-3 football victory over Terra Linda.

Terra Linda drew blood on a 27-yard field goal by Cam Leith with 4:49 remaining, but Redwood moved 67 yards in 10 plays for the kill, achieved on a one-yard run by halfback Ed Andersen.

"What a comeback," cheered Redwood coach Phil Roark after the much-craved victory. Strong Giant teams have lost to the Trojans the past two years. "We worked all week on our poise, and we conditioned our tails off."

Pending the outcome of today's games, Redwood (3-1 overall) moved into undisputed first place in the Marin County Athletic League at 2-0. Terra Linda is 1-1 and 2-3. About 3,000 fans watched at San Rafael High.

"Tropp is gaining a lot of confidence out there," said Roark of senior quarterback John Troppmann, who completed passes of 10 and 16 yards to Andersen on the march. A roughing the passer penalty on the Trojans and gains of 12 and seven yards by Giant halfback Mark Richter also were criti-

IN NON-LEAGUE GRID

St. Mary's Strange Victory Over Tam

By TOM THOMPSON

Host Tamalpais High School lost to St. Mary's of Berkeley yesterday, 22-6, in what will have to stand up as one of the strangest games of the 1973 Marin County Football season. About 400 fans watched the non-league contest.

Neither team could get much of an offense rolling with St. Mary's leading the total statistical battle, 121-120. The Panthers scored all their touchdowns in the first half, on the benefit of a single first down.

The scores came pretty easily though, thanks to a couple of disastrous Tam errors, and a long pass by St. Mary's quarterback Ray Strong. The scoring opened on the game's third play when Mike Gray caught a 55-yard pass from Strong. As it turned out, Gray conversion run after the touchdown was all the visitors needed to win.

The Panthers (3-1) blocked a couple of Tam quick-kicks to score their other touchdowns. Mike Castro blocked one late in the first quarter and ran it back 40 yards to score, while Gray ran in six yards to tally again after being set up by a Keith Hines block.

Tamalpais (2-3) couldn't score until it was much too late to get back into the contest. With 2:47 left to play, end John Hanley caught a 50-yard scoring pass from quarterback Mark Davis.

For the second straight week, the Indians fumbled in excess, giving the ball up four times. Tam got six of the game's 10 first downs.

Aaron Sees Pitchers' Battle With Koosman As Series' Star

ATLANTA (UPI)—Home run slugger Hank Aaron says the World Series will be a pitchers' battle all the way with the Mets' Jerry Koosman turning in the star performance.

Aaron made his predictions in an article written for today's editions of the Atlanta Constitution. He said Oakland has the edge with "depth and talent," but the Mets are riding high on a winning streak and could pull a repeat of the 1969 win.

"I think this is going to be a pitchers' Series, and I have a feeling the star is going to turn out to be Jerry Koosman of the Mets," Aaron said.

"I think lefthanders can give Oakland trouble, and Koosman, in my opinion, is one of the best lefthanders in the National League."

Aaron, who ended the season only one home run short of Babe Ruth's 714 mark, said the Mets have the same enthusiasm as in 1969 "when they couldn't do much wrong."

"Personally, I don't think they have that good a club," he said. "They got hot at the right time, though, in the right division. They have a great pitching staff, but their club is not as good as Cincinnati's."

Aaron said Oakland has the edge in all-around talent.

"They have ballplayers all over the place," he said. "They're loaded with them, and they can play long ball better than the Mets."

But the slugger said he would be pulling for the Mets because they represent his league.

"And with that pitching, in a short series, they could win it," he added.

Aaron said the secret of winning "will depend on whose bullpen comes around."

"The thing that made the difference for the Mets in winning their division was Tug McGraw," he said. "He got knocked all over the place in the first half, but he was unhittable in the second half."

Aaron also showered praise on Met's pitchers Tom Seaver, Jon Matlack and George Stone and the A's Ken Holtzman, Vida Blue, and Jim Hunter.

Aaron, who was asked to throw out the opening pitch today, said he was proud to be part of the series.

"And maybe next year," he added, "we'll have something to say about it—the Braves, I mean. There's nothing I'd like better than to play in one more World Series before I hang 'em up."

PRO FOOTBALL

Unitas May Be Benched Again

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Is John Unitas headed for the bench again?

Unitas, the former Baltimore great who holds a number of National Football League passing records, became despondent last season when the Colts benched him in favor of Marty Domres.

He was traded to San Diego just after the season but now the same thing could be happening again.

The Chargers are 1-3 under Unitas, with their only victory coming over Buffalo, and Unitas was especially ineffective last week against Pittburgh, completing only 2-of-9 passes as the Steelers consistently pressured him and forged to a 38-0 halftime lead. Rookie Dan Fouts, a third-round draft pick from Oregon, led the Chargers to three TDs in the final period.

The Chargers meet American Football Conference Western rival Oakland tomorrow and a poor showing by Unitas could mean more time for Fouts, who completed 11-of-21 passes for 174 yards against Pittsburgh.

Oakland did some quarterback switching of it own last week and finally got its offense untracked. The Raiders had not scored an offensive touchdown in their first three games under Daryle Lamonica but Ken Stabler got them untracked with a 17-10 victory over St. Louis. Stabler will start tomorrow against San Diego.

Dallas, stunned by two Washington TDs in the last three minutes and stopped on the one by the Redskins with less than 30 seconds left, looks to rebound from its 14-7 Monday night loss against a Los Angeles club that has been the surprise of the NFL. The Rams have won all four games under new coach Chuck Knox and hold a two-game edge in the NFC West.

Minnesota, also unbeaten in four games, takes on a San Francisco team that has scored three straight triumphs over the Vikings while Pittsburgh, the only undefeated club in the AFC, could just about bury Cincinnati when they meet tomorrow.

kind. But in Moscow it's different. Anytime I'm playing another Russian, they're usually rooting against me."

On the subject of other players Olga can speak with some authority — especially after those two tough matches against Miss Evert and Miss Goolagong. Naturally she is often asked to compare the two superstars.

"People told me I played better against Chris, but I think maybe Evonne is easier to play," she says. "Chris is so steady, so good at the baseline. She never seems to make mistakes. Sometimes Evonne gives you chances to win, but Chris doesn't."

Both Olga and Eugene Korbut, vice-president of the Soviet Tennis Federation who is here with the Russian players, talked of the development of the game in their country.

"It's not like in your country yet," Olga said, "but every day it's getting more popular. I think in the future we'll have the same kind of popularity. I hope so."

One problem, as both pointed out, is the combination of Russia's rugged climate plus the scarcity of covered courts, but progress is being made.

"We have 60,000 tennis players now," Korbut said. "That's not many compared to you, and certainly not enough for a country our size. But we're developing the sport, building courts, and teaching people both to play and to instruct the game."

The Russians joined the International Lawn Tennis Federation in 1956 and began playing in international competition the following year. They've been working to improve since then, but have had their problems.

"It's a pity tennis is not an Olympic sport," Korbut said. "If it were, our government sports committee would help more."

Even without this inducement, the Russians are obviously going about their program with their typical thoroughness, and Korbut is cautiously optimistic.

"Olga's ranking is the highest any Russian has ever been, and we're proud of that," he said. "We want to get higher though, and I think we will.

"I think we can develop into a world power, but we need some years yet for that. Maybe three or four more years, maybe more, before we can be in the first row."

WATER POLO

San Rafael Defeated By Terra Linda

Terra Linda High School was a question mark at the beginning of the current water polo season, but is an exclamation point by now.

The Trojans, defending Marin County Athletic League champions but hard-hit by graduation, yesterday defeated contender San Rafael, 5-3, to improve their record to 5-0 for the year. They tied Redwood for first place, and will visit the Giants for a showdown Tuesday.

Tamalpais defeated Novato, 13-2, in the only other game held yesterday. The Drake-San Marin game was called due to absence of officials, and has not yet been rescheduled. Redwood drew a bye.

"It was one of the better water polo games ever played in the MCAL," said Terra Linda coach Chuck Metz, and it attracted about 100 fans.

Tom Enright and Chris (Crash) Jones scored two goals each for the Trojans and Ed Martinez added one, while Jeff Kamler scored twice for San Rafael and Curt Barcley contributed the third goal.

"Our goalie, Peter Thomas, did an outstanding job," Metz said. "He had 13 blocks, one on a penalty throw."

Terra Linda's score was set up by a fumble recovery by Dave Pulver on the Giant 40. Larry Buttner hit Troppmann to force the bobble. Bob Gelardi caught passes of 17 and 16 yards from Kevin Kirby to get the ball close.

Otherwise, it was a bonecruncing battle for field position. The only other chance at a score came in the fourth quarter, when Andersen was short on a 41-yard field goal try.

IN ABA PLAY

Erving, Gervin Show Essence Of Game

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Stripped of its codified plays and switching defenses, basketball's essence is one-on-one. Like a jazzman who knows he's got a different beat going strong, ballplayers sometimes jam on the court and send out extra-special vibrations with their inspired play. When they do, it's a joy to watch.

George Gervin and Julius "Dr. J" Erving, teammates on Virginia until Erving was traded to New York this summer, jammed last night and the delight was felt by an appreciative crowd at the Nets' American Basketball Association home opener.

New York won the team battle 116-105 because it played better defense and outrebounded the Squires 25-15 on offense but the fun was in watching the two multi-talented 6-foot 7 forwards play dueling basketball.

Gervin set the early rhythm, opening the game with a short jumper and then a three-pointer that fell with a swish.

He came back down quickly after the Nets turned over and, in one sweeping flash, rose past his defender and over the rim and dunked the ball deep. Shades of Erving.

Dr. J, not to be outdone, split the defense with a full-speed 45-degree cut from side to baseline, then round and round he went and when he stopped it was two points Nets.

Gervin held the beat until the first half break, scoring 25 points to Erving's 13 and outrebounding his rival 9-6 to lead the Squires to a 60-56 halftime lead.

Erving turned the tables in the second half on the game of "I can do anything you can do better." With the Nets finally jelling on defense, Erving led a 15-2 surge with some dazzling maneuvers and sent New York ahead to stay by scoring 25 points in the second half to finish with 38, five less than Gervin's 43. Erving outrebounded Gervin 13-11.

In other ABA games, Carolina edged Indiana 99-98, Utah whipped San Antonio 94-82, Kentucky dropped Denver 111-100 and Memphis downed San Diego 118-113.

Billy Cunningham hit a jump shot with a minute left to play and Indiana missed its last two shots to give Carolina its victory over the defending league champion Pacers. Tom Owens poured in 41 points to lead the Cougars and pulled in 22 rebounds.

Utah's Jimmy Jones, Willie Wise and Ron Boone combined for 64 points to whip San Antonio.

Dan Issel poured in 27 points and Lou Dampier 25 to give Kentucky its victory over Denver. Seven-foot-two Artis Gilmore collared 27 rebounds, hit 17 points and was credited with six blocked shots for the Colonels, who opened up an 18- point lead in the fourth period.

John Neumann hit 32 points to pace Memphis to its first victory of the season and ruin Wilt Chamberlain's pro coaching debut in San Diego. Neumann got 13 points in the final quarter and collected six straight points after San Diego had pulled to within a 101-99 margin with 4:12 remaining in the game.

WHA ROUNDUP

Howe, Two Sons Debut Tonight

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The eyes of every team in the World Hockey Association will be on Los Angeles tonight when Gordie Howe and his two sons make their debuts for the Houston Aeros against the hometown Sharks.

A 25-year-veteran of the National Hockey League season who is generally regarded as the best player in pro hockey history, Howe came out of retirement to fulfill a life-long dream of playing alongside his sons, Mark, a right winger, and Marty, a defenseman.

The acquisition of Howe was intended to add prestige and glamour to the young league — just as former NHL Bobby Hull's performance with the Winnipeg Jets did last season. Howe holds many NHL records including most games played, most goals, most assists and most points. He was selected to the NHL All-Star team 21 times.

The game will be the first of the season for both teams.

Jim Harrison's three-goal performance led the Edmonton Oilers to a 6-4 victory over the Jets and the Minnesota Fighting Saints scored a 5-4 victory over the Vancouver Blazers in last night games.

Redwood Booters Top Novato, 2-0

Visiting Redwood High School, playing strong defensive soccer, scored a 2-0 victory over previously unbeaten Novato yesterday and took over the undisputed lead in the Marin County Athletic League.

"The defense has been really fine," said Redwood coach Pat Bacchus, whose undefeated team has three shutouts among its four victories. He lauded the play of halfbacks and co-captains Frank Cassou ("a tireless sweeper") and Carl Bettinger (who scored the first gaol). Manny Natsios had the only tally.

Terra Linda, which is scheduled to visit San Rafael at 8 o'clock tonight, had its game with Drake shifted to Thursday and defeated the Pirates, 3-0. Marin Catholic moved its game with San Marin to Thursday and lost to the Mustangs, 3-2.

PRO FOOTBALL

Unitas May Be Benched Again

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Is John Unitas headed for the bench again?

Unitas, the former Baltimore great who holds a number of National Football League passing records, became despondent last season when the Colts benched him in favor of Marty Domres.

He was traded to San Diego just after the season but now the same thing could be happening again.

The Chargers are 1-3 under Unitas, with their only victory coming over Buffalo, and Unitas was especially ineffective last week against Pittburgh, completing only 2-of-9 passes as the Steelers consistently pressured him and forged to a 38-0 halftime lead. Rookie Dan Fouts, a third-round draft pick from Oregon, led the Chargers to three TDs in the final period.

The Chargers meet American Football Conference Western rival Oakland tomorrow and a poor showing by Unitas could mean more time for Fouts, who completed 11-of-21 passes for 174 yards against Pittsburgh.

Oakland did some quarterback switching of it own last week and finally got its offense untracked. The Raiders had not scored an offensive touchdown in their first three games under Daryle Lamonica but Ken Stabler got them untracked with a 17-10 victory over St. Louis. Stabler will start tomorrow against San Diego.

Dallas, stunned by two Washington TDs in the last three minutes and stopped on the one by the Redskins with less than 30 seconds left, looks to rebound from its 14-7 Monday night loss against a Los Angeles club that has been the surprise of the NFL. The Rams have won all four games under new coach Chuck Knox and hold a two-game edge in the NFC West.

Minnesota, also unbeaten in four games, takes on a San Francisco team that has scored three straight triumphs over the Vikings while Pittsburgh, the only undefeated club in the AFC, could just about bury Cincinnati when they meet tomorrow.

TENNIS

kind. But in Moscow it's different. Anytime I'm playing another Russian, they're usually rooting against me."

On the subject of other players Olga can speak with some authority — especially after those two tough matches against Miss Evert and Miss Goolagong. Naturally she is often asked to compare the two superstars.

"People told me I played better against Chris, but I think maybe Evonne is easier to play," she says. "Chris is so steady, so good at the baseline. She never seems to make mistakes. Sometimes Evonne gives you chances to win, but Chris doesn't."

Both Olga and Eugene Korbut, vice-president of the Soviet Tennis Federation who is here with the Russian players, talked of the development of the game in their country.

"It's not like in your country yet," Olga said, "but every day it's getting more popular. I think in the future we'll have the same kind of popularity. I hope so."

One problem, as both pointed out, is the combination of Russia's rugged climate plus the scarcity of covered courts, but progress is being made.

"We have 60,000 tennis players now," Korbut said. "That's not many compared to you, and certainly not enough for a country our size. But we're developing the sport, building courts, and teaching people both to play and to instruct the game."

The Russians joined the International Lawn Tennis Federation in 1956 and began playing in international competition the following year. They've been working to improve since then, but have had their problems.

"It's a pity tennis is not an Olympic sport," Korbut said. "If it were, our government sports committee would help more."

Even without this inducement, the Russians are obviously going about their program with their typical thoroughness, and Korbut is cautiously optimistic.

"Olga's ranking is the highest any Russian has ever been, and we're proud of that," he said. "We want to get higher though, and I think we will.

"I think we can develop into a world power, but we need some years yet for that. Maybe three or four more years, maybe more, before we can be in the first row."

WATER POLO

San Rafael Defeated By Terra Linda

Terra Linda High School was a question mark at the beginning of the current water polo season, but is an exclamation point by now.

The Trojans, defending Marin County Athletic League champions but hard-hit by graduation, yesterday defeated contender San Rafael, 5-3, to improve their record to 5-0 for the year. They tied Redwood for first place, and will visit the Giants for a showdown Tuesday.

Tamalpais defeated Novato, 13-2, in the only other game held yesterday. The Drake-San Marin game was called due to absence of officials, and has not yet been rescheduled. Redwood drew a bye.

"It was one of the better water polo games ever played in the MCAL," said Terra Linda coach Chuck Metz, and it attracted about 100 fans.

Tom Enright and Chris (Crash) Jones scored two goals each for the Trojans and Ed Martinez added one, while Jeff Kamler scored twice for San Rafael and Curt Barcley contributed the third goal.

"Our goalie, Peter Thomas, did an outstanding job," Metz said. "He had 13 blocks, one on a penalty throw."

Terra Linda's score was set up by a fumble recovery by Dave Pulver on the Giant 40. Larry Buttner hit Troppmann to force the bobble. Bob Gelardi caught passes of 17 and 16 yards from Kevin Kirby to get the ball close.

Otherwise, it was a bonecruncing battle for field position. The only other chance at a score came in the fourth quarter, when Andersen was short on a 41-yard field goal try.

IN ABA PLAY

Erving, Gervin Show Essence Of Game

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Stripped of its codified plays and switching defenses, basketball's essence is one-on-one. Like a jazzman who knows he's got a different beat going strong, ballplayers sometimes jam on the court and send out extra-special vibrations with their inspired play. When they do, it's a joy to watch.

George Gervin and Julius "Dr. J" Erving, teammates on Virginia until Erving was traded to New York this summer, jammed last night and the delight was felt by an appreciative crowd at the Nets' American Basketball Association home opener.

New York won the team battle 116-105 because it played better defense and outrebounded the Squires 25-15 on offense but the fun was in watching the two multi-talented 6-foot 7 forwards play dueling basketball.

Gervin set the early rhythm, opening the game with a short jumper and then a three-pointer that fell with a swish.

He came back down quickly after the Nets turned over and, in one sweeping flash, rose past his defender and over the rim and dunked the ball deep. Shades of Erving.

Dr. J, not to be outdone, split the defense with a full-speed 45-degree cut from side to baseline, then round and round he went and when he stopped it was two points Nets.

Gervin held the beat until the first half break, scoring 25 points to Erving's 13 and outrebounding his rival 9-6 to lead the Squires to a 60-56 halftime lead.

Erving turned the tables in the second half on the game of "I can do anything you can do better." With the Nets finally jelling on defense, Erving led a 15-2 surge with some dazzling maneuvers and sent New York ahead to stay by scoring 25 points in the second half to finish with 38, five less than Gervin's 43. Erving outrebounded Gervin 13-11.

In other ABA games, Carolina edged Indiana 99-98, Utah whipped San Antonio 94-82, Kentucky dropped Denver 111-100 and Memphis downed San Diego 118-113.

Billy Cunningham hit a jump shot with a minute left to play and Indiana missed its last two shots to give Carolina its victory over the defending league champion Pacers. Tom Owens poured in 41 points to lead the Cougars and pulled in 22 rebounds.

Dan Issel poured in 27 points and Lou Dampier 25 to give Kentucky its victory over Denver. Seven-foot-two Artis Gilmore collared 27 rebounds, hit 17 points and was credited with six blocked shots for the Colonels, who opened up an 18- point lead in the fourth period.

John Neumann hit 32 points to pace Memphis to its first victory of the season and ruin Wilt Chamberlain's pro coaching debut in San Diego. Neumann got 13 points in the final quarter and collected six straight points after San Diego had pulled to within a 101-99 margin with 4:12 remaining in the game.

WHA ROUNDUP

Howe, Two Sons Debut Tonight

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The eyes of every team in the World Hockey Association will be on Los Angeles tonight when Gordie Howe and his two sons make their debuts for the Houston Aeros against the hometown Sharks.

A 25-year-veteran of the National Hockey League season who is generally regarded as the best player in pro hockey history, Howe came out of retirement to fulfill a life-long dream of playing alongside his sons, Mark, a right winger, and Marty, a defenseman.

The acquisition of Howe was intended to add prestige and glamour to the young league — just as former NHL Bobby Hull's performance with the Winnipeg Jets did last season. Howe holds many NHL records including most games played, most goals, most assists and most points. He was selected to the NHL All-Star team 21 times.

The game will be the first of the season for both teams.

Jim Harrison's three-goal performance led the Edmonton Oilers to a 6-4 victory over the Jets and the Minnesota Fighting Saints scored a 5-4 victory over the Vancouver Blazers in last night games.

Redwood Booters Top Novato, 2-0

Visiting Redwood High School, playing strong defensive soccer, scored a 2-0 victory over previously unbeaten Novato yesterday and took over the undisputed lead in the Marin County Athletic League.

"The defense has been really fine," said Redwood coach Pat Bacchus, whose undefeated team has three shutouts among its four victories. He lauded the play of halfbacks and co-captains Frank Cassou ("a tireless sweeper") and Carl Bettinger (who scored the first gaol). Manny Natsios had the only tally.

Terra Linda, which is scheduled to visit San Rafael at 8 o'clock tonight, had its game with Drake shifted to Thursday and defeated the Pirates, 3-0. Marin Catholic moved its game with San Marin to Thursday and lost to the Mustangs, 3-2.

STANDINGS

Redwood 4-0, Novato 3-1, Terra Linda 2-1, Tamalpais 2-2, Drake 1-2-1, San Marin 1-2-1, Marin Catholic 1-3, San Rafael 0-3.

The move yesterday paves the way for the restoration of the Olympic medals won by Thorpe in the 1912 Olympics and then stripped because of charges of professionalism.

The AAU move permits the United States Olympic Committee to intercede on Thorpe's behalf to the International Olympic Committee, which stripped Thorpe of his gold medals in the decathalon and penathlon.

INZAI, Japan — Bert Yancey yesterday shot a one-under-par 70 for a two-round total of 135 and maintained his two-stroke lead at the midway point in the $300,000 Pacific Club Masters golf tournament.

NBA ROUNDUP

Celtics' Star Shows He Can Also Score

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Some basketball players are known for their scoring and some for their defense. Some carry their reputations on the intensity with which they play.

Paul Silas belongs in that last group. He has always been regarded as a bruising kind of forward who will go up hard, not afraid to mix it under the boards, to get a rebound. He worked well in his first year with the Boston Celtics last season because he was tough on defense and could get their famed fast break moving by muscling for rebounds.

Last night, the 6-foot 7, 235-pound Silas showed he can be a threat on offense, too, by equalling his career high with 31 points to lead the Celtics to a 118-112 victory over the Buffalo Braves.

Buffalo has to be wondering what they have to do to beat the Celtics, who seem to have the Braves' number having whipped them 18 straight times.

Silas held the hottest hand of his pro career during a 10-minute span in the second quarter when he fired in 15 points to lift the Celtics from a 37-24 deficit to a 59-55 halftime lead they never relinquished.

Dave Cowens added 25 points for Boston and John Havlicek and Jo Jo White scored 21 apiece. Randy Smith and Bob McAdoo had 24 apiece for Buffalo while rookie guard Ernie DiGregorio had 21.

In other National Basketball Association games, Detroit routed Atlanta 122-105 in a protested game, Kansas City squeaked by Chicago 88-84, Houston downed Cleveland 106-99, Milwaukee ripped Phoenix 107-84 and Seattle nipped the Capital Bullets 103-102.

Bob Lanier, Don Adams and Curtis Rowe combined for 57 points to lead Detroit to victory over Atlanta but Hawk coach Cotton Fitzsimmons protested the game with 8:32 minutes showing on the clock in the first quarter for the same reason the Pistons' scheduled home opener against Golden State was postponed Wednesday night—a slippery floor. Detroit was leading 12-10 at the time.

Kansas City-Omaha let an 18-point lead dwindle but managed to hang on for its first win of the season at the expense of rugged Chicago. The Kings took a 46-42 halftime edge, paced by 6-1 guards Nate Archibald and Matt Guokas and 6-10 center Sam Lacey. Chet Walker kept the Bulls alive with 16 points in the first half and finished with 24 for the night.

Bob Dandridge, with 24 points, led the Milwaukee Bucks, who had 19 more field goals than Phoenix, in their victory over the Suns. The Bucks shot 53 per cent to 35 per cent for the Suns. Oscar Robertson had 19, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 18 and Lucius Allen 16 for the Bukks. Top scorer for Phoenix was Lamar Green, who came off the bench and got 14.

Kennedy McIntosh scored the deciding basket with 11 seconds left as Seattle topped the Bullets. Seattle started the final quarter trailing 83-78 but then got nine unanswered points. The Bullets' drought ended after 2-½, minutes on a field goal by Elvin Hayes, who took game honors with 27 points.

The Bullets' Kevin Porter scored eight of his 14 game points in the final quarter to put the Bullets ahead 102-101 with just 32 seconds left. Seattle then took time out to set up the final play, which resulted in McIntosh's bucket on a pass from Spencer Haywood.

Marin Catholic Wins

"We've had two dress rehearsals," said forward Cazzie Russell. "Our uniforms fit. Our basketball shoes look nice. Now all we have to do is play."

Improved Minnesota Faces 49ers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — 'Tis a much-improved Minnesota Vikings team the San Francisco 49ers face Sunday in a locally televised contest on Channel 5.

The Vikings, unbeaten in four straight games, are favored by six points to hand the 49ers their third loss in five starts. Over the past three seasons, San Francisco has edged the Vikings by scores of 17-10, 13-9 and 20-17.

So don't blame 49er quarterback John Brodie if he keeps his passes short and his running plays frequent. Brodie hasn't thrown a touchdown pass yet this season and the Vikings' front four would hate to have that string broken.

Old pro Ken Willard gets his first start of the season at fullback because of crippling injuries to Larry Schreiber and Jim Thomas. Schreiber is out for the season after knee surgery while Thomas will be on the shelf for another three weeks with a shoulder injury.

So the 49ers must go with running backs Willard, Vic Washington, Doug Cunningham and either Randy Jackson or Dave Atkins.

Minnesota's running attack, meanwhile, has improved from last year mainly due to the addition of rookie Chuck Foreman.

Petaluma, Rancho Gridders Triumph

By PAUL DWORIN

Tim Wallmark combined with junior Rick Schroeder last night for two touchdown passes to lead Petaluma High School to a 27-12 North Bay League football victory over Vintage High School in Napa.

The win raised the Trojans' NBL mark to 2-0, putting them in a three-way tie for first with Vallejo and Napa high schools.

In other southern Sonoma prep football action last night, Rancho Cotate High School of Rohnert Park stayed atop the Sonoma County League standings with a 35-0 shellacking of host Sonoma, and Casa Grande of Petaluma dropped a 30-14 non-league game to El Molino in Forestville.

Wallmark's scoring passes to Schroeder covered 22 and 29 yards, the second one on the first play of the second quarter. Wallmark also connected with halfback Mike Maselli for a five-yard touchdown in the final period.

Rancho Cotate upped its SCL mark to 2-0, placing the Cougars in a tie for first with Piner of Santa Rosa. The loss dropped Sonoma's league record to 0-2.

The Cougars struck quickly, scoring three times in the first quarter for an almost insurmountable 20-0 lead. Rancho Cotate got its points on one-yard runs by Ray Jones and Bob Haas, and a six-yard pass from Haas.

The move yesterday paves the way for the restoration of the Olympic medals won by Thorpe in the 1912 Olympics and then stripped because of charges of professionalism.

The AAU move permits the United States Olympic Committee to intercede on Thorpe's behalf to the International Olympic Committee, which stripped Thorpe of his gold medals in the decathalon and penathlon.

Celtics' Star Shows He Can Also Score

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Some basketball players are known for their scoring and some for their defense. Some carry their reputations on the intensity with which they play.

Paul Silas belongs in that last group. He has always been regarded as a bruising kind of forward who will go up hard, not afraid to mix it under the boards, to get a rebound. He worked well in his first year with the Boston Celtics last season because he was tough on defense and could get their famed fast break moving by muscling for rebounds.

Last night, the 6-foot 7, 235-pound Silas showed he can be a threat on offense, too, by equalling his career high with 31 points to lead the Celtics to a 118-112 victory over the Buffalo Braves.

Buffalo has to be wondering what they have to do to beat the Celtics, who seem to have the Braves' number having whipped them 18 straight times.

Silas held the hottest hand of his pro career during a 10-minute span in the second quarter when he fired in 15 points to lift the Celtics from a 37-24 deficit to a 59-55 halftime lead they never relinquished.

Dave Cowens added 25 points for Boston and John Havlicek and Jo Jo White scored 21 apiece. Randy Smith and Bob McAdoo had 24 apiece for Buffalo while rookie guard Ernie DiGregorio had 21.

In other National Basketball Association games, Detroit routed Atlanta 122-105 in a protested game, Kansas City squeaked by Chicago 88-84, Houston downed Cleveland 106-99, Milwaukee ripped Phoenix 107-84 and Seattle nipped the Capital Bullets 103-102.

Bob Lanier, Don Adams and Curtis Rowe combined for 57 points to lead Detroit to victory over Atlanta but Hawk coach Cotton Fitzsimmons protested the game with 8:32 minutes showing on the clock in the first quarter for the same reason the Pistons' scheduled home opener against Golden State was postponed Wednesday night—a slippery floor. Detroit was leading 12-10 at the time.

Kansas City-Omaha let an 18-point lead dwindle but managed to hang on for its first win of the season at the expense of rugged Chicago. The Kings took a 46-42 halftime edge, paced by 6-1 guards Nate Archibald and Matt Guokas and 6-10 center Sam Lacey. Chet Walker kept the Bulls alive with 16 points in the first half and finished with 24 for the night.

Rudy Tomjanovich tossed in 22 points and Mike Newlin added 20 to point Houston toward their victory over Cleveland.

Bob Dandridge, with 24 points, led the Milwaukee Bucks, who had 19 more field goals than Phoenix, in their victory over the Suns. The Bucks shot 53 per cent to 35 per cent for the Suns. Oscar Robertson had 19, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 18 and Lucius Allen 16 for the Bukks. Top scorer for Phoenix was Lamar Green, who came off the bench and got 14.

Kennedy McIntosh scored the deciding basket with 11 seconds left as Seattle topped the Bullets. Seattle started the final quarter trailing 83-78 but then got nine unanswered points. The Bullets' drought ended after 2-½, minutes on a field goal by Elvin Hayes, who took game honors with 27 points.

The Bullets' Kevin Porter scored eight of his 14 game points in the final quarter to put the Bullets ahead 102-101 with just 32 seconds left. Seattle then took time out to set up the final play, which resulted in McIntosh's bucket on a pass from Spencer Haywood.

Improved Minnesota Faces 49ers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — 'Tis a much-improved Minnesota Vikings team the San Francisco 49ers face Sunday in a locally televised contest on Channel 5.

The Vikings, unbeaten in four straight games, are favored by six points to hand the 49ers their third loss in five starts. Over the past three seasons, San Francisco has edged the Vikings by scores of 17-10, 13-9 and 20-17.

So don't blame 49er quarterback John Brodie if he keeps his passes short and his running plays frequent. Brodie hasn't thrown a touchdown pass yet this season and the Vikings' front four would hate to have that string broken.

Old pro Ken Willard gets his first start of the season at fullback because of crippling injuries to Larry Schreiber and Jim Thomas. Schreiber is out for the season after knee surgery while Thomas will be on the shelf for another three weeks with a shoulder injury.

So the 49ers must go with running backs Willard, Vic Washington, Doug Cunningham and either Randy Jackson or Dave Atkins.

Minnesota's running attack, meanwhile, has improved from last year mainly due to the addition of rookie Chuck Foreman.

By PAUL DWORIN

Tim Wallmark combined with junior Rick Schroeder last night for two touchdown passes to lead Petaluma High School to a 27-12 North Bay League football victory over Vintage High School in Napa.

The win raised the Trojans' NBL mark to 2-0, putting them in a three-way tie for first with Vallejo and Napa high schools.

In other southern Sonoma prep football action last night, Rancho Cotate High School of Rohnert Park stayed atop the Sonoma County League standings with a 35-0 shellacking of host Sonoma, and Casa Grande of Petaluma dropped a 30-14 non-league game to El Molino in Forestville.

Wallmark's scoring passes to Schroeder covered 22 and 29 yards, the second one on the first play of the second quarter. Wallmark also connected with halfback Mike Maselli for a five-yard touchdown in the final period.

Rancho Cotate upped its SCL mark to 2-0, placing the Cougars in a tie for first with Piner of Santa Rosa. The loss dropped Sonoma's league record to 0-2.

The Cougars struck quickly, scoring three times in the first quarter for an almost insurmountable 20-0 lead. Rancho Cotate got its points on one-yard runs by Ray Jones and Bob Haas, and a six-yard pass from Haas.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Market Shows Some Muscle

NEW YORK (UPI) —The Stock Market showed some muscle this week in face of the Middle East war and Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's resignation.

Prices gained for the week on the New York Stock Exchange, thanks primarily to a big rise Thursday. Trading was heavy.

The market watched "in stunned disbelief" when Agnew resigned Wednesday, according to Monte Gordon of the Dreyfus Fund. Prices had been declining on profit taking at the time, and the Agnew news "accentuated" the activity, Gordon said.

But the list rebounded strongly Thursday. This prompted Martin Goodfriend of Bruns, Nordeman to say, "the market just wants to go higher." Goodfriend said he believes "a lot of mutual funds are buying on weakness and this is a reversal of the trend from the first half of the year."

One thing encouraging observzrs was the breadth of the market's recent gains. Many low price-earnings ratio stocks were being bought. "This shows the strength of the market," Gordon said.

There were some signs of renewed profit taking late Friday, however. "I think we've seen too much too soon," said Ralph Acampora of Harris, Upham. "A correction is definitely due."

Lucien O. Hooper, senior analyst for W.E. Hutton & Co., echoed the opinion. "But, overall, I think the direction of the market is up," he said.

For the week, the Dow Jones industrial average gained 7.38 to 978.63. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index rose 1.59 to 111.44. The NYSE common stock index advanced 1.19 to 60.53.

Advances topped declines, 1,024 to 749, among the 1,986 issues traded.

Turnover for the week amounted to 100,888,007 shares, compwred with 97,197,492 a week before and 59,170,870 a year ago. 4

Westinghouse Electric was the most active issue for the week, off 4 at 34 on 1,160,100 shares. The firm reported lower third quarter earnings.

Bausch & Lomb, which reported thz backlog of orders for its soft contact lenses exceeds its production capacity, was second, soaring 14 ¾ to 52 ⅞ on 1,043,600 shares.

First National City Corp., which reported higher third quarter earnings, was third on the actives and rose ⅞ to 50 ¼ on 704,400 shares.

IBM was the biggest gainer of the week, climbing 22 ½ to 282. Early in the week, a federal judge in Tulsa said he would reconsider the $352.5 million judgement he awarded Telex Corp. in its antitrust suit against IBM, admitting he made an error in the amount of the award. IBM also reported higher earnings. Telex lost ⅝ on the week.

The oils were traded heavily in view of the Middle Eastwar. Many of those with heavy Mideast interest5s declined, while others with outside interests gained.

Ohio Standard rose 14 ¾, Superior Oil 14 ½, Murphy Oil 12, Natomas 9 ½ and Atlantic Richfield 7 ⅞. Mboil Oil lost 3 ⅞, Texaco 3 and Exxon 2 ⅛.

Sedco gained 9 ⅜ and

Plea Change Is Entered On Burglary

A Waldo Point man has changed his plea to guilty on a burglary charge as part of a plea bargain in Marin Superior Court.

In exchange for the admission of guilt Wednesday, Judge Charles Read Best promised William Geoffery Howard, 26, a maximum of a year of confinement, which may be served at a resident drug treatment program.

It was the identical sentence Best passed on Howard's brother, Gary Lee Howard, 24, in July. The two were accused of burglarizing a San Anselmo electronics shop, Sight and Sound, on June 20.

The plea bargain also will dispose of another case pending against Howard, one charging three counts of concealing stolen property.

The property in question, jewelry and stereo equipment, reportedly was stolen June 29 from a house on Rose Avenue in Mill Valley.

Politics' Erosion Of Ideals, Integrity

HOW COULD a fundamentally decent guy like Spiro Agnew get himself into such a monumental mess?

If you observe over a period of many years what often happens to fundamentally decent guys who go into politics, you could make a good guess.

The pattern is something like this:

A bright, honest, energetic young person emerges in a community as something of a leader. He or she is highly altruistic, motivated almost solely by a desire to improve the community and contribute to the general welfare. In short, he or she is an idealist who wants only to make the world a better place in which to live.

Such a person inevitably is recognized as a potential candidate for public office, elective or appointive.

IF HE is elected to the state legislature, he arrives at the capitol with altruism and idealism largely intact, although during an electric campaign he comes to see that there are some things you must reluctantly do because you cannot accomplish your ultimate higher end if you don't get elected.

At the state capitol, initial contact with old-time, big-name legislators comes as something of a shock. The oldtimers are a pretty cynical lot, who obviously pay only lip service (and often not even much of that) to serving the general welfare.

The newcomer finds that he cannot plunge headlong into the job of preparing to vote his convictions. His party caucus makes some demands on him. He cannot go back on some of his strongest supporters, those responsible for his presence in the capitol. He quickly realizes that he must adjust his sights and make some compromises with reality.

THE NEWCOMER learns that there is a "third house" in the legislature, the lobbyists. He finds that these people play an important, essential part in the process. When a complicated, technical piece of legislation is up for consideration, the knowledgeable legislative advocate is often the best source of factual information as to the likely effects of such legislation. He can also tell you who supports it and why. He can tell you why opponents are against it. He can recite the arguments of both sides and the answers to the arguments. In short, he is invaluable. There is no escaping one's dependence upon him.

So long as the new legislator continues to do his own independent study, he will be able to discern which of the lobbyist's arguments are reasonable and which aren't.

But somewhere along the line, he gets too busy to study everything independently and he becomes dependent on those advocates in whom he has faith and confidence. The legislator himself is unaware of this change; he has allowed it to happen so gradually.

PRETTY SOON he begins to see that if you want to get anything done, you need the votes of colleagues. You must support their pet projects so that they will support your efforts when you need their support.

Lobbyists can be helpful in lining up votes. If you want their help, you must give them a hand now and again, too.

It isn't long before a newcomer to Sacramento has almost forgotten the high ideals, commitment to independence and altruism which he brought with him. It is easy to rationalize that one must do the practical things in order to achieve the ultimate altruistic goals.

It takes money to campaign — large amounts of money. Appreciative lobbyists are good sources of campaign contributions. In order to achieve the ultimate, altruistic goals, one finds it increasingly easy to "play ball" with lobbyists, day-to-day.

IT DOESN'T TAKE many years before a fundamentally good guy like Spiro Agnew can sincerely make thundering speeches against crime and corruption while receiving cash payments from those who have benefitted from his official acts.

He has lost his perspective. He has been almost unknowingly corrupted by his environment — his associates and the "rules of the game" in which he is engaged.

A good man has gone wrong. The real tragedy is that he himself doesn't realize it. He thinks he is persecuted — by the Justice Department and by the press.

Every politician might do well to keep ever before him the words of the Scottish poet, Robert Burns:

Oh wad some power the giftie gie us
To see oursels as other see us!
It wad frae monie a blunder free us,
An' follish notion.

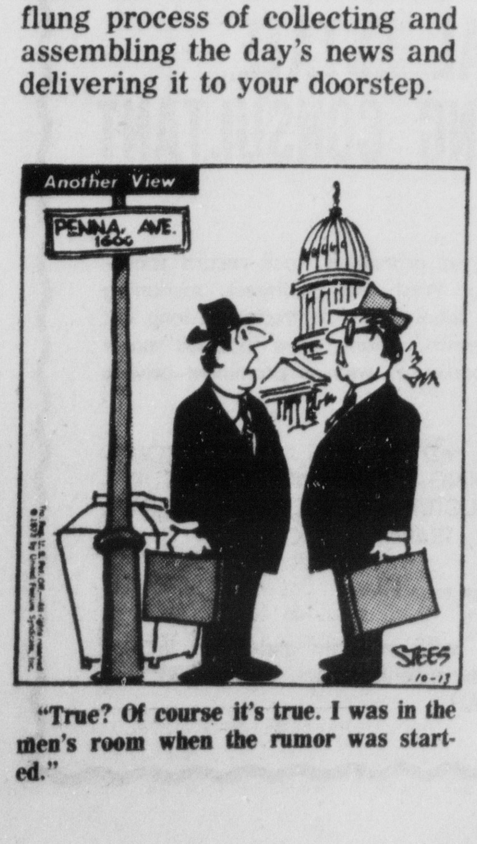
Hats Off To Newspaperboys

Today is Newspaperboy Day, a fitting climax to Newspaper Week.

It is a fitting climax because it is the carrier boy who provides the last link in the far-flung process of collecting and assembling the day's news and delivering it to your doorstep.



"True? Of course it's true. I was in the men's room when the rumor was started."

Without him, all the work of reporters, photographers, editors, printers would be for naught. They are all dependent on the newspaperboy.

Eight hundred of these youngsters — independent dealers all, who buy the papers they deliver to Marin and Sonoma homes — are the carriers who deliver the Independent-Journal, rain or shine.

That's almost a small army. Collectively, these 800 make over 12 million deliveries a year. They use approximately 6,000 pounds of rubber bands a year to put around the folded papers, and about two million poly bags to protect the papers on rainy days.

And — the part of which we and they are proudest — they average less than one complaint per 1,000 deliveries. Few adult businessmen can match that!

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Bike Swap Clears Approximately $1,000

Whistlestop-Wheels is again indebted to the Independent-Journal for the excellent coverage it gave our first bike swap. We would like to report that our take was about double that appearing in the story immediately following the day. In other words, in spite of the rain, and no gas, we will have cleared about $1,000.

We would like to emphasize again that this has not been the efforts of one agency, but the Marin Senior Coordinating Council and the Volunteer Bureau worked with Red Cross, Marin Aid to Retarded Children, Easter Seals, the Sierra Club, Zonta, American Wheelmen and the Highway Patrol, as well as the many public agencies in the county.

You might be interested to know that your volunteers for the day totaled over 60, and came from many helping organizations and the staffs of many agencies.

To each and every one, and to all who brought their bikes and came to buy, and to the many people and business donating prizes, we are truly grateful.

Reagan Ignores Benefits Which Taxes Finance

Governor Reagan's attitude towards taxes seems curious. He appears to believe that taxes, particularly income taxes, are wicked — perhaps that's why he, though a wealthy man, avoids paying them . . .

Seldom in his argument is there a realistic appreciation, or even a mention, of what taxes do for us, the people. Besides furnishing us all kinds of protection: fire, police, health, accident, unemployment, earthquake, natural resources, land abuse and so many more, taxes provide for us all kinds of educational opportunity, from our great university, to education for our blind children, and again, so many more . . .

Yet Governor Reagan is so anxious to reduce taxes, to return these resources to the people, particularly from the income tax which is paid mainly by middle-income and wealthy people. It is useful for us to consider what these people will do with their rebates from the income tax. A few may use them for investment in business or in expansion of our productive capital, though in an era of increasing diminution of the natural resources, continued enlargement of such man-made capital is even questionable.

And a great many of us who might receive this rebate will doubtless spend it just to soften our living — more creative comforts, gadgets, costlier booze, yachts, entertainment (even degrading kinds, such as at North Beach). Governments don't always make the best use of their revenues; but I am not at all sure that individuals make better use of their incomes, for their own or society's benefit . . .

I believe it is primitive and crude to freeze tax limitation into the state constitution . . .

The worst kind of an energy crisis is the one that comes with middleage.

Middleage is the time when your creaking joints make more noise than the whistle in your teakettle.

Middleage is when your Phase IV catches up with you while you're still trying to operate under the rules and regulations of Phases I, II, and III.

What Is Book Without Blurb? Unprintable, That's What It Is

WASHINGTON — One of the most important functions a writer has is to provide blurbs for other writers' books. The blurb business is one of the biggest in the country and it is now estimated that 30,500,226 book blurbs are produced every year in the United States alone.

Everyone has seen book blurbs in advertisements such as "Hym Colderweller has written another 'Godfather,' " or, "Not since 'War and Peace' has anyone caught the spirit of the Women's Liberation Movement better than Sandra Bitter has in 'I Hate You, Marlon Brando.' "

There is a rule in the publishing business that no book can be printed unless the publisher receives 20 blurbs in its favor.

FOR THE PUBLIC unfamiliar with how book blurbs come about, I think I can be of service. When a book is about to be published, the author is asked by the publisher's publicity department to provide a list of friends, perferably well known, who will say something nice about the work before publication.

The publicity department then sends out the galleys to people on the list. "Waldo Kransky has asked me to send you the galleys on his latest book, 'The Fingers That Couldn't Walk Through the Yellow Pages.' Would you kindly send us your comments?"

Now, when I receive the galleys, I am faced with a dilemma. I don't have time to read Kransky's book but, obviously, under the rules of the game I have to provide a blurb. Otherwise when I write a book Kransky won't give me one for my book.

ABOUT FIVE BOOKS back I had neglected to give Kransky a blurb on his less than best seller, "The Sexual Myth of the Seat Belt," and I ran into him at a party. He was very miffed. I explained the reason I didn't give a blurb was his publisher had sent me the typewritten manuscript which was 900 pages and I had dropped it on the floor. I could never get the pages back together in any kind of order.

Kransky found this unacceptable and said he had taken his case to the Author's League, charging me with refusing to give a fellow a book blurb, which is considered one of the most serious crimes a writer can commit.

A few days later, the Author's League ruled in Kransky's favor and I was forbidden to solicit book blurbs from any member of the league for my next book. This was a cruel blow because without any blurbs my publisher saw no reason to advertise my book.

I RIFFLED THROUGH the galleys of "The Fingers That Couldn't Walk Through the Yellow Pages" and then sat down to write the blurb: "Kransky has done it again." I sent it off special delivery to his publisher.

Unfortunately, this was not the only book I had received that week. I had, in fact, gotten 14 galleys of books in the mail. Each required a different favorable quote, which wasn't easy since I had no intention of reading any of them.

I may not have made such a great effort except that I have a new book coming out this fall and I have been soliciting blurbs for myself. I knew the quality of the blurbs I would get was dependent on the quality of blurbs I wrote.

I spent all last week working on book blurbs for friends' books. It took me a day to come up with "Dynamite!" for a book on dieting, but only an hour to come up with "Eat your heart out, Norman Mailer," for Maynard Bowditch's new biography titled "I Never Knew Marilyn Monroe, Either."

There is some talk I may be nominated for a National Book Blurb Award this year. I hope so because it would really kill Kransky.

Theological Look At Watergate: Is It A Judgment On America?

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) —As the television lights dim on the quest by senators and lawyers for the facts about Watergate, some of the nation's theologians are beginning to ruminate about its meaning for American national life.

There is, of course, no unanimity on what that meaning is but there does seem to be a consensus that the moral meaning of Watergate touches everyone, not just those facing prison or loss of jobs.

ACCORDING TO Harry K. Gutmann, chairman of the board of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, "Watergate should have made it clear that there is no separation between private and public morals."

A colleague of Gutmann's, Albert Vorspan, director of the same group's Commission of Social Action, said that not only is Watergate a profound legal and constitutional crisis, "but it is also a moral crisis for the American people."

In a booklet prepared for Reform Judaism's marking of the High Holidays, Vorspan said: "Nothing on the current religious and interreligious agenda is more urgent than to look fearlessly beneath the cesspool of Watergate at the gods we Americans worship...

"Every institution in America must re-examine itself and its failures in the harsh light of Watergate."

THE ECUMENICAL magazine Christian Century conducted a poll of religious leaders on the subject and many of the responses echoed Vorspan.

Robert McAfee Brown, professor of religious studies at Stanford University, defined the Watergate issues as those of power and idolatry.

"These themes ... are familiar themes in theological history," he said, "and the prophetic tradition of the Hebrew Scriptures provides us ... with an interfaith base from which to begin to rebuild."

Theologian Gabriel Fackre of the United Church of Christ called "White House religion" a factor creating an atmosphere where Watergate could happen.

He said this "White House religion insulates the leaders of government from the prophetic word."

EVANGELIST BILLY GRAHAM, the clergyman perhaps closest to President Nixon, has avoided making judgments about Watergate although he has praised the press for making the affair public.

In remarks at the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., Graham said:

"After the Vietnam war we thought we were coming back in unity and then suddenly were pulled apart by Watergate. It all seems to be a part —or so it seemed to me —of what could possibly be a judgment of God on America."

At least one theologian — Roman Catholic writer Michael Novak, who also serves as consultant to the Rockefeller Foundation —warned against moralizing about the affair.

Writing in the Christian Century symposium, Novak said: "Ironically, our greatest enemy is not cynicism but moralism.

"The worst fruit of Watergate is a fever of moralism. Moralism is our most dangerous national weakness, the sickness infecting everything we attempt."

Nor did the church escape judgment for Watergate. The past president of the National Council of Churches, Cynthia Wedel, said the church must look at itself in light of the scandal: "If we can see ourselves reflected there, perhaps we can find ways to change what must be changed in our society. If the voice of the church could be strong and clear on this, the church might regain its soul."

From Lindbergh To Skylab: Remarkable Story Of America

WASHINGTON — As a measure of the fantastic changes that have occurred in this amazing century, take a look at the plane that Charles A. Lindbergh flew in the first solo flight across the Atlantic. The year was 1927, not so long ago but that many of us can still remember the excitement when the lone flyer landed at Le Bourget airport in Paris at the end of his 33½-hour solo.

There it hangs in the Smithsonian Institution, a single-engine plane looking incredibly small. There, too, is the Wright brothers plane from Kitty Hawk in 1903, more nearly a manned kite than an aircraft. The record of America's technological progress has gone forward from those two monuments almost without interruption. The doubters, as Lindbergh doubted in 1941 President Roosevelt's claim to be able to manufacture 50,000 warplanes, have always been proved wrong.

CONSIDER THE RECORD. Three astronauts have just completed 59 days in space in the Skylab. Another crew will go up on Nov. 11 to spend 56 days in the laboratory, although their stay could be longer depending on circumstances.

Work is already in progress on a space shuttle to be operational in the 1980s. This will have a continuing function with a projected use of a hundred round trips between earth and the stratosphere. It will be able to stay aloft from seven to 30 days, during which time earth-orbiting payloads can be launched. The cost sounds stratospheric — $5.1 billion for the space shuttle — yet put alongside the bill for the weapons of annihilation the Pentagon demands, it is not so large.

As for the scientific benefits, perhaps only a few specialists in the space field can give a proper evaluation. But the cynics who spoke derisively of spending billions to put some clown in the sky are wrong on several scores. Landing on the moon was not so much like the justification for climbing Mt. Everest — because it was there — as an exploration comparable to Columbus' discovery of the New World.

What is to be gained from that sterile, dead planet? the scoffers ask. The discoverers of that other era were met with the same doubts and derision. Better leave those empty places to a few Indians.

ON THE AIRCRAFT production side the record is equally impressive. Seventy-nine per cent of the planes in operation on the world's airlines in 1972 were made in America. This does not include the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China, but their inclusion would make little difference. China is about to acquire 10 Boeing 707s.

On military aircraft the figure is difficult to come by. It seems likely, however, that the percentage would be about the same as for civilian sales, although in recent years the French have been pushing their planes in the Middle East and in Africa.

American technology in computers and electronics is unrivaled. This is one reason the Soviet Union is so anxious for a trade deal. Unrivaled, too, is productivity on the farms. With about four per cent of the population in agriculture, the abundance of food and fiber suffices not only for consumers at home but for sales overseas to help correct the trade imbalance and, as has been shown in the past year, to be dissipated in deals costly to the United States taxpayer.

THE GREAT ACHIEVEMENTS in production, in discovery and invention, are in painful contrast to the failures in self-government illustrated by the grim mess in Washington. It may not be too much to say that if we find a way out of the morass — the swamp of intrigue, deceit and doubt — it will be thanks to American productivity.

A painful fact of contemporary life is that social and political understanding have fallen behind technological change on an order of magnitude like the discovery in millennia long since past of the wheel. The hazards of this gap are dramatized by the individual who has his finger on the nuclear button and his social reflexes back in another age. Aspects of the Stone Age are a leftover in the mind of computerized 20th Century man.

The Smithsonian Institution is building a new Air and Space Museum that is to be dedicated on July 4, 1976. The Wright brothers plane and Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis will be central exhibits illustrating how in an eye wink of time, as measured sidereally, change has come. That no one can predict what manner of man will preside over that occasion is a melancholy commentary on the gap between technology and politics.

We would like to emphasize again that this has not been the efforts of one agency, but the Marin Senior Coordinating Council and the Volunteer Bureau worked with Red Cross, Marin Aid to Retarded Children, Easter Seals, the Sierra Club, Zonta, American Wheelmen and the Highway Patrol, as well as the many public agencies in the county.

You might be interested to know that your volunteers for the day totaled over 60, and came from many helping organizations and the staffs of many agencies.

To each and every one, and to all who brought their bikes and came to buy, and to the many people and business donating prizes, we are truly grateful.

Reagan Ignores Benefits Which Taxes Finance

Governor Reagan's attitude towards taxes seems curious. He appears to believe that taxes, particularly income taxes, are wicked — perhaps that's why he, though a wealthy man, avoids paying them . . .

Seldom in his argument is there a realistic appreciation, or even a mention, of what taxes do for us, the people. Besides furnishing us all kinds of protection: fire, police, health, accident, unemployment, earthquake, natural resources, land abuse and so many more, taxes provide for us all kinds of educational opportunity, from our great university, to education for our blind children, and again, so many more . . .

Yet Governor Reagan is so anxious to reduce taxes, to return these resources to the people, particularly from the income tax which is paid mainly by middle-income and wealthy people. It is useful for us to consider what these people will do with their rebates from the income tax. A few may use them for investment in business or in expansion of our productive capital, though in an era of increasing diminution of the natural resources, continued enlargement of such man-made capital is even questionable.

And a great many of us who might receive this rebate will doubtless spend it just to soften our living — more creative comforts, gadgets, costlier booze, yachts, entertainment (even degrading kinds, such as at North Beach). Governments don't always make the best use of their revenues; but I am not at all sure that individuals make better use of their incomes, for their own or society's benefit . . .

I believe it is primitive and crude to freeze tax limitation into the state constitution . . .

What Is Book Without Blurb? Unprintable, That's What It Is

WASHINGTON — One of the most important functions a writer has is to provide blurbs for other writers' books. The blurb business is one of the biggest in the country and it is now estimated that 30,500,226 book blurbs are produced every year in the United States alone.

Everyone has seen book blurbs in advertisements such as "Hym Colderweller has written another 'Godfather,' " or, "Not since 'War and Peace' has anyone caught the spirit of the Women's Liberation Movement better than Sandra Bitter has in 'I Hate You, Marlon Brando.' "

There is a rule in the publishing business that no book can be printed unless the publisher receives 20 blurbs in its favor.

FOR THE PUBLIC unfamiliar with how book blurbs come about, I think I can be of service. When a book is about to be published, the author is asked by the publisher's publicity department to provide a list of friends, perferably well known, who will say something nice about the work before publication.

The publicity department then sends out the galleys to people on the list. "Waldo Kransky has asked me to send you the galleys on his latest book, 'The Fingers That Couldn't Walk Through the Yellow Pages.' Would you kindly send us your comments?"

Now, when I receive the galleys, I am faced with a dilemma. I don't have time to read Kransky's book but, obviously, under the rules of the game I have to provide a blurb. Otherwise when I write a book Kransky won't give me one for my book.

ABOUT FIVE BOOKS back I had neglected to give Kransky a blurb on his less than best seller, "The Sexual Myth of the Seat Belt," and I ran into him at a party. He was very miffed. I explained the reason I didn't give a blurb was his publisher had sent me the typewritten manuscript which was 900 pages and I had dropped it on the floor. I could never get the pages back together in any kind of order.

Kransky found this unacceptable and said he had taken his case to the Author's League, charging me with refusing to give a fellow a book blurb, which is considered one of the most serious crimes a writer can commit.

A few days later, the Author's League ruled in Kransky's favor and I was forbidden to solicit book blurbs from any member of the league for my next book. This was a cruel blow because without any blurbs my publisher saw no reason to advertise my book.

I RIFFLED THROUGH the galleys of "The Fingers That Couldn't Walk Through the Yellow Pages" and then sat down to write the blurb: "Kransky has done it again." I sent it off special delivery to his publisher.

Unfortunately, this was not the only book I had received that week. I had, in fact, gotten 14 galleys of books in the mail. Each required a different favorable quote, which wasn't easy since I had no intention of reading any of them.

I may not have made such a great effort except that I have a new book coming out this fall and I have been soliciting blurbs for myself. I knew the quality of the blurbs I would get was dependent on the quality of blurbs I wrote.

I spent all last week working on book blurbs for friends' books. It took me a day to come up with "Dynamite!" for a book on dieting, but only an hour to come up with "Eat your heart out, Norman Mailer," for Maynard Bowditch's new biography titled "I Never Knew Marilyn Monroe, Either."

There is some talk I may be nominated for a National Book Blurb Award this year. I hope so because it would really kill Kransky.

Theological Look At Watergate: Is It A Judgment On America?

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) —As the television lights dim on the quest by senators and lawyers for the facts about Watergate, some of the nation's theologians are beginning to ruminate about its meaning for American national life.

There is, of course, no unanimity on what that meaning is but there does seem to be a consensus that the moral meaning of Watergate touches everyone, not just those facing prison or loss of jobs.

ACCORDING TO Harry K. Gutmann, chairman of the board of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, "Watergate should have made it clear that there is no separation between private and public morals."

A colleague of Gutmann's, Albert Vorspan, director of the same group's Commission of Social Action, said that not only is Watergate a profound legal and constitutional crisis, "but it is also a moral crisis for the American people."

In a booklet prepared for Reform Judaism's marking of the High Holidays, Vorspan said: "Nothing on the current religious and interreligious agenda is more urgent than to look fearlessly beneath the cesspool of Watergate at the gods we Americans worship...

"Every institution in America must re-examine itself and its failures in the harsh light of Watergate."

THE ECUMENICAL magazine Christian Century conducted a poll of religious leaders on the subject and many of the responses echoed Vorspan.

Robert McAfee Brown, professor of religious studies at Stanford University, defined the Watergate issues as those of power and idolatry.

"These themes ... are familiar themes in theological history," he said, "and the prophetic tradition of the Hebrew Scriptures provides us ... with an interfaith base from which to begin to rebuild."

Theologian Gabriel Fackre of the United Church of Christ called "White House religion" a factor creating an atmosphere where Watergate could happen.

He said this "White House religion insulates the leaders of government from the prophetic word."

EVANGELIST BILLY GRAHAM, the clergyman perhaps closest to President Nixon, has avoided making judgments about Watergate although he has praised the press for making the affair public.

In remarks at the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., Graham said:

"After the Vietnam war we thought we were coming back in unity and then suddenly were pulled apart by Watergate. It all seems to be a part —or so it seemed to me —of what could possibly be a judgment of God on America."

At least one theologian — Roman Catholic writer Michael Novak, who also serves as consultant to the Rockefeller Foundation —warned against moralizing about the affair.

Writing in the Christian Century symposium, Novak said: "Ironically, our greatest enemy is not cynicism but moralism.

"The worst fruit of Watergate is a fever of moralism. Moralism is our most dangerous national weakness, the sickness infecting everything we attempt."

Nor did the church escape judgment for Watergate. The past president of the National Council of Churches, Cynthia Wedel, said the church must look at itself in light of the scandal: "If we can see ourselves reflected there, perhaps we can find ways to change what must be changed in our society. If the voice of the church could be strong and clear on this, the church might regain its soul."

MARQUIS CHILDS

WASHINGTON — As a measure of the fantastic changes that have occurred in this amazing century, take a look at the plane that Charles A. Lindbergh flew in the first solo flight across the Atlantic. The year was 1927, not so long ago but that many of us can still remember the excitement when the lone flyer landed at Le Bourget airport in Paris at the end of his 33½-hour solo.

There it hangs in the Smithsonian Institution, a single-engine plane looking incredibly small. There, too, is the Wright brothers plane from Kitty Hawk in 1903, more nearly a manned kite than an aircraft. The record of America's technological progress has gone forward from those two monuments almost without interruption. The doubters, as Lindbergh doubted in 1941 President Roosevelt's claim to be able to manufacture 50,000 warplanes, have always been proved wrong.

CONSIDER THE RECORD. Three astronauts have just completed 59 days in space in the Skylab. Another crew will go up on Nov. 11 to spend 56 days in the laboratory, although their stay could be longer depending on circumstances.

Work is already in progress on a space shuttle to be operational in the 1980s. This will have a continuing function with a projected use of a hundred round trips between earth and the stratosphere. It will be able to stay aloft from seven to 30 days, during which time earth-orbiting payloads can be launched. The cost sounds stratospheric — $5.1 billion for the space shuttle — yet put alongside the bill for the weapons of annihilation the Pentagon demands, it is not so large.

As for the scientific benefits, perhaps only a few specialists in the space field can give a proper evaluation. But the cynics who spoke derisively of spending billions to put some clown in the sky are wrong on several scores. Landing on the moon was not so much like the justification for climbing Mt. Everest — because it was there — as an exploration comparable to Columbus' discovery of the New World.

What is to be gained from that sterile, dead planet? the scoffers ask. The discoverers of that other era were met with the same doubts and derision. Better leave those empty places to a few Indians.

ON THE AIRCRAFT production side the record is equally impressive. Seventy-nine per cent of the planes in operation on the world's airlines in 1972 were made in America. This does not include the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China, but their inclusion would make little difference. China is about to acquire 10 Boeing 707s.

On military aircraft the figure is difficult to come by. It seems likely, however, that the percentage would be about the same as for civilian sales, although in recent years the French have been pushing their planes in the Middle East and in Africa.

American technology in computers and electronics is unrivaled. This is one reason the Soviet Union is so anxious for a trade deal. Unrivaled, too, is productivity on the farms. With about four per cent of the population in agriculture, the abundance of food and fiber suffices not only for consumers at home but for sales overseas to help correct the trade imbalance and, as has been shown in the past year, to be dissipated in deals costly to the United States taxpayer.

THE GREAT ACHIEVEMENTS in production, in discovery and invention, are in painful contrast to the failures in self-government illustrated by the grim mess in Washington. It may not be too much to say that if we find a way out of the morass — the swamp of intrigue, deceit and doubt — it will be thanks to American productivity.

A painful fact of contemporary life is that social and political understanding have fallen behind technological change on an order of magnitude like the discovery in millennia long since past of the wheel. The hazards of this gap are dramatized by the individual who has his finger on the nuclear button and his social reflexes back in another age. Aspects of the Stone Age are a leftover in the mind of computerized 20th Century man.

The Smithsonian Institution is building a new Air and Space Museum that is to be dedicated on July 4, 1976. The Wright brothers plane and Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis will be central exhibits illustrating how in an eye wink of time, as measured sidereally, change has come. That no one can predict what manner of man will preside over that occasion is a melancholy commentary on the gap between technology and politics.

Moscow On Rebound To Strengthen Mideast Ties

By PAUL WOHL
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

After seeing its personnel pull out of Egypt and Syria just before the latest Middle East war erupted, Moscow now is strengthening its position again in Arab countries.

It is reaching out to the Arabs with both words and deeds.

American officials in Washington disclosed Wednesday that the Soviet Union appeared to be airlifting new war supplies to Egypt and Syria. Already, of course, the two Arab countries are armed largely with Soviet-supplied weaponry — including the SAM-6 missile which has downed most of the Israeli jets shot down so far.

Earlier, Leonid I. Brezhnev sent a letter to Algerian President Boumedienne in which he urged the Arabs to "provide the greatest possible support to Egypt and Syria in their battle with Israel."

But the Soviet party leader's interventions in the war — with words and supplies — have been accompanied by soothing statements from Soviet diplomats in Washington, an unpublished letter to President Nixon, and a very low key reaction to the Israeli bombing of a Soviet cultural center in Damascus.

Moscow also has fervently denied a report that it gave Israel several days' warning of the joint Arab attack. The denial was issued by the official news agency Tass Oct. 9. French and Israeli officials in Paris, through which the warning was said to have been passed, also dismissed the report as unfounded.

Moscow seems to want to prove that it remains steadfast in backing "progressive" forces while taking care not to let its cornerstone policy of detente with Washington be sacrificed in a Middle East conflict.

By sending his pointed letter to President Boumedienne (who recently presided over the gathering of non-aligned nations in Algiers), Brezhnev gave evidence to intraparty critics at home that the extension of economic and technical contacts with the West cannot be interpreted as a withdrawal from the principles of Marxism-Leninism.

The Soviet leader also may have wished to offset the effects of Egyptian Vice-President Hasayn As-Shafi's visit to Peking of Sept. 21, which offered Premier Chou En-lai an opportunity to denounce the superpowers' policy of maintaining the state of "no war no peace in the Middle East" and to pay tribute to the heroism of the Arab people.

While Brezhnev's letter to Boumedienne emphasized that the present conflict "touches vital interests of all Arab countries," it also pictured the struggle as one in which the fate of the progressive Arab countries was at stake. In other words, the Soviet leader wished to emphasize the Kremlin's interest in strengthening those Arab regimes whose "social economic policies" jibe with the political aims of communism.

Last but not least, Brezhnev's appeal to Algeria was a veiled warning to the U.S. that Soviet influence in the Middle East is a major factor which Washington must take into account if the new international policy of detente initiated in San Clemente is to be a success.

Moscow's New Times has highlighted the passage in the Soviet-American communique (on Brezhnev's visit to the United States) that Washington would "take account of the lawful interest of the Palestinian people when negotiating a settlement in the Middle East."

This quotation from the communique is printed by New Times as part of an interview with the general secretary of the National Front of the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen. The article hails what it calls this change in the United States position as a result of the principled line pursued by the Soviet Union.

In this context it is noteworthy that Soviet periodicals more than ever insist that Moscow's foreign and domestic policies are one.

This was brought out in three long articles in the September issue of the monthly "International Life" about "bold and promising new departures of Soviet policy in the sense of Marxism-Leninism."

The Soviet leaders have been careful not to pin the blame for outbreak of hostilities specifically on the Israeli government. Even in this message to Boumedienne, the Soviet secretary general stopped short of saying that Israel had initiated the fighting.

Only in a general way was "Israeli aggression and provocation" said to be the source of the outbreak of the current conflict.

Since the war, according to Israeli leaders, is taking on the character of the war of attrition, the fighting is likely to continue for some time.

With Moscow on record as the defender of "the vital interests of all Arab countries," the Kremlin can expect Washington to spare no effort to enlist Soviet cooperation in bringing about a settlement.

Such cooperation, naturally, would have its price, which under present conditions would surely be the American granting of most favored nation treatment the USSR, which is essential for Soviet political and economic plans.

MRS. HALE BOGGS

WASHINGTON — The nameplate on the door to congressional office 1507 tells a lot about the new Louisiana occupant: "Lindy (Mrs. Hale) Boggs."

The wife of the former majority leader of the U.S. House of Representatives, who disappeared on a flight over Alaska last fall, Mrs. Boggs ran for Congress and was elected to succeed her husband.

Carrying on her husband's job and spirit, Lindy Boggs says disarmingly: "The only thing that almost stopped me was that I didn't know how I could do it without a wife."

Here is the story of a wife and mother whose life has been reconstructed in the image of the man whose life she shared. "At first, the whole idea of running for Hale's seat was abhorrent to me." No wife, she thought, could step into the shoes of a man so successful at his job.

What finally persuaded Mrs. Boggs to accept the challenge urged on her by the majority leader's Louisiana supporters was the knowledge that she had campaigned successfully for her husband in the 1972 primary.

"As it turned out, it was fortuitous that Hale's duties as the House majority leader had kept him in Washington," she recalls. "For the third time in three elections we had been redistricted. Many small political factions had been added to the constituency he represented. Hale sent me into the new inner city district to campaign for him. I went in as a professional representing Hale, rather than as his wife."

Since her election to the House of Representatives, she has found her experiences as a politician's wife useful in many ways.

Having "agonized with Hale over many a vote" during his 32 years on Capitol Hill, Lindy Boggs now finds herself on the same committee to which her husband was assigned as a freshman congressman: the House Banking and Currency Committee.

"I was thrilled," says Mrs. Boggs, whose urban district includes much of the banking and business community of downtown New Orleans as well as three designated poverty areas that she hopes to help with housing and urban renewal legislation. One of her first votes on their behalf was to help extend the anti-inflationary wage and price control law.

Besides housing, a field in which her husband pioneered in federal legislation for the inner-city poor, Mrs. Boggs has a special interest in finding ways to bring professional volunteers into the mainstream of community rehabilitation and development.

Her own experience as a voluntary worker, including responsibility for enlisting the first 500,000 volunteers in the national Head Start teaching program, convinces her that volunteers who are professional in every way except that they receive no pay should be allowed tax deductions "to upgrade the status and worth of professional volunteerism."

Such a plan, she says, would encourage public and private agencies to make better use of professional skills available through volunteers and persuade more wives and young people to share their professional and technical talents.

Mrs. Boggs has already testified before the House Ways and Means Committee on three bills proposing maximum exemptions, ranging from $700 to $2,000, for voluntary work evaluated at $2 an hour.

As Louisiana's first congresswoman, and one of the few congressional wives to succeed their husbands in the House of Representatives, Mrs. Boggs says she is carrying on the family's "complete and total" love for the House.

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Spiro T. Agnew resigned in disgrace, trading the vice presidency for a light sentence on a tax evasion charge.

In the Mideast, Egypt and Syria made quick early gains in the latest Mideast war, but by week's end the Syrians had been pushed off the Golan Heights after a large-scale tank battle and the Israelis were advancing on Damascus. The Egyptians took back the east bank of the Sinai Canal, which Israel had held for six years, and moved deeper into the Sinai Peninsula.

Agnew said he mwde his nolo contendere plea, tantamount to pleading guilty, to the tax charge to save his family and the nation the pain of a drawnout constitutional fight and a possible trial resulting from an investigation of kickbacks by government contractors.

After Agnew announced his resignation, the Justice Department released a 40-page summary documenting charges that he had asked for and received at least $85,000 in cash payments from the Maryland contractors, some of it while he was vice president.

U.S. District Court Judge Walter E. Hoffman fined Agnew $10,000 and placed him on three years' unsupervised probation.

The Mideast war, the fourth since Israel gained statehood in 1948, began at almost the same time on both fronts Saturday, which was Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement and the holiest day on the Hebrew calender. It was also Ramadan, the Moslem holy month.

Egyptian troops threw 11 pontoon bridges across the 102-mile Suez canal in the first day of fighting. By Friday they had pushed the Israelis out of their battles as bloody as any since World War II.

Losses on both sides were described as very heavy. Pentagon sources said the Egyptians and Israelis had each lost about 400 tanks and the Syrians perhaps 300. That would amount to a fifth of Egypt's armor, a quarter of Israel's and half of Syria's.

The sources said all three countries had lost about 80 to 100 planes each, or about a sixth of Egypt's airfleet, a fifth of Israel's and a quarter of Syria's.

President Nixon conferred with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and started a quiet diplomatic campaign to try to stop the fighting. The U.N. Security Council met three times to talk about the war, but came to no conclusion.

elaborate, underground fortifications overlooking the closed waterway to a line anywhere from six to 14 miles back into the desert Israel took in the six-day war of 1967.

Military analysts said it appeared Israel was devoting less attention to Egypt than it was to Syria, hoping to knock its weaker enemy out of the war before taking on Egypt.

In the first few days of the war, Israel, apparently caught off guard, moved back from the cease-fire lines that were set in 1967. The relatively light forces guarding the borders gave up much of the 40-mile-long Golan Heights.

Israel then called up most of its reserves and moved to the offensive, crossing into Syria itelf after a series of tank

MRS. HALE BOGGS

WASHINGTON — The nameplate on the door to congressional office 1507 tells a lot about the new Louisiana occupant: "Lindy (Mrs. Hale) Boggs."

The wife of the former majority leader of the U.S. House of Representatives, who disappeared on a flight over Alaska last fall, Mrs. Boggs ran for Congress and was elected to succeed her husband.

Carrying on her husband's job and spirit, Lindy Boggs says disarmingly: "The only thing that almost stopped me was that I didn't know how I could do it without a wife."

Here is the story of a wife and mother whose life has been reconstructed in the image of the man whose life she shared. "At first, the whole idea of running for Hale's seat was abhorrent to me." No wife, she thought, could step into the shoes of a man so successful at his job.

What finally persuaded Mrs. Boggs to accept the challenge urged on her by the majority leader's Louisiana supporters was the knowledge that she had campaigned successfully for her husband in the 1972 primary.

"As it turned out, it was fortuitous that Hale's duties as the House majority leader had kept him in Washington," she recalls. "For the third time in three elections we had been redistricted. Many small political factions had been added to the constituency he represented. Hale sent me into the new inner city district to campaign for him. I went in as a professional representing Hale, rather than as his wife."

Since her election to the House of Representatives, she has found her experiences as a politician's wife useful in many ways.

Having "agonized with Hale over many a vote" during his 32 years on Capitol Hill, Lindy Boggs now finds herself on the same committee to which her husband was assigned as a freshman congressman: the House Banking and Currency Committee.

"I was thrilled," says Mrs. Boggs, whose urban district includes much of the banking and business community of downtown New Orleans as well as three designated poverty areas that she hopes to help with housing and urban renewal legislation. One of her first votes on their behalf was to help extend the anti-inflationary wage and price control law.

Besides housing, a field in which her husband pioneered in federal legislation for the inner-city poor, Mrs. Boggs has a special interest in finding ways to bring professional volunteers into the mainstream of community rehabilitation and development.

Her own experience as a voluntary worker, including responsibility for enlisting the first 500,000 volunteers in the national Head Start teaching program, convinces her that volunteers who are professional in every way except that they receive no pay should be allowed tax deductions "to upgrade the status and worth of professional volunteerism."

Such a plan, she says, would encourage public and private agencies to make better use of professional skills available through volunteers and persuade more wives and young people to share their professional and technical talents.

Mrs. Boggs has already testified before the House Ways and Means Committee on three bills proposing maximum exemptions, ranging from $700 to $2,000, for voluntary work evaluated at $2 an hour.

As Louisiana's first congresswoman, and one of the few congressional wives to succeed their husbands in the House of Representatives, Mrs. Boggs says she is carrying on the family's "complete and total" love for the House.

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Spiro T. Agnew resigned in disgrace, trading the vice presidency for a light sentence on a tax evasion charge.

In the Mideast, Egypt and Syria made quick early gains in the latest Mideast war, but by week's end the Syrians had been pushed off the Golan Heights after a large-scale tank battle and the Israelis were advancing on Damascus. The Egyptians took back the east bank of the Sinai Canal, which Israel had held for six years, and moved deeper into the Sinai Peninsula.

Agnew said he mwde his nolo contendere plea, tantamount to pleading guilty, to the tax charge to save his family and the nation the pain of a drawnout constitutional fight and a possible trial resulting from an investigation of kickbacks by government contractors.

After Agnew announced his resignation, the Justice Department released a 40-page summary documenting charges that he had asked for and received at least $85,000 in cash payments from the Maryland contractors, some of it while he was vice president.

U.S. District Court Judge Walter E. Hoffman fined Agnew $10,000 and placed him on three years' unsupervised probation.

The Mideast war, the fourth since Israel gained statehood in 1948, began at almost the same time on both fronts Saturday, which was Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement and the holiest day on the Hebrew calender. It was also Ramadan, the Moslem holy month.

Egyptian troops threw 11 pontoon bridges across the 102-mile Suez canal in the first day of fighting. By Friday they had pushed the Israelis out of their battles as bloody as any since World War II.

Losses on both sides were described as very heavy. Pentagon sources said the Egyptians and Israelis had each lost about 400 tanks and the Syrians perhaps 300. That would amount to a fifth of Egypt's armor, a quarter of Israel's and half of Syria's.

The sources said all three countries had lost about 80 to 100 planes each, or about a sixth of Egypt's airfleet, a fifth of Israel's and a quarter of Syria's.

President Nixon conferred with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and started a quiet diplomatic campaign to try to stop the fighting. The U.N. Security Council met three times to talk about the war, but came to no conclusion.

elaborate, underground fortifications overlooking the closed waterway to a line anywhere from six to 14 miles back into the desert Israel took in the six-day war of 1967.

Military analysts said it appeared Israel was devoting less attention to Egypt than it was to Syria, hoping to knock its weaker enemy out of the war before taking on Egypt.

In the first few days of the war, Israel, apparently caught off guard, moved back from the cease-fire lines that were set in 1967. The relatively light forces guarding the borders gave up much of the 40-mile-long Golan Heights.

Israel then called up most of its reserves and moved to the offensive, crossing into Syria itelf after a series of tank

Rosh Hoshanah Observed At Prison

On Monday, Oct. 1, the gates of San Quentin, California's oldest and most notorious prison, swung open to admit more than 150 men and women from the Bay Area's Jewish communities to join 75 convicts in Rosh Hoshanah services. Traditionally regarded as the beginning of the new year for Jews, this Rosh Hoshanah marks the 5734 year of Jewish history.

Services were conducted by Rabbi David Davis, leader of both the prison's Congregation Beth Shalom and Temple Rodef Shalom of San Rafael. Taking active part in the ceremonies were members of Rodef Shalom's choir under the direction of Mrs. Elsie Krinitski. Her husband, David, was the flute soloist. Arthur Lincoln of Santa Barbara was cantor for the evening and Dr. Warren G. Kleinmaier of San Rafael sounded the traditional shofar, (ram's horn) warnings.

In the sermon delivered to the combined congregations, Rabbi Davis said, in part, "... we are here together as friends, as co-religionists, as people who are concerned with making our world a better place to live in." Rabbi Davis has been involved with the prison congregation for nearly three years in which he has made great strides in bringing the two vastly different congregations together.

The presidents of both congregations spoke to the group. Pete Gasper, inmate president of the prison temple, said, "We thank you for coming to be with us tonight. Without your presence it would be less than a joyous Rosh Hoshanah. Your warmth and sharing fulfills the meaning of this day."

Fred Kirschner, president of Temple Rodef Shalom, spoke of the interchange between the two groups, and the support that each gives the other, making brotherhood a reality rather than a word. The two groups have been working together for years and many members of the prison congregation have received help in re-entering society through the various Jewish organizations throughout the area.

Many men affiliated with the prison temple are not, themselves, Jewish, but regard the congenial atmosphere, intellectual stimulation and companionship as a place of calm and quiet to retreat to from the turbulence of the prison yard. Recently they donated art and handicraft items to the San Rafael temple to raise funds to send local children to Isreal for a summer.

Among the many notable present for the services and dinner were Scott Kahn, president of the San Francisco Jewish Men's Club, members of the board of directors of the Jewish Family Service, Irv Kermish, branch director for the Marin JFS, Mrs. Rose Rapping, and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Gay III.

After the services, the two congregations adjourned to the prison's south dining hall where they dined on a meal of Swiss steak and matzo ball soup prepared by the inmate cooks, and spent an hour socializing.

Monday, Oct. 8 the choir and other members of Rodef Shalom returned to the prison to take part in the Yom Kippur services.

Jews For Jesus Singing Group To Be At Church Of Open Door

The Liberated Wailing Wall, a singing group made up of six local members of the Jews for Jesus movement, will present song and testimony at the Church of the Open Door, 177 E. Blithedale, at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

The group just came back to Marin County after a nation-wide tour. They appeared in churches and rallies at Dallas, Baltimore, New York, and other major cities.

The group's music is unique, combining Jewish melodies and a Christian message. In the course of their presentation, The Liberated Wailing Wall will do a parody and skit based on the "Tradition" song from "Fiddler on the Roof." They attempt to show how tradition affects the individual Jew in his views concerning the idea of a Jew believing in Jesus.

Program Series Will Take A Look At Death

A series of programs on "Seeing Death As a Part Of Life" will be presented at the First Presbyterian Church in San Anselmo beginning tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. Subsequent programs will be on Oct. 21 and 28.

Each Sunday evening program will present a different aspect of the subject of death and dying. The first meeting will be a panel presentation by a doctor, a minister, and a lawyer. The panel members will be Dr. James Dahl, (doctor); Howard Rice (minister); and Edmond Ward (lawyer).

The second program will present a more personal view of death by means of a film and small discussion groups. The third program will deal with a Christian's view of death and be led by John Najarian, minister of the church.

Dr. Edward Stein To Give Sermon

Dr. Edward V. Stein, professor of pastoral psychology at the San Francisco Theological Seminary, will preach the sermon at the Sleepy Hollow Presbyterian Church tomorrow.

Dr. Stein has recently returned from Zurich, Switzerland, where he studied during a sabbatic year at the Jung Institute. An author as well as a seminary professor, Dr. Stein's most recent book is "Beyond Guilt." He resides with his family in San Anselmo.

Dr. Stein has chosen for his sermon title: "Cotton Patch Faith." Services begin at 10:30 a.m. in the church building at 100 Tarry Road, in Sleepy Hollow.

OF GOD AND MAN

Still Reason To Rejoice

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The Bible has a word of advice for all Christians who have become pessimistic or cynical about the state of the world.

The word is: Rejoice.

Taking a joyful attitude toward life under difficult and discouraging circumstances is as much a Christian duty as loving the unlovable.

"Both to love and to rejoice can be natural reactions to pleasant and happy occasions," says the Rev. Catherine Gunsalus, associate professor of historical theology at Louisville (Ky.) Presbyterian Seminary. "Under these conditions, love and joy are caused by the external situation. When that situation changes, our love and our joy may end. But the Christian gospel begins at this point —when the world around us is not loving to us and does not smoothly greet us. At such a time, the gospel says to us, 'Continue to love, continue to rejoice ... even when such a spirit seems to make no sense at all.'"

Under far more difficult circumstances than any we face today, St. Paul admonished the early Christians at Phillipi:

"Rejoice in the Lord always. Again I say, rejoice."

In another of his letters, to persecuted believers at Thessalonica, Paul said:

"Be joyful always ... Be thankful in all circumstances. This is what God wants of you ..."

But how can a Christian be joyous when he sees all about him trouble and despair, things going from bad to worse?

He can lift up his eyes from the mess in Washington and the wreckage of his family budget, and look at the stars which bedeck the night sky like diamonds on dark-blue velvet.

He can ponder the vastness of this universe to which he belongs, and wonder with an ancient Hebrew poet, "What is man" that the Author of all this wondrous creation should take a personal interest in him?

Then he can let his mind play over the sheer audacity of the Christian assertion that the disposition of this Inconceivably Great Creator toward each human creature is analagous to the love of a Father for his child.

Here is the warrant for Christian joy that cannot be dampened by any external circumstance.

Instead of a distant and inaccessible God, we have a "Father in Heaven" who loves us even when we least deserve His love ... who accepts us and puts up with us ... who quickly forgives each failure we repent ... and cradles us gently in His everlasting arms when we are stricken by grief or pain or bereavement.

Can anyone really ask better grounds for rejoicing?

Imprisoned, tortured, facing a martyr's death, Paul thought he had more than ample reason for joy.

"If God is for us, who can be against us?" he asked. "Who can separate us from the love of God? Can trouble do it, or hardship, or persecution, or hunger, or poverty, or danger, or death? No, in all these things we have complete victory. For I am certain that ... nothing in all creation will ever separate us from the love of God."

Lift up your hearts. Be thankful. Be joyful always.

That advice is just as relevant today as it was 2,000 years ago.

Lutherans Will Hear Of Jews For Jesus

Moishe Rosen, spokesman for Jews for Jesus, will speak at Marin Lutheran Church tomorrow at 9:15 and 11 am.

The Jews for Jesus movement grew out of the Jesus revolution which began in the Haight Ashbury district in 1966. When a number of "flower children" began turning from dope to Christ, there were many young Jews who, when they turned to Christ, did not abandon their ancestral religion, but felt interest in their own Jewish heritage and culture increased.

Rosen moved to San Francisco from New York in 1970 to begin a ministry to meet the spiritual needs of the young Christian Jews.

Jews for Jesus was a slogan to proclaim an identity. Rosen says, "Most people think Judaism and Christianity are considered to be mutally exclusive categories. They forget that the first disciples of Jesus were all Jewish, that the New Testament, like the Old Testament, is written mainly by Jews. We came up with the slogan to show that it is a false dilemma to think that one must either be a Jew or be a Christian."

The Jews for Jesus observe many of the Jewish traditions and customs. Most attend synagogue as regularly as other Jews, yet they manage full participation in local churches.

In doctrine, Jews for Jesus are fully Christian but in culture and orientation they not only continue with their Jewishness but seek to nourish those elements of their own lives which are Jewish.

MOISHE ROSEN
To address Lutherans

"We believe that Christ is the promised Messiah according to the Jewish Bible, the one for whom our people have been waiting," states Rosen.

Rosen has written two books — one on the history of Jews for Jesus, which is published by Fleming Revell, and the other a collection of aphorisms and Jewish proverbs titled "The Sayings of Chairman Moishe.

His wife is Jewish also. They both came to Christ in Denver in 1953. He resides with his wife and two daughters in San Rafael.

how do you know God exists?
Once you have felt His guidance and healing power in your life, you know.
People who have been helped and healed through understanding God's presence share their experiences at our Wednesday meetings. They tell how Christianity has become a practical, operative force in their lives.
There are thoughtful readings from the Bible and from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy.
As you listen, you begin to see that God is real, that He loves you, that His power can be felt in your life.
You're always welcome.

SAN QUENTIN SERVICE — Some 150 Bay Area residents joined about 75 inmates of San Quentin last week in observance of Rosh Hoshanah, with Cantor Arthur Lincoln (center) intoning the ancient rituals before the meal, assisted by Mrs. Elsie Krinitski and Rabbi David Davis.

Rosh Hoshanah Observed At Prison

On Monday, Oct. 1, the gates of San Quentin, California's oldest and most notorious prison, swung open to admit more than 150 men and women from the Bay Area's Jewish communities to join 75 convicts in Rosh Hoshanah services. Traditionally regarded as the beginning of the new year for Jews, this Rosh Hoshanah marks the 5734 year of Jewish history.

Many men affiliated with the prison temple are not, themselves, Jewish, but regard the congenial atmosphere, intellectual stimulation and companionship as a place of calm and quiet to retreat to from the turbulence of the prison yard. Recently they donated art and handicraft items to the San Rafael temple to raise funds to send local children to Isreal for a summer.

Among the many notable present for the services and dinner were Scott Kahn, president of the San Francisco Jewish Men's Club, members of the board of directors of the Jewish Family Service, Irv Kermish, branch director for the Marin JFS, Mrs. Rose Rapping, and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Gay III.

After the services, the two congregations adjourned to the prison's south dining hall where they dined on a meal of Swiss steak and matzo ball soup prepared by the inmate cooks, and spent an hour socializing.

Monday, Oct. 8 the choir and other members of Rodef Shalom returned to the prison to take part in the Yom Kippur services.

Jews For Jesus Singing Group To Be At Church Of Open Door

The Liberated Wailing Wall, a singing group made up of six local members of the Jews for Jesus movement, will present song and testimony at the Church of the Open Door, 177 E. Blithedale, at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

The group just came back to Marin County after a nationwide tour. They appeared in churches and rallies at Dallas, Baltimore, New York, and other major cities.

The group's music is unique, combining Jewish melodies and a Christian message. In the course of their presentation, The Liberated Wailing Wall will do a parody and skit based on the "Tradition" song from "Fiddler on the Roof." They attempt to show how tradition affects the individual Jew in his views concerning the idea of a Jew believing in Jesus.

Program Series Will Take A Look At Death

A series of programs on "Seeing Death As a Part Of Life" will be presented at the First Presbyterian Church in San Anselmo beginning tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. Subsequent programs will be on Oct. 21 and 28.

Each Sunday evening program will present a different aspect of the subject of death and dying. The first meeting will be a panel presentation by a doctor, a minister, and a lawyer. The panel members will be Dr. James Dahl, (doctor); Howard Rice (minister); and Edmond Ward (lawyer).

The second program will present a more personal view of death by means of a film and small discussion groups. The third program will deal with a Christian's view of death and be led by John Najarian, minister of the church.

Dr. Edward Stein To Give Sermon

Dr. Edward V. Stein, professor of pastoral psychology at the San Francisco Theological Seminary, will preach the sermon at the Sleepy Hollow Presbyterian Church tomorrow.

Dr. Stein has recently returned from Zurich, Switzerland, where he studied during a sabbatic year at the Jung Institute. An author as well as a seminary professor, Dr. Stein's most recent book is "Beyond Guilt." He resides with his family in San Anselmo.

Dr. Stein has chosen for his sermon title: "Cotton Patch Faith." Services begin at 10:30 a.m. in the church building at 100 Tarry Road, in Sleepy Hollow.

OF GOD AND MAN

Still Reason To Rejoice

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The Bible has a word of advice for all Christians who have become pessimistic or cynical about the state of the world.

The word is: Rejoice.

Taking a joyful attitude toward life under difficult and discouraging circumstances is as much a Christian duty as loving the unlovable.

"Both to love and to rejoice can be natural reactions to pleasant and happy occasions," says the Rev. Catherine Gunsalus, associate professor of historical theology at Louisville (Ky.) Presbyterian Seminary. "Under these conditions, love and joy are caused by the external situation. When that situation changes, our love and our joy may end. But the Christian gospel begins at this point —when the world around us is not loving to us and does not smoothly greet us. At such a time, the gospel says to us, 'Continue to love, continue to rejoice ... even when such a spirit seems to make no sense at all.'"

Under far more difficult circumstances than any we face today, St. Paul admonished the early Christians at Phillipi:

"Rejoice in the Lord always. Again I say, rejoice."

In another of his letters, to persecuted believers at Thessalonica, Paul said:

"Be joyful always ... Be thankful in all circumstances. This is what God wants of you ..."

But how can a Christian be joyous when he sees all about him trouble and despair, things going from bad to worse?

He can lift up his eyes from the mess in Washington and the wreckage of his family budget, and look at the stars which bedeck the night sky like diamonds on dark-blue velvet.

He can ponder the vastness of this universe to which he belongs, and wonder with an ancient Hebrew poet, "What is man" that the Author of all this wondrous creation should take a personal interest in him?

Then he can let his mind play over the sheer audacity of the Christian assertion that the disposition of this Inconceivably Great Creator toward each human creature is analagous to the love of a Father for his child.

Here is the warrant for Christian joy that cannot be dampened by any external circumstance.

Instead of a distant and inaccessible God, we have a "Father in Heaven" who loves us even when we least deserve His love ... who accepts us and puts up with us ... who quickly forgives each failure we repent ... and cradles us gently in His everlasting arms when we are stricken by grief or pain or bereavement.

Can anyone really ask better grounds for rejoicing?

Imprisoned, tortured, facing a martyr's death, Paul thought he had more than ample reason for joy.

"If God is for us, who can be against us?" he asked. "Who can separate us from the love of God? Can trouble do it, or hardship, or persecution, or hunger, or poverty, or danger, or death? No, in all these things we have complete victory. For I am certain that ... nothing in all creation will ever separate us from the love of God."

Lift up your hearts. Be thankful. Be joyful always.

That advice is just as relevant today as it was 2,000 years ago.

Seminary Founder's Day Is Set

Dr. Charles C. Coffey, pastor of First Baptist Church, Kannapolis, N.C., will be the guest speaker for the Founders' Day service at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, at 9:50 a.m. Tuesday in John A. Broadus Hall Chapel on the campus.

Dr. Coffey, a member of the seminary's board of trustees, will speak on "The Making of a Minister."

He has served as pastor of the church in Kannapolis for 20 years. During that time, he has been named to a number of denominational offices and committees.

He is past president and director of the Rotary Club, and was elected to serve on the North Carolina State Mental Health Board.

HAMILTON HAPPENING

A "Kids Krusade" at Hamilton Air Force Base Chapel, which opens tomorrow, will feature Lynn (above) and Becky Wickstrom of Loveland, Colo., who will present puppets, illustrated songs, chalk drawings, Joey the dummy, illustrated stories and gospel magic for youngsters 5-13. The program will be at 7 p.m. nightly through Oct. 18 and is open to children of all faiths, whether their parents are military dependents or children.

Lutherans Will Hear Of Jews For Jesus

Moishe Rosen, spokesman for Jews for Jesus, will speak at Marin Lutheran Church tomorrow at 9:15 and 11 am.

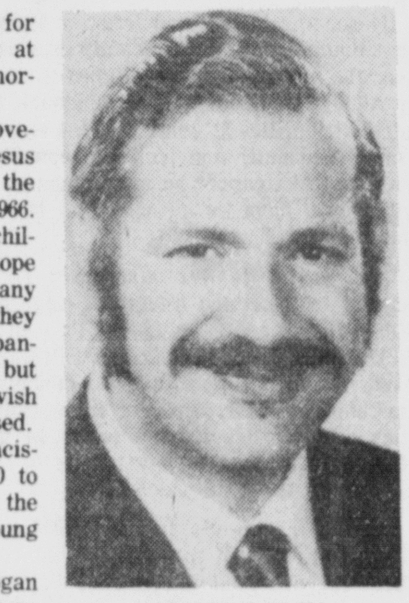
The Jews for Jesus movement grew out of the Jesus revolution which began in the Haight Ashbury district in 1966. When a number of "flower children" began turning from dope to Christ, there were many young Jews who, when they turned to Christ, did not abandon their ancestral religion, but felt interest in their own Jewish heritage and culture increased.

Rosen moved to San Francisco from New York in 1970 to begin a ministry to meet the spiritual needs of the young Christian Jews.

Jews for Jesus was a slogan to proclaim an identity. Rosen says, "Most people think Judaism and Christianity are considered to be mutally exclusive categories. They forget that the first disciples of Jesus were all Jewish, that the New Testament, like the Old Testament, is written mainly by Jews. We came up with the slogan to show that it is a false dilemma to think that one must either be a Jew or be a Christian."

The Jews for Jesus observe many of the Jewish traditions and customs. Most attend synagogue as regularly as other Jews, yet they manage full participation in local churches.

In doctrine, Jews for Jesus are fully Christian but in culture and orientation they not only continue with their Jewishness but seek to nourish those elements of their own lives which are Jewish.



MOISHE ROSEN
To address Lutherans

"We believe that Christ is the promised Messiah according to the Jewish Bible, the one for whom our people have been waiting," states Rosen.

Rosen has written two books — one on the history of Jews for Jesus, which is published by Fleming Revell, and the other a collection of aphorisms and Jewish proverbs titled "The Sayings of Chairman Moishe.

His wife is Jewish also. They both came to Christ in Denver in 1953. He resides with his wife and two daughters in San Rafael.

how do you know God exists?
Once you have felt His guidance and healing power in your life, you know.
People who have been helped and healed through understanding God's presence share their experiences at our Wednesday meetings. They tell how Christianity has become a practical, operative force in their lives.
There are thoughtful readings from the Bible and from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy.
As you listen, you begin to see that God is real, that He loves you, that His power can be felt in your life.
You're always welcome.

How to sell your home in a tight-money, and high interest-rate market

With the real estate market today, it takes a special kind of knowledge and sophistication to sell your home at the best possible terms.

Interest rates are constantly fluctuating. Sometimes changing from day to day. This situation may call for "creative financing" to handle your sale (or purchase) of property. The importance of knowing sources of money and ways of arranging private financing that safeguards the interests of both buyer and seller can hardly be overestimated.

When you deal with a Realtor, a member office of the Marin County Board of Realtors, you are in the best possible hands. They are professionals at finding alternative methods of buying or selling a home during a tight money market. Selling a home today is too complex to take any chances. Always work through a Realtor and you'll never be sorry.

Marin Makes Effort To Remove Houseboat Colony

Marin County's marine inspector said yesterday every possible action has been taken to remove an upstart houseboat colony south of Strawberry Point in Richardson Bay.

In a letter to county supervisors, inspector Richard L. Larson said one houseboat owner is to appear in court Monday for violation of the county code and nuisance abatement actions have been started against others.

He said an unoccupied tugboat and barge are expected to leave the picturesque cove as soon as hull repairs have been completed.

Larson's letter was in response to a request from the Strawberry Recreation District that county supervisors enforce regulations on illegal occupancy of vessels.

Supervisors, meeting at 9 a.m. Tuesday at Civic Center, will review the status of the current program to clean up Richardson Bay by forcing improvements to houseboat marinas.

The recreation district request came from San Rafael attorney Stephen H. Kaufmann who said "the failure on the part of your board and the county agency to enforce duly enacted health and safety laws against violators can only result in further and serious deterioration of an already deplorable situation. . ."

"As the direct result of this new invasion and the proliferation of uncontrolled floating shack 'homes,' sewage, refuse, garbage and similar debris is washing up on the southerly shores of Strawberry point making beaches virtually unusable and increasing the already serious pollution of the area," he said.

In his response, Larson noted the recreation district is part owner of the property occupied by the illegal houseboats and said the district could have initiated trespass action last June.

"Allegations that county agencies have failed to take appropriate action is totally untrue," Larson wrote. He said Scott Diamond, owner of a large occupied barge, is to appear Monday in municipal court for arraignment on complaints of violating the county code prohibiting occupancy without proper water, sewage and garbage facilities.

Diamond pulled his 350-ton barge, where he and several friends live, on the beach at Harbor Cove on Strawberry Point in June. He contends the gray hulk won't float until repairs are complete and tides are high enough to lift it from the beach in December. Another floating home, owned by Richard "Salty" Forrest, visited the cove for a few days, then was towed to the A. G. Schoonmaker property in Sausalito, where company officials have agreed to let Forrest patch the houseboat's worm-eaten bottom before moving on.

In other action Tuesday, supervisors will hear an appeal of planning commission approval of a bulkhead on the Barbara Alban property, Stinson Beach.

Several of her neighbors on Calle del Embarcadero have protested that the bulkhead will channel water in a way which will threaten their homes. They also claim it will block public access to the beach.

The planning commission has disagreed and sided with Miss Alban who said the bulkhead is needed to hold fill for sewage leach lines.

Innocent Plea Made To Slaying

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Veronza Leon Bowers Jr., 27, of San Francisco, pleaded innocent yesterday in U.S. District Court to a charge of killing a U.S. park ranger at Point Reyes National Seashore last Aug. 5.

Judge Samuel Conti set trial for Dec. 3, for Bowers and codefendant Alan Wrynard Veale, 24, also of San Francisco, who earlier had entered an innocent plea.

Both men were indicted Sept. 27 by a federal grand jury on counts of murder and using a firearm to commit a felony in connection with the death of ranger Kenneth C. Patrick.

His body was found early in the morning. He is believed to have been searching for poachers at the time of his death and is the first park service ranger in history ever to be murdered while on duty.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has quoted Veale in an affidavit as saying he was at the scene when the ranger was killed but did not shoot him. In the affidavit, Veale reportedly stated he was in a car with two other persons whom he refused to identify when Patrick halted them in a remote section of the park.

Veale also is awaiting trail on a federal charge of bank robbery and Bowers has been in custody in Alameda County on a variety of state charges, including concealing stolen property.

Bowers was arrested September 14 in a Homestead Valley residence.

Leadership At Colleges' Top Is Hit

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The chancellor's office of the California Community Colleges and the system's Board of Governors have failed to provide leadership and program coordination for the state's 68 community college districts, an audit report says.

The report said its major finding was that the Board of Governors and Chancellor Sidney Brossman's office "have not fulfilled the intent of the legislature to provide leadership and direction for the community college system, but rather have served as a state agency to protect local autonomy."

It recommends that the chancellor's office be reorganized and that the board stop playing an "advisory" yes-man function for the community colleges and instead assume the role of a coordinating agency.

While local autonomy is required under law, the report suggests the board has allowed autonomy to go too far.

Community College Chancellor Sidney Brossman defended the board against the local autonomy charge, saying the law mandates that each community college have "a maximum degree of local control. And they (the board) take 'maximum' very seriously."

Brossman said there were "some helpful recommendations" in the report, noting in particular one which suggests his staff be enlarged slightly.

REAGAN'S VIEWS

State Reaction To Ford's Nomination

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan says President Nixon's nomination of Rep. Gerald Ford for vice president does not necessarily make Ford a strong candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in 1976.

Reagan, a potential contender for President, told newsmen last night outside his Pacific Palisades home that the test of candidates' strengths would come when they "wet their feet in the primaries."

"Any time you have a man who is a vice president of the United States he has to be considered a candidate for the presidency in the next election," the governor said.

He said Nixon acted "wisely" in nominating Ford to replace Spiro T. Agnew. Reagan said he never considered himself a candidate for Nixon's nomination.

In a statement issued by his office in Sacramento, Reagan said: "Now it behooves all Americans to unite behind the President's administration and his efforts to cope with the many urgent and serious domestic and internal problems confronting the country."

Observers theorize that the selection of Ford, considered a moderate, left Reagan in the position as the No. 1 presidential candidate of the Republican party's conservative wing. Up to a month ago, Reagan shared the top position with Spiro T. Agnew.

California Republican State Chairman Gordon Luce, who recommended Reagan to Nixon as a successor to Agnew, praised the selection of Ford and said it was too early to assess what effect it would have on Reagan's change for the GOP presidential nomination.

"It's hard to tell at this point," Luce said. "It's dynamic era. Many things could happen politically."

Luce said he was "personally somewhat relieved" that Reagan was not selected because he belives many Cwlifornians want the governor to finish his programs in his remaining term in office.

Herb Klein, former Nixon administratio communications director, said Ford was a "very good choice" and added that Ford could be running against Reagan for the presidential nomination.

"But I don't think there would be any personal animosity between them," Klein said. "They have known each other a long time and are good friends."

However, Democratic State Chairman John L. Burton said the President's choice "puts a severe dent in Gov. Reagan's presidential ambitions in 1976 because Ford ... serving as vice president for three years certainly will be a formidable candidate."

Burton, a San Francisco assemblyman, added "it is a severe setback for Reagan's chances and I personally think that is a blessing for the country."

Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr., a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, said he was disappointed in Nixon's choice, saying Ford was rewarded for "his nearly blind loyalty to the President."

William Banowsky, Republican National Committeeman for California, called Ford "a splendid choice" that "will bring unity in the country." He said he did not think the selection would have any "direct effect" on the race for the presidential nomination.

Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke and State Controller Houston Flournoy, both contenders for the GOP gubernatorial nomination next year, praised the President for acting quickly to nominate a vice president. Flournoy said he was confident Ford would make "a great vice president.

Assembly Republican leader Bob Beverly of Manhattan Beach and Assemblyman William T. Bagley of San Rafael, a liberal Republican, said they were pleased with Nixon's choice. Both said it was "too early" to determine how the selection would affect Reagan's chances for the presidential nomination.

Los Angeles Mayor Thomas Bradley said he believed Ford's nomination would be quickly confirmed by Congress although he has been "a strongly partisan congressman."

Rep. Alphonzo Bell, R-Calif., said he would vote to confirm Ford although he "had hoped that an individual would vote to confirm Ford although he "had hoped that an individual of somewhat greater national prominence and executive experience would be named."

Shepherd Sets Talk On Housing

Wallace K. Shepherd, executive director of the Marin County Housing Authority, will address the family and Children's Services Advisory Committee at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Shepherd is expected to answer committee questions on the qualification standards and turnover rates for public housing, how San Rafael redevelopment will affect low-income housing and explain low-income housing proposals outlined in the Countywide General Plan.

The committee, meeting at the county schools office in Corte Madera, is an advisory body to county supervisors and the welfare department.

Water Bond Vote Will Be Discussed

L. Martin Griffin, a director of the Marin Municipal Water District, will discuss the district's proposed Russian River Water Supply bond issue at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Larkspur City Hall.

Voters in the water district will be asked to approve a $7.5 million bond issue Nov. 6 to finance one stage of the four-stage water project.

When completed, the total project would bring 13,400 acre feet of water into the district annually. The portion of the pipeline financed by the November bond measure, along with the North Marin intertie (already approved by voters) will provide Marin Municipal with 8,000 acre feet of water a year.

Griffin's talk and a question and answer period will be presented by the Larskpur Town Meeting, according to Warren H. Patton, chairman.

Marin Makes Effort To Remove Houseboat Colony

Marin County's marine inspector said yesterday every possible action has been taken to remove an upstart houseboat colony south of Strawberry Point in Richardson Bay.

In a letter to county supervisors, inspector Richard L. Larson said one houseboat owner is to appear in court Monday for violation of the county code and nuisance abatement actions have been started against others.

He said an unoccupied tugboat and barge are expected to leave the picturesque cove as soon as hull repairs have been completed.

Larson's letter was in response to a request from the Strawberry Recreation District that county supervisors enforce regulations on illegal occupancy of vessels.

Supervisors, meeting at 9 a.m. Tuesday at Civic Center, will review the status of the current program to clean up Richardson Bay by forcing improvements to houseboat marinas.

The recreation district request came from San Rafael attorney Stephen H. Kaufmann who said "the failure on the part of your board and the county agency to enforce duly enacted health and safety laws against violators can only result in further and serious deterioration of an already deplorable situation. . ."

"As the direct result of this new invasion and the proliferation of uncontrolled floating shack 'homes,' sewage, refuse, garbage and similar debris is washing up on the southerly shores of Strawberry point making beaches virtually unusable and increasing the already serious pollution of the area," he said.

In his response, Larson noted the recreation district is part owner of the property occupied by the illegal houseboats and said the district could have initiated trespass action last June.

"Allegations that county agencies have failed to take appropriate action is totally untrue," Larson wrote. He said Scott Diamond, owner of a large occupied barge, is to appear Monday in municipal court for arraignment on complaints of violating the county code prohibiting occupancy without proper water, sewage and garbage facilities.

Diamond pulled his 350-ton barge, where he and several friends live, on the beach at Harbor Cove on Strawberry Point in June. He contends the gray hulk won't float until repairs are complete and tides are high enough to lift it from the beach in December. Another floating home, owned by Richard "Salty" Forrest, visited the cove for a few days, then was towed to the A. G. Schoonmaker property in Sausalito, where company officials have agreed to let Forrest patch the houseboat's worm-eaten bottom before moving on.

In other action Tuesday, supervisors will hear an appeal of planning commission approval of a bulkhead on the Barbara Alban property, Stinson Beach.

Several of her neighbors on Calle del Embarcadero have protested that the bulkhead will channel water in a way which will threaten their homes. They also claim it will block public access to the beach.

The planning commission has disagreed and sided with Miss Alban who said the bulkhead is needed to hold fill for sewage leach lines.

SAN FRANCISCO — Veronza Leon Bowers Jr., 27, of San Francisco, pleaded innocent yesterday in U.S. District Court to a charge of killing a U.S. park ranger at Point Reyes National Seashore last Aug. 5.

Judge Samuel Conti set trial for Dec. 3, for Bowers and codefendant Alan Wrynard Veale, 24, also of San Francisco, who earlier had entered an innocent plea.

Both men were indicted Sept. 27 by a federal grand jury on counts of murder and using a firearm to commit a felony in connection with the death of ranger Kenneth C. Patrick.

His body was found early in the morning. He is believed to have been searching for poachers at the time of his death and is the first park service ranger in history ever to be murdered while on duty.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has quoted Veale in an affidavit as saying he was at the scene when the ranger was killed but did not shoot him. In the affidavit, Veale reportedly stated he was in a car with two other persons whom he refused to identify when Patrick halted them in a remote section of the park.

Veale also is awaiting trail on a federal charge of bank robbery and Bowers has been in custody in Alameda County on a variety of state charges, including concealing stolen property.

Bowers was arrested September 14 in a Homestead Valley residence.

Leadership At Colleges' Top Is Hit

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The chancellor's office of the California Community Colleges and the system's Board of Governors have failed to provide leadership and program coordination for the state's 68 community college districts, an audit report says.

The report said its major finding was that the Board of Governors and Chancellor Sidney Brossman's office "have not fulfilled the intent of the legislature to provide leadership and direction for the community college system, but rather have served as a state agency to protect local autonomy."

It recommends that the chancellor's office be reorganized and that the board stop playing an "advisory" yes-man function for the community colleges and instead assume the role of a coordinating agency.

While local autonomy is required under law, the report suggests the board has allowed autonomy to go too far.

Community College Chancellor Sidney Brossman defended the board against the local autonomy charge, saying the law mandates that each community college have "a maximum degree of local control. And they (the board) take 'maximum' very seriously."

Brossman said there were "some helpful recommendations" in the report, noting in particular one which suggests his staff be enlarged slightly.

REAGAN'S VIEWS

State Reaction To Ford's Nomination

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan says President Nixon's nomination of Rep. Gerald Ford for vice president does not necessarily make Ford a strong candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in 1976.

Reagan, a potential contender for President, told newsmen last night outside his Pacific Palisades home that the test of candidates' strengths would come when they "wet their feet in the primaries."

"Any time you have a man who is a vice president of the United States he has to be considered a candidate for the presidency in the next election," the governor said.

He said Nixon acted "wisely" in nominating Ford to replace Spiro T. Agnew. Reagan said he never considered himself a candidate for Nixon's nomination.

In a statement issued by his office in Sacramento, Reagan said: "Now it behooves all Americans to unite behind the President's administration and his efforts to cope with the many urgent and serious domestic and internal problems confronting the country."

Observers theorize that the selection of Ford, considered a moderate, left Reagan in the position as the No. 1 presidential candidate of the Republican party's conservative wing. Up to a month ago, Reagan shared the top position with Spiro T. Agnew.

California Republican State Chairman Gordon Luce, who recommended Reagan to Nixon as a successor to Agnew, praised the selection of Ford and said it was too early to assess what effect it would have on Reagan's change for the GOP presidential nomination.

"It's hard to tell at this point," Luce said. "It's dynamic era. Many things could happen politically."

Luce said he was "personally somewhat relieved" that Reagan was not selected because he belives many Cwlifornians want the governor to finish his programs in his remaining term in office.

Herb Klein, former Nixon administratio communications director, said Ford was a "very good choice" and added that Ford could be running against Reagan for the presidential nomination.

"But I don't think there would be any personal animosity between them," Klein said. "They have known each other a long time and are good friends."

However, Democratic State Chairman John L. Burton said the President's choice "puts a severe dent in Gov. Reagan's presidential ambitions in 1976 because Ford ... serving as vice president for three years certainly will be a formidable candidate."

Burton, a San Francisco assemblyman, added "it is a severe setback for Reagan's chances and I personally think that is a blessing for the country."

Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr., a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, said he was disappointed in Nixon's choice, saying Ford was rewarded for "his nearly blind loyalty to the President."

William Banowsky, Republican National Committeeman for California, called Ford "a splendid choice" that "will bring unity in the country." He said he did not think the selection would have any "direct effect" on the race for the presidential nomination.

Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke and State Controller Houston Flournoy, both contenders for the GOP gubernatorial nomination next year, praised the President for acting quickly to nominate a vice president. Flournoy said he was confident Ford would make "a great vice president.

Assembly Republican leader Bob Beverly of Manhattan Beach and Assemblyman William T. Bagley of San Rafael, a liberal Republican, said they were pleased with Nixon's choice. Both said it was "too early" to determine how the selection would affect Reagan's chances for the presidential nomination.

Los Angeles Mayor Thomas Bradley said he believed Ford's nomination would be quickly confirmed by Congress although he has been "a strongly partisan congressman."

Rep. Alphonzo Bell, R-Calif., said he would vote to confirm Ford although he "had hoped that an individual would vote to confirm Ford although he "had hoped that an individual of somewhat greater national prominence and executive experience would be named."

Shepherd Sets Talk On Housing

Wallace K. Shepherd, executive director of the Marin County Housing Authority, will address the family and Children's Services Advisory Committee at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Shepherd is expected to answer committee questions on the qualification standards and turnover rates for public housing, how San Rafael redevelopment will affect low-income housing and explain low-income housing proposals outlined in the Countywide General Plan.

The committee, meeting at the county schools office in Corte Madera, is an advisory body to county supervisors and the welfare department.

Water Bond Vote Will Be Discussed

L. Martin Griffin, a director of the Marin Municipal Water District, will discuss the district's proposed Russian River Water Supply bond issue at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Larkspur City Hall.

Voters in the water district will be asked to approve a $7.5 million bond issue Nov. 6 to finance one stage of the four-stage water project.

When completed, the total project would bring 13,400 acre feet of water into the district annually. The portion of the pipeline financed by the November bond measure, along with the North Marin intertie (already approved by voters) will provide Marin Municipal with 8,000 acre feet of water a year.

Griffin's talk and a question and answer period will be presented by the Larskpur Town Meeting, according to Warren H. Patton, chairman.

Horse Permits To Be Studied

An ordinance to require horse owners to obtain a permit to keep their animals in San Anselmo will be considered by the city planning commission at 8 p.m. Monday in city hall.

Duane C. Ragan, commission chairman, said the regulation is considerably changed from the ordinance which the group considered last month. That ordinance, which drew fire from many owners, would have required licensing and tagging or branding of animals.

Ragan said the commission no longer intends to require licensing.

Guidelines for granting permits to horse owners will also be discussed at the meeting.

Sometimes Right Defense Can Be Picked After Seeing Dummy's Cards

Sometimes you can very nearly name an opponent's hand after seeing the dummy and the first trick. This knowledge should help you find the right defense.

LOW CLUB SHIFT

West opened the king of diamonds and then made the "safe" shift to a low club. South cashed the ace of spades, ruffed a spade and ruffed a low club in dummy. Another spade ruff was followed by another club ruff. Declarer then ruffed another spade and led the king of hearts.

This happened to pick up the queen of hearts and knock out the ace of hearts at the same time. Declarer made four hearts with an overtrick.

PAYS DIVIDENDS

West should think before leading to the second trick. Two seconds of thought would pay handsome dividends.

West knows, of course, that South had only a singleton diamond. It is very likely that South is short in spades since he has made a shutout bid in hearts. Since South was dealt the usual 13 cards, quite a few of them are sure to be clubs.

SIMPLE FASHION

In this simple fashion, West gets a very good idea of the nature of South's hand. Clearly, South will try to ruff a club or two in the dummy. Just as clearly, every trump taken out of the dummy will cost South a trick.

Therefore West should lead his queen of trumps at the second trick. East wins with the ace of trumps and returns a trump. Declarer makes one last try for his contract by leading the queen of diamonds from dummy, but East uses his last trump to ruff, and South must overruff. South must eventually lose two club tricks for down one.

DAILY QUESTION

You hold:
♠- K 6 5 2
♥- Q
♦- A K 9 8 3
♣- 8 7 4.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Double.

This takeout double is safer than an overcall of two diamonds. If your partner has a bad hand, you may be much better off in his long suit than at diamonds.

Property Aid Deadline Set

Homeowners over the age of 62 have until Monday to file property assistance claims, according to Sonoma County Assessor Ernest L. Comalli.

Claimants must also own and reside in their own homes, have paid last year's taxes and have an income of $10,000 or less. Tax reimbursement is figured on a sliding scale in relation to income.

Young boys are bound to get ahead with these spokes in their wheel

If you could see our 800 young carriers every day the way we do you'd see something in the making that's pretty reassuring. For that "something" is character.

It's an old-fashioned word but it has a great future - and so, we think, do our I-J carriers. For these young boys are learning that service breeds self-reliance. They're learning that courtesy and good business management of their routes lead to the attainment of worthwhile goals.

These are values which don't come easily, of course. It takes training. It takes day after day persistence in delivering your I-J on time or very close to it. And it takes a knowledge of accounts, of keeping records, collecting and paying bills.

For remember, "our" boys are their own boss. They're independent - just like any merchant down the street. But with maybe this difference: no boy takes over a route "cold." Behind him is the I-J's own special newspaperboy training program. Behind him is an advisor who aids and counsels at every step.

That's why these youngsters succeed so remarkably. They've got the right spokes in the wheel. And anyone can ride ahead when he's got that! Our 800 do.

Young boys are bound to get ahead with these spokes in their wheel

If you could see our 800 young carriers every day the way we do you'd see something in the making that's pretty reassuring. For that "something" is character.

It's an old-fashioned word but it has a great future - and so, we think, do our I-J carriers. For these young boys are learning that service breeds self-reliance. They're learning that courtesy and good business management of their routes lead to the attainment of worthwhile goals.

These are values which don't come easily, of course. It takes training. It takes day after day persistence in delivering your I-J on time or very close to it. And it takes a knowledge of accounts, of keeping records, collecting and paying bills.

For remember, "our" boys are their own boss. They're independent - just like any merchant down the street. But with maybe this difference: no boy takes over a route "cold." Behind him is the I-J's own special newspaperboy training program. Behind him is an advisor who aids and counsels at every step.

That's why these youngsters succeed so remarkably. They've got the right spokes in the wheel. And anyone can ride ahead when he's got that! Our 800 do.

ISRAEL NEEDS YOUR HELP

The people of Israel are fighting for survival.

Not since they won their independence twenty-five years ago, have they suffered such an onslaught of mass military might as that being mounted by the Egyptians and Syrians.

The economic loss is enormous.

The human cost is incalculable.

Israel needs funds immediately to carry on its mission of providing a haven for the persecuted and oppressed Jews from other lands. Even as the fighting goes on, great numbers of Jewish immigrants continue to arrive from the Soviet Union.

How can you help in this great humanitarian effort?

Greenbrae Couple Enjoying Gardening In 'Low Key' Way

If you are a backyard gardener who believes the Garden Society of Marin is beyond your scope, an organization of experts, Col. and Mrs. Todd H. Slade of Greenbrae will tell you otherwise.

After limited puttering at posts throughout the world, the Slades joined the society "to learn how to garden in California."

"We're still learning," Colonel Slade said. "It's really a horticultural society and at each meeting, the members talk about plants and learn from each other."

THE SLADES, who acknowledge they are not experts, don't have a vast, formal garden at their hillside home at 167 Vista Grande nor do they specialize in any particular plants.

A modest rock garden is at the front entrance, where deer sometimes graze, a problem that led Mrs. Slade to switch to succulents, which froze last winter.

Near the front hedge is a small, colorful patch of petunias, begonias and lobelia, in planter boxes, on the front patio, ivy geraniums and alongside the home an old oak tree the Slades are striving to save.

"Anyone who has an oak has problems," Mrs. Slade said, explaining that the root system had been covered when the patio was installed and drainage is their problem.

COLONEL SLADE, a graduate of West Point, retired in 1958, and settled in Greenbrae in 1959, but not for long. A onetime Spanish instructor at West Point, he decided to continue his study of the language and went to the University of Madrid in 1960.

After he received his doctorate in Romance Philology the Slades stayed in Spain another three years, and then returned to Greenbrae where they have lived since 1968.

Moorish tile in a redwood frame alongside the front door, a Spanish guitar, a hand-painted fan and a Spanish sword are reminders of their days in Spain.

Once back in Greenbrae, the Slades joined the garden society and endeavored to improve what Colonel Slade described as "a rather rustic garden," with the rear yard, about 105 feet deeply wooded in a natural state.

"IT'S SELF teaching and helpful," he said. "There's no cut-throat. It's what I call a low-key society."

Colonel Slade, society president in 1970, recalled a special project for Guide Dogs for the Blind in San Rafael, for the blind to enjoy plants by smell, taste and feel.

A 4-H Club member in Cloverdale got information from the U.S. Department of Agriculture about plants that blind persons like and sent cuttings from 23 plants, Colonel Slade said.

In one 12-foot planter "we put plants for texture such as peppermint and

Lore Of Marin's Coast Miwok Indians Uncovered

By DOROTHY GARDINER

Marin's Coast Miwok Indians, nearly extinct, forgotten and ignored for almost a century, may still find their rightful place in history due to the efforts of the Miwok Archaeological Preserve of Marin (MAPOM).

Organized three years ago by a small group of "brilliant and capable" people turned on by the lore of the past, it is striving to preserve and explore vanishing Indian shell mounds and kindle an interest in the county's unrecorded prehistory past.

Its members — physicians, businessmen, housewives, children, teachers, lawyers and librarians — have emerged as a growing phalanx of avocational scientific sleuths who spend weekends alongside trained archaeologists digging up and studying Marin's antiquity.

ACCORDING to recent discoveries, almost 1,000 years before Christ, small tribes of aborigines were living peacefully in settlements situated on creekbanks that still criss-cross the county today.

Two thousand years later (when gothic architecture and universities were being introduced to medieval Europe) Coast Miwok Indians were living in Marin villages and trading with tribes in Napa and Lake counties for obsidian (a volcanic variety of rock) to tip arrows and make tools.

Their descendants may have met Sir Francis Drake's crew when the English expedition reached Marin's shores in 1579, and for the first time an account of what they were like and how they lived was recorded for history by Drake's chaplain, Fletcher.

Two hundred years later the Spanish labored to convert the natives to Christianity teaching them white men's ways and trades after settling in the Bay Area in 1776.

BUT BY the close of the 19th century, 50 years after Spanish and Mexican rule had been replaced by the United States, most of Marin's Coast Miwok population had died, victims of white men's diseases — syphillis, tuberculosis, measles and small pox.

By the dawn of the 20th century the Miwok villages had become shell mounds buried under American ranch land and frontier town streets.

It's these vanishing mounds that MAPOM is striving to preserve, and when that is impossible, explore. But work has not stopped at the trenches.

MAPOM has sponsored and offered classes (some for college credit) on archaeology and local Indian life; helped convince a developer to retain four-and-a-half mounds as open space and prevailed upon the City of Novato to help save Indian sites.

HOLDING but one general meeting a year (usually in the spring), members meet during the remaining months researching, preserving artifacts, conducting classes and working on local "digs."

MAPOM's story begins in 1969 when Charles (Charley) M. Slaymaker, a young archaeologist working for a master's degree at California State University, San Francisco, began excavating a mound on Miller Creek, behind the Miller Creek School.

The mound — recognizable because of its dark color and powdery texture — an accummulation of ash from century-old fires and shellfish remains — was first identified between 1906 and 1909 by University of California archaeologist Nels Nelson.

Nelson walked local creekbeds naming and numbering mounds. At the same time UC anthropologist Samuel A. Barrett "not working in a coordinated effort" gave ethnographic names (learned from surviving Indian descendents around 1900) to the sites, according to Slaymaker.

> "These cats were hunters and gatherers, preoccupied with women, judging from their rules and regulations segregating the sexes."

The Miller Creek mound was called Cotomkotca, meaning grasshopper houses, he explained.

At this time there were some 200 sites found.

Later surveys increased the number to more than 400, half of which have been "altered or are gone," he says.

(Other sites named by Barrett include Awani-Wi of the Dominican College campus; Ewu, somewhere near the Civic Center; Puyuku, a MAPOM dig on the former Pacheco Ranch; Chokeche in Novato's San Jose Village and Olompali, north of Novato.

SLAYMAKER, a tall, clear-eyed man who is now leading a dig at Olompali, a six-acre village on the former Burdell Ranch, says that when he started on the Miller Creek project he intended going down the standard 39 centimeters required for a thesis project.

Intrigued by his findings, he continued to a depth of 500 centimeters (14 feet) where he found the site of human habitation, later proven by carbon dating, to have existed 700 years B.C.

But he also unearthed a mystery.

The village was abandoned around 300 A.D., he says, and later resettled around 1,000 years later in 1200 A.D.

He suspects the second wave of inhabitants, whom he calls Coast Miwoks, may be a different people than the earlier aborigines.

AFTER 1200, he explains, cremations replaced burials except for murderers, criminals and those dying from contagious disease whom the Indians continued to bury.

Another change was in building ceremonial dance houses, found at both the Miller Creek and Olompali sites, with one, instead of four supporting posts.

(His findings will be published in a 600 page thesis this year prior to his commencing work towards his Ph.D. on the University of California's Berkeley campus.)

While Slaymaker was working at Miller Creek, neighbors and parents of nearby school children "watching him do his thing, even in rain and storm," became his friends, recalls Don Thieler.

Subsequently when his work was endangered by vandals and pilferers "potting" or removing artifacts and fossils from the dig, these people pulled together to help.

SELLING doughnuts and prints they raised money to fence the mound and soon began digging alongside the archaeologist to learn about Indian culture.

Within months they formally organized MAPOM, electing Thieler, principal at the nearby Mary E. Silveira School, president, a position he held until last spring.

Until last year efforts were directed to preserving the Miller Creek site, explains new president Gerald (Jerry) L. Gregoire of Marinwood, a San Francisco cut flower grower and shipper who was brought into the group at the beginning by his wife, Jill, "who's always liked history."

MAPOM established a museum around Slaymaker's excavations and placed objects removed from the site on display in a room at the school where Jill Gregoire volunteers time as curator and docent along with Jean McLean of Lucas Valley, MAPOM treasurer, who also works as a docent.

LAST YEAR between 1,000 and 1,500 Marin school children toured the facility, Gregoire reports.

As membership climbed (today there are between 200 and 300 members with

Life Of The Past Unfolds In Bits As Diggers Unearth Indian Artifacts

During the last two years MAPOM has been the driving force behind the opening of three new excavations across the county: at the former Pacheco Ranch north of Marinwood where mounds are to be preserved as open space; at San Jose Village, a planned Novato development where a young archaeologist conducted field classes for MAPOM last summer and a third in Nicasio, on a site named Ecta-Tamal, opened two years ago by Slaymaker and Winfield Henn, then chief archaeologist at California State University who is now working for a Ph.D. at the University of Oregon.

Many more sites still exist in the county, Gregoire says, even if at least half of Nelson's discoveries 67 years ago have been destroyed.

RELUCTANT to reveal exact locations for fear of attracting "potters," he stressed that random removal from a mound is "desecration."

Things removed without being studied, identified and catalogued (as to placement and depth), he says, become "worthless, losing all historic value."

"MAPOM doesn't just dig up Indian beads, we're out to learn about Indian culture."

If people want to dig, he said, "we'll give them screens and show them how to do it under controlled circumstances and explain how the Indians used what they dig up."

On a tour of four digs, our first stop was at the 519-acre tree studded former Pacheco Ranch where the U.S. Development Corporation of Orinda intends to build Village Marin, some 700 housing units on 138 acres.

At MAPOM's suggestion last year the corporation agreed to preserve three and possibly two more mounds on the site as open space. (At this writing four and a half mounds are slated for preservation, according to Gregoire.)

THE ACTION, termed "magnificent and ecology minded" by both Thieler and Gregoire, prevented "quick salvage" on the site where a mound is "ripped off in a week with no time for study," Thieler added.

U.S. Development Corp. last year gave MAPOM keys to the fenced site so that an archaeologist from the University of San Francisco and MAPOM members could begin work at their own rate of speed.

The company also agreed to fence the mound site, as a further precaution, Gregoire said, and voluntarily pulled back bulldozers on uncovering a previously undetected section of the mound.

Thieler was working on the site wearing a wide brimmed straw hat as protection against a hot September sun. He was surrounded by a handful of MAPOM's men, women and children painstakingly sifting the mound's dark earth (called midden) through wide screens.

ON FINDING an unidentifiable object, the workers approached Thieler, a tall, robust, articulate man who by fingering and studying the piece quickly catagorized it as either obsidian, bone or shell, and explained how it probably was used 10 centuries ago.

Describing himself as a "typical member," he says he spent the "last four years reading every damned thing I can get hold of and working every weekend along side every archaeologist we can find."

This mound was opened last year under the direction of Dr. C. William (Billy) Clewlow, a young-looking 32-year-old who recently left the University of San Francisco to begin teaching and doing research at UCLA.

Holder of a doctorate in archaeology and anthropology he recently co-authored (with UC's Robert Heizer) a two-volume work on "Prehistory Rock Art of California," is working on a paper on a prehistory rock art site in Southern Marin and preparing a preliminary report on the Pacheco site.

WHILE ON a weekend visit from Southern California, Clewlow explained he began work by surveying the 200 by 300 foot area and diving it into two by two meter units.

These units were then named and numbered so that every artifact, object and particle removed could be catalogued as to where it was taken.

(Depth where an object is found determines its age. The American period, dating back to 1849, is only one inch deep.)

After excavation was underway Clewlow conducted his USF classes on the site. It was also used as a field classroom

Robert Raab Striving To Save The Coastline

By PAUL LIBERATORE

When Robert F. Raab was nominated for a seat on the North-Central Coastal Conservation Commission in 1972, he became the object of much good-natured kidding around his office.

Raab worked hard in support of Proposition 20, the coastal initiative, and his nomination by the coastal alliance, a group of several bay area conservation organizations, was in recognition of his efforts.

Raab's employer of 11 years, the Pacific Gas and Electric Co., worked with equal resolve but with less success to see the coastline measure defeated, hence the jokes.

The 47-year-old public relations executive for PG&E was not selected for the commission, but in April he was elected president of the 2,000-member Marin Conservation League, an organization in which he has been active for the past five years.

ALTHOUGH PG&E and other utility firms have been criticized for alleged anti-conservationist political positions and business practices, Raab sees little conflict between his professional career and his role as environmental activist.

"Utilities have taken a beating from environmentalists, who can be very critical, but who often have an astonishing ignorance of the real facts," he said from behind a long table covered with reports and pamphlets in the conservation league's San Rafael office. "In my job, I write mostly about noncontroversial issues like how electricity is made and the problems of the energy shortage. I am involved in getting out the facts."

A resident of Marin for the past eight years, Raab lives in verdant Fairfax with his wife, Joan, and three young children. He maintains his commitment to saving the California coastline, whose yellow beaches and sea-drilled cliffs, he says, should be the exclusive wonders of all the people.

"I have strong feelings about coastal protection. The whole of what is left should be preserved and the rest should be restored, in effect, redeemed. I favor no development of any kind."

Raab's personal philosophies and the conservationist views of other Marin residents take on the authority of collective effort through the programs of the conservation league.

THE ORGANIZATION has been active for years in helping to develop a master plan for Point Reyes National Seashore that will make the best possible use of the park with heavy emphasis on preservation."

It continues to perform a watchdog function at Tomales Bay, guarding against possible illegal practices by private firms that may hamper the public's right to enjoy the area, and has long opposed the widening of Shoreline Highway, particularly the portion that threads around delicate Bolinas Lagoon.

The league will be busy in an advisory role for the Golden Gate National Recreation area, which will be the first urban national park in the U.S., and Raab wants the area to become a place where persons locked in the inner-city can escape the concrete and the noise and the neon.

"I would like to see facilities there that appeal to urban minorities, like beaches and fishing areas. The tone of the effort should be in preservation and restoration with low-impact developments — trails, bike paths, toilet facilities — and low-profile camping sites. The emphasis should be away from attracting automobiles. We want to attract people not cars."

BORN and reared in Oakland, as a teenager Raab enjoyed backpacking in the Sierra, an activity that led to membership in the Sierra Club more than 30 years ago. "Joining the Sierra Club seemed like the natural thing to do then," he said, admitting that he lacked the maturity to anticipate the ravage of natural areas that would come through uncontrolled development and national affluence.

After service in the Naval Air Corps during World War II, Raab became aware of the need to live up to a slogan that now hangs on the wall of the conservation league office: "If you're going to be an ecologist, you've got to stir things up a little."

He also is a member of the Save the Bay Association, People for a Golden Gate National Recreation Area and San Francisco Planning and Urban Renewal (SPUR).

A commuter to San Francisco, with SPUR he is pursuing a flexible time schedule for office workers, intended to rid the highways of thousands of cars during the morning and evening traffic crush.

UNDER THE plan, all workers must put in a 40-hour, five-day week, and must be at their jobs between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. The balance of working time would be done at the discretion of the employee.

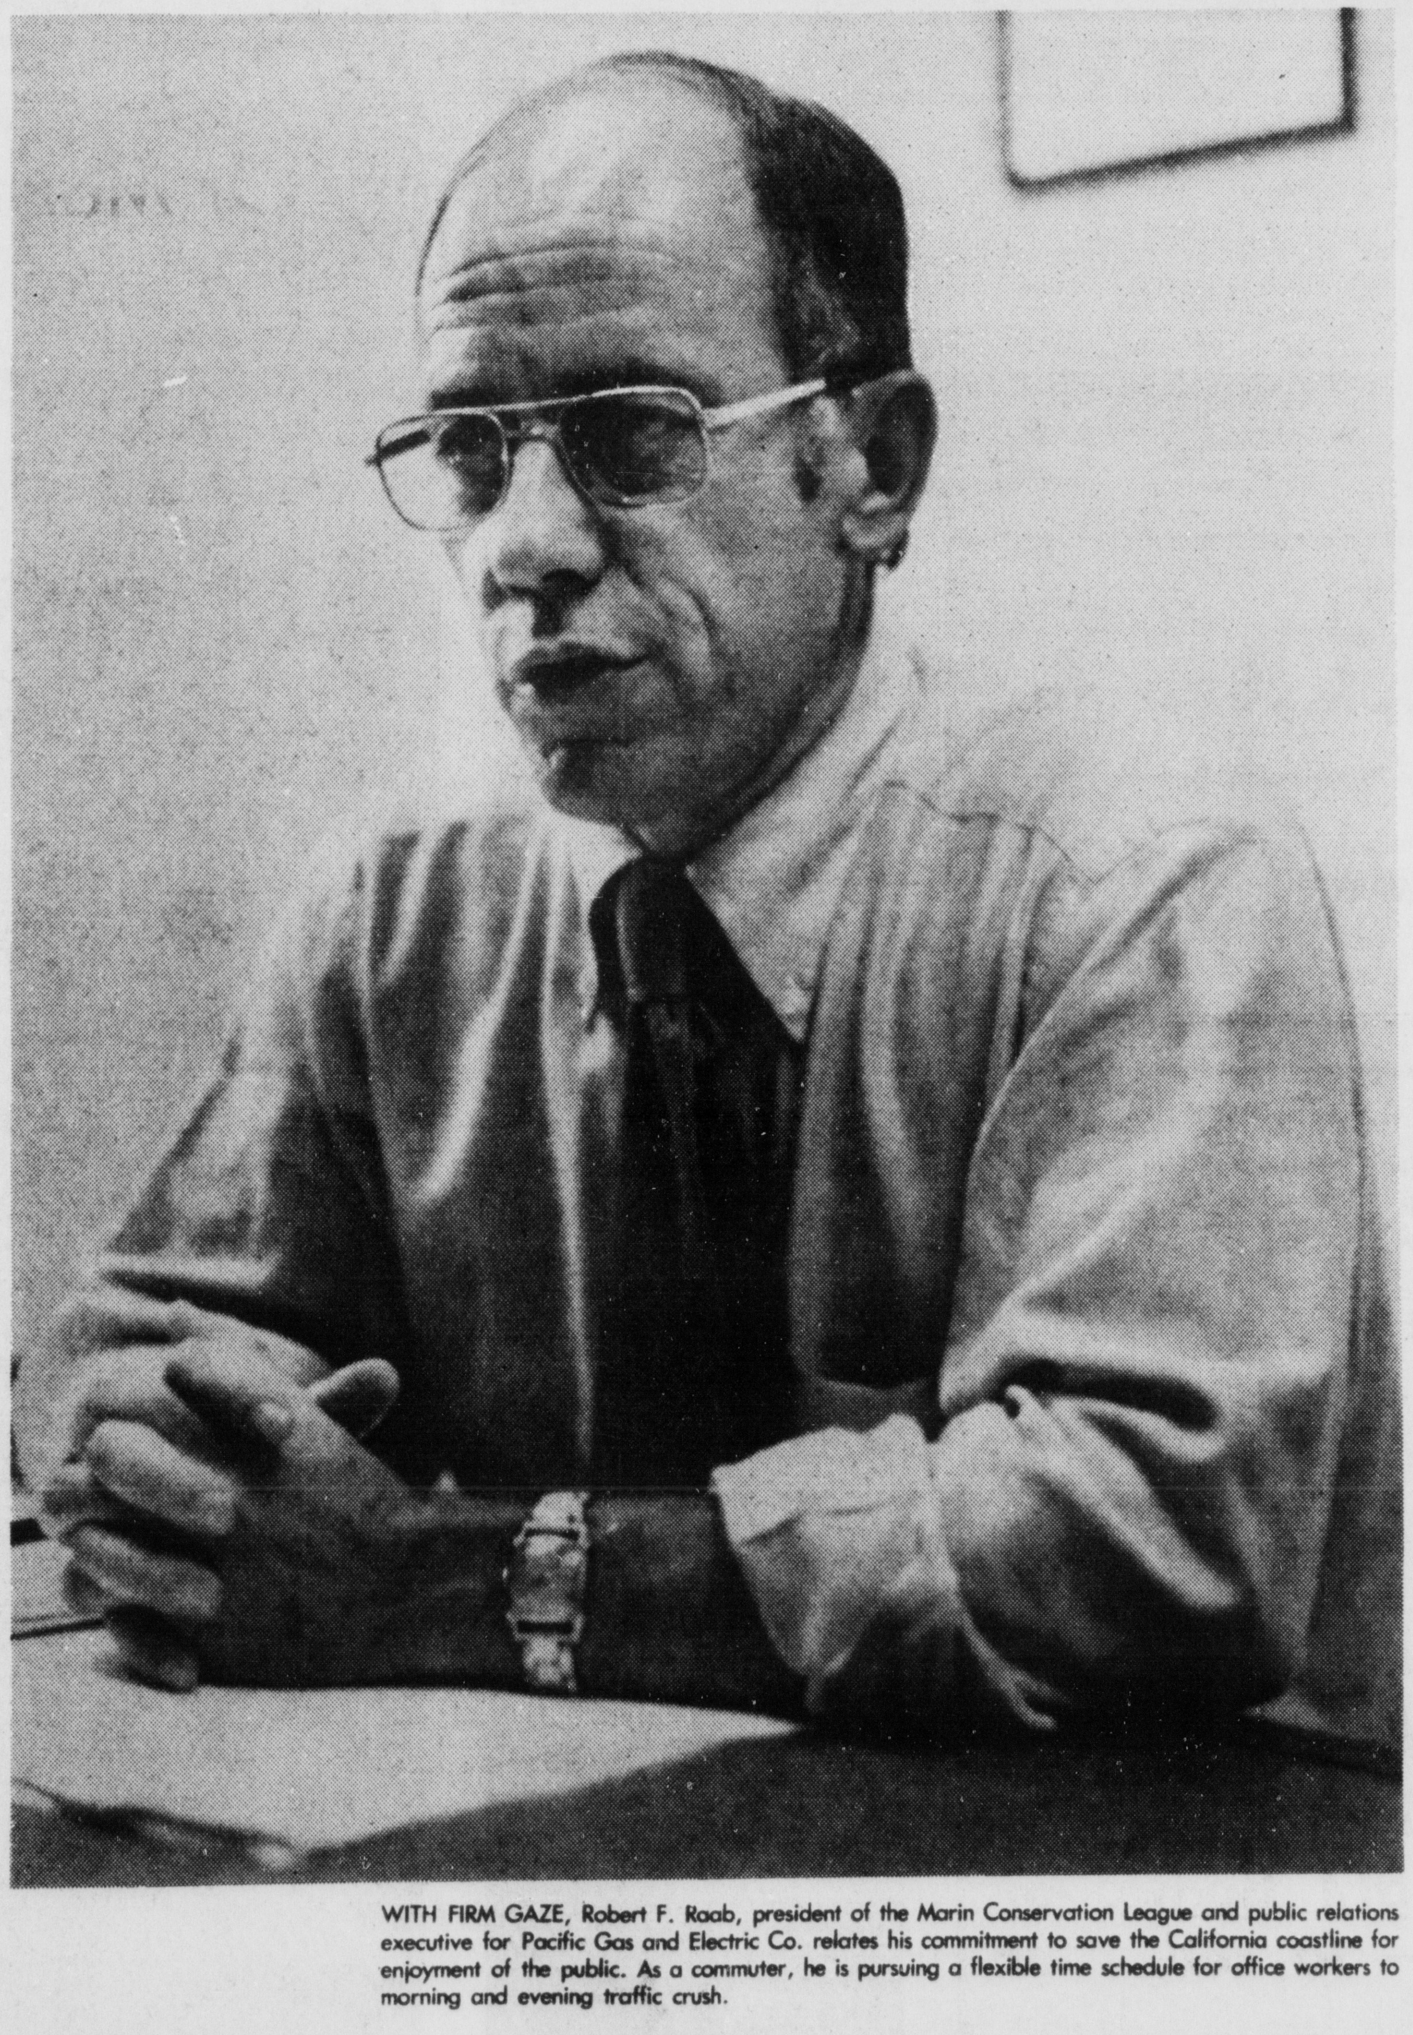
A graduate of St. Mary's College with a degree in English literature, Raab used to spend the three hours he spends each on the bus writing book reviews for this magazine. Now his travel time is consumed "doing homework" required as president of the conservation league.

And there is much to do. Founded in 1934 when the construction of the Golden Gate Bridge promised to turn Marin from a rural county to a suburban one, the league is more active than ever "keeping Marin green, involved in working for open space protection and acquisition," Raab said.

In addition to its other activities, including work to preserve the North Ridge area between Mill Valley and Larkspur and overseeing the use of Mount Tamalpais, the league will be advising the newly-formed county parks, recreation and open space commission on what areas to buy for open space with the money it has, Raab said.

THE LEAGUE also is working for implementation of the goals of planned population growth outlined in the Marin county general plan.

"I have no crystal ball." said Raab, "but I can't imagine Marin becoming a pasture for developers to roam around in. I am a planned growth advocate. The county plan, which the league endorses, reflects the kind of growth we should have."



WITH FIRM GAZE, Robert F. Raab, president of the Marin Conservation League and public relations executive for Pacific Gas and Electric Co. relates his commitment to save the California coastline for enjoyment of the public. As a commuter, he is pursuing a flexible time schedule for office workers to morning and evening traffic crush.

Life Of The Past Unfolds In Bits As Diggers Unearth Indian Artifacts

During the last two years MAPOM has been the driving force behind the opening of three new excavations across the county: at the former Pacheco Ranch north of Marinwood where mounds are to be preserved as open space; at San Jose Village, a planned Novato development where a young archaeologist conducted field classes for MAPOM last summer and a third in Nicasio, on a site named Ecta-Tamal, opened two years ago by Slaymaker and Winfield Henn, then chief archaeologist at California State University who is now working for a Ph.D. at the University of Oregon.

Many more sites still exist in the county, Gregoire says, even if at least half of Nelson's discoveries 67 years ago have been destroyed.

RELUCTANT to reveal exact locations for fear of attracting "potters," he stressed that random removal from a mound is "desecration."

Things removed without being studied, identified and catalogued (as to placement and depth), he says, become "worthless, losing all historic value."

If people want to dig, he said, "we'll give them screens and show them how to do it under controlled circumstances and explain how the Indians used what they dig up."

On a tour of four digs, our first stop was at the 519-acre tree studded former Pacheco Ranch where the U.S. Development Corporation of Orinda intends to build Village Marin, some 700 housing units on 138 acres.

At MAPOM's suggestion last year the corporation agreed to preserve three and possibly two more mounds on the site as open space. (At this writing four and a half mounds are slated for preservation, according to Gregoire.)

THE ACTION, termed "magnificent and ecology minded" by both Thieler and Gregoire, prevented "quick salvage" on the site where a mound is "ripped off in a week with no time for study," Thieler added.

U.S. Development Corp. last year gave MAPOM keys to the fenced site so that an archaeologist from the University of San Francisco and MAPOM members could begin work at their own rate of speed.

The company also agreed to fence the mound site, as a further precaution, Gregoire said, and voluntarily pulled back bulldozers on uncovering a previously undetected section of the mound.

by the College of Marin and Oakland's Laney College.

This mound could date back to 500 A.D., Thieler says, but this will not be proven until results of carbon dating (C-14) and microscopic analysis are learned.

ITS ABORIGINAL inhabitants were sexually segregated, he said, with men working with men and women with women. "These cats were hunters and gatherers, preoccupied with women, judging from their rules and regulations segregating the sexes."

(Only old women were allowed to enter the sweat houses where men lived and gambled for four days to rid themselves of human scents before hunting, Slaymaker reports, with men strictly barred from entering other dwellings assigned to women.)

Clewlow is hoping this dig may give some evidence of a structured or class conscious society. When asked if this was an evolutional advancement, he shot back, "for bureaucracy," not "humanitarianism."

ACCORDING to Thieler, Marin's Indians "lived like we would like to live" thriving on a diet of shellfish taken from the nearby Bay water, fowl, antelope, elk and deer.

A peace loving people who lived in harmony with their neighbors they welcomed the white man who came to teach them the ways of western civilization.

Unable to adapt to these ways, "they checked out real fast," he observed. Even reported instances of Indian attacks on Spanish and Mexican settlements were "individual attacks" and "reactions to an offense."

"They learned about the triumphant warrior image from the white man," he said, noting that Indians elsewhere became hostile to the white intrusion after "seeing what happened here."

Work will continue on this mound this winter by MAPOM and Indian Valley College under the direction of Betty Goerke of the College of Marin and Richard Cowan, an anthropologist and ethnographic filmmaker.

ON ARRIVING at the San Jose Village site in Novato, Gregoire pointed out how the mound's dark midden had been flattened by heavy machinery destroying its future archaeological value.

Last year at the suggestion of the Novato Planning Commission the developer gave MAPOM permission to hold Saturday archaeological field classes led by Thomas (Tom) Jackson, then working for a master's degree at California State University, San Francisco.

Before the bulldozing, Gregoire said, artifacts and objects had been removed and identified to preserve the historic value of the site.

If we can't preserve the actual mound either by legislative action or by working with the developer, he said, we can preserve knowledge by opening the site.

DURING a stop at the Olompali site where Slaymaker was ending a day's digging and study over a cold beer, we found a rolling meadow that less than 200 years ago had been a central village for about 350 Coast Miwok Indians.

On the southern bank of a creek that divides the village into two three-acre sites, Slaymaker pointed out an excavation that reveals a ceremonial dance house where not too long ago Marin's Indians shook their rattles and danced traditional ceremonials.

To the West was a cluster of units where the inhabitants manufactured large quantities of artifacts.

Olompali was a central village for a 50 square mile area extending from today's Black Point to San Marin.

(The Miller Creek site which has the remains of four ceremonial dance houses built within a 2,000 year period beginning in 700 B.C., was also a central village, for some 100 to 150 Indians, living in small villages between Lucas Valley's Big Rock, Puerto Suello and San Rafael, he said.)

BY FAR the largest settlement in the area (with more than 300 residents, it was gigantic compared to other villages such as Miller Creek where about 30 lived) Olompali was founded about 1200 A.D.

It was home to a prosperous people who lived off the nearby Petaluma marsh then filled with "wall to wall tule and waterfowl," he said. The nearby "salmon stuffed" creek was another food source.

Their other foods, according to Slaymaker, consisted of deer and elk, hunted all year round by men wearing hunting disguises and using bows and arrows.

Jackrabbits and cottontails were trapped in baskets; rats roasted over coals without removing the skins; grasshoppers roasted; basket-trapped quail; grey squirrels; salmon, either netted, basket-trapped or speared and ducks netted along the marsh.

They also dined on sturgeon, eel, soft shelled clams and shrimp.

PLANT FOODS included wild onions, clover, wild oats, acorns, blackberries, strawberries, thimbleberries, gooseberries, elderberries and manzanita and toyon berries. Honey was gathered from hives.

Arrows used in hunting large game and for war were tipped with obsidian from the Mount St. Helena region, he says. Arrows used for small game, deer and birds were made from wood.

Miwok men usually went naked while the women wore deerskin wraparound skirts. Both wore hairnets and men were tatooed on the arms, women on the face.

Each community had a headman (hoipu) and headwoman (maien) with only women inheriting titles in what he terms a "matriarchal society." Women also did most of the work.

According to Slaymaker clowns, firemen, magicians, fireeaters, headmen and headwomen were among those present at ceremonials in the dance houses.

THE LAST headman at Olompali was Camillo Ynitia, son of a chief who became the only Indian on record to be given a land grant by the Mexican government.

After the Act of Secularization closed California's missions in 1834 the government divided the former Indian-owned lands into grants measuring thousands of acres, parceling them out to settlers and colonists.

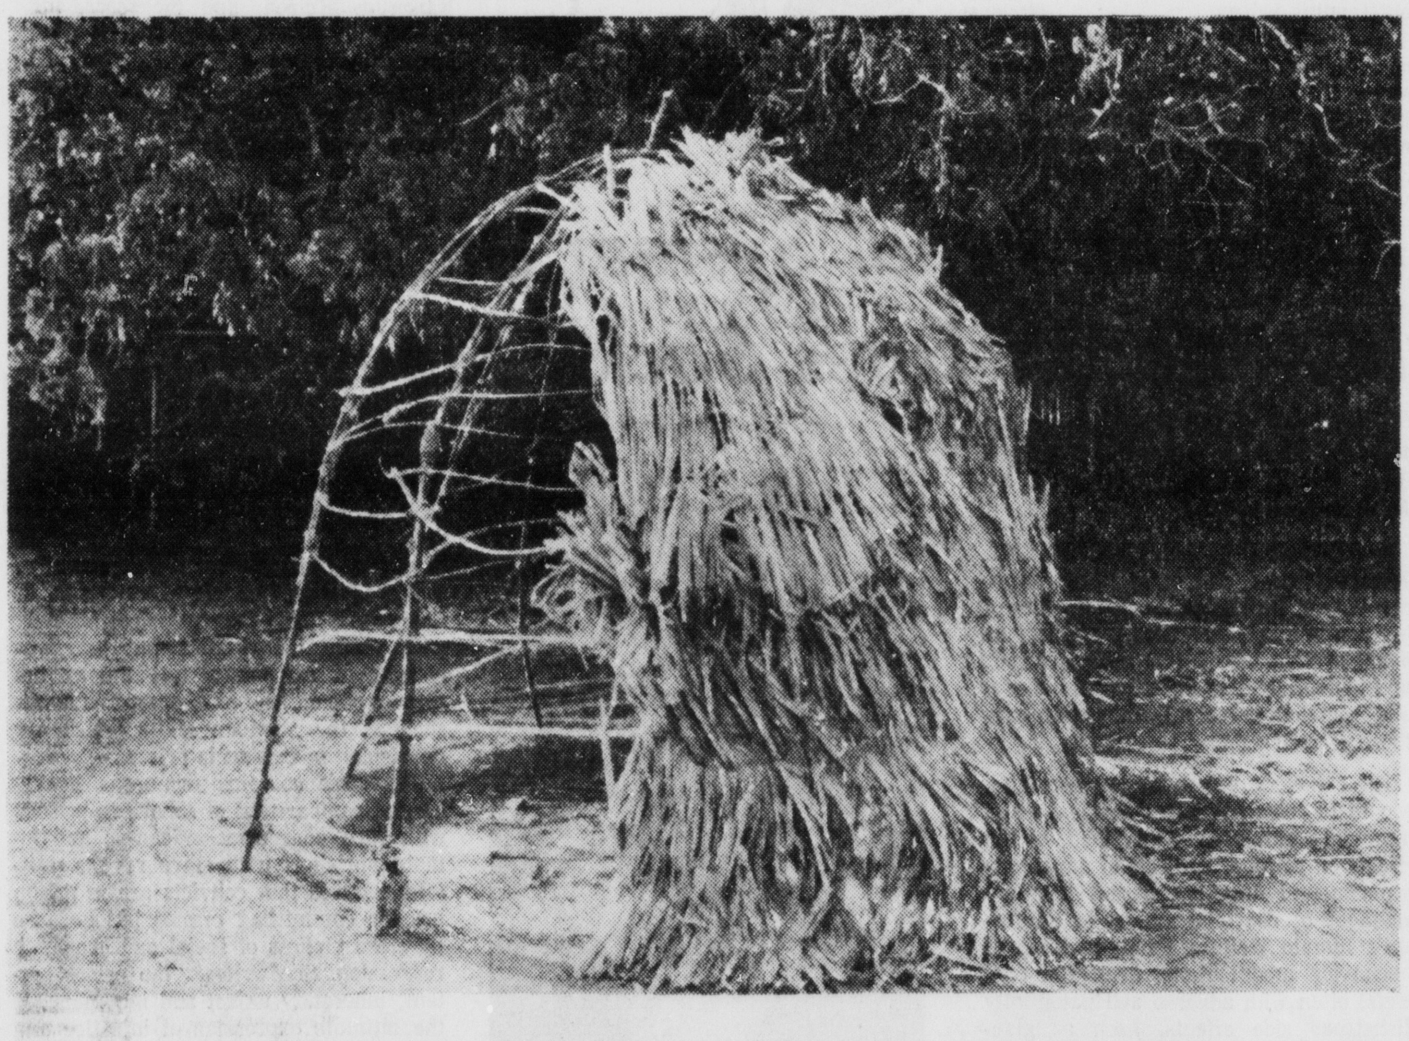
In 1856, four years after selling his ranch at Olompali to Scots-born pioneer James Black, Ynitia was murdered, possibly for the gold from the sale of the land.

Walls from an adobe built by Ynitia some 130 years ago — the only ones surviving from the 19th century — still stand on the land, survivors of a fire that destroyed the Burdell mansion in 1969.

The land is owned today by the University of San Francisco who purchased the property in 1948.

IN ORDER to acquaint the public with the ways of Indian life MAPOM is sponsoring a lecture series on Indian culture for five consecutive Tuesdays beginning Oct. 16 at 8 p.m. at the Miller Creek School.

Information may be obtained from Jerry Gregoire at 400 Miller Creek Road, Marinwood or Mrs. George D. McLean, 555 Cederberry Lane, San Rafael.



THIS RECONSTRUCTED Indian dwelling was built by students at the Miller Creek School in Marinwood on the Indian shell mound in back of the school. The mound, now operated as a museum by the Miwok Archaeological Preserve of Marin, was toured by almost 1,500 local school children last year.

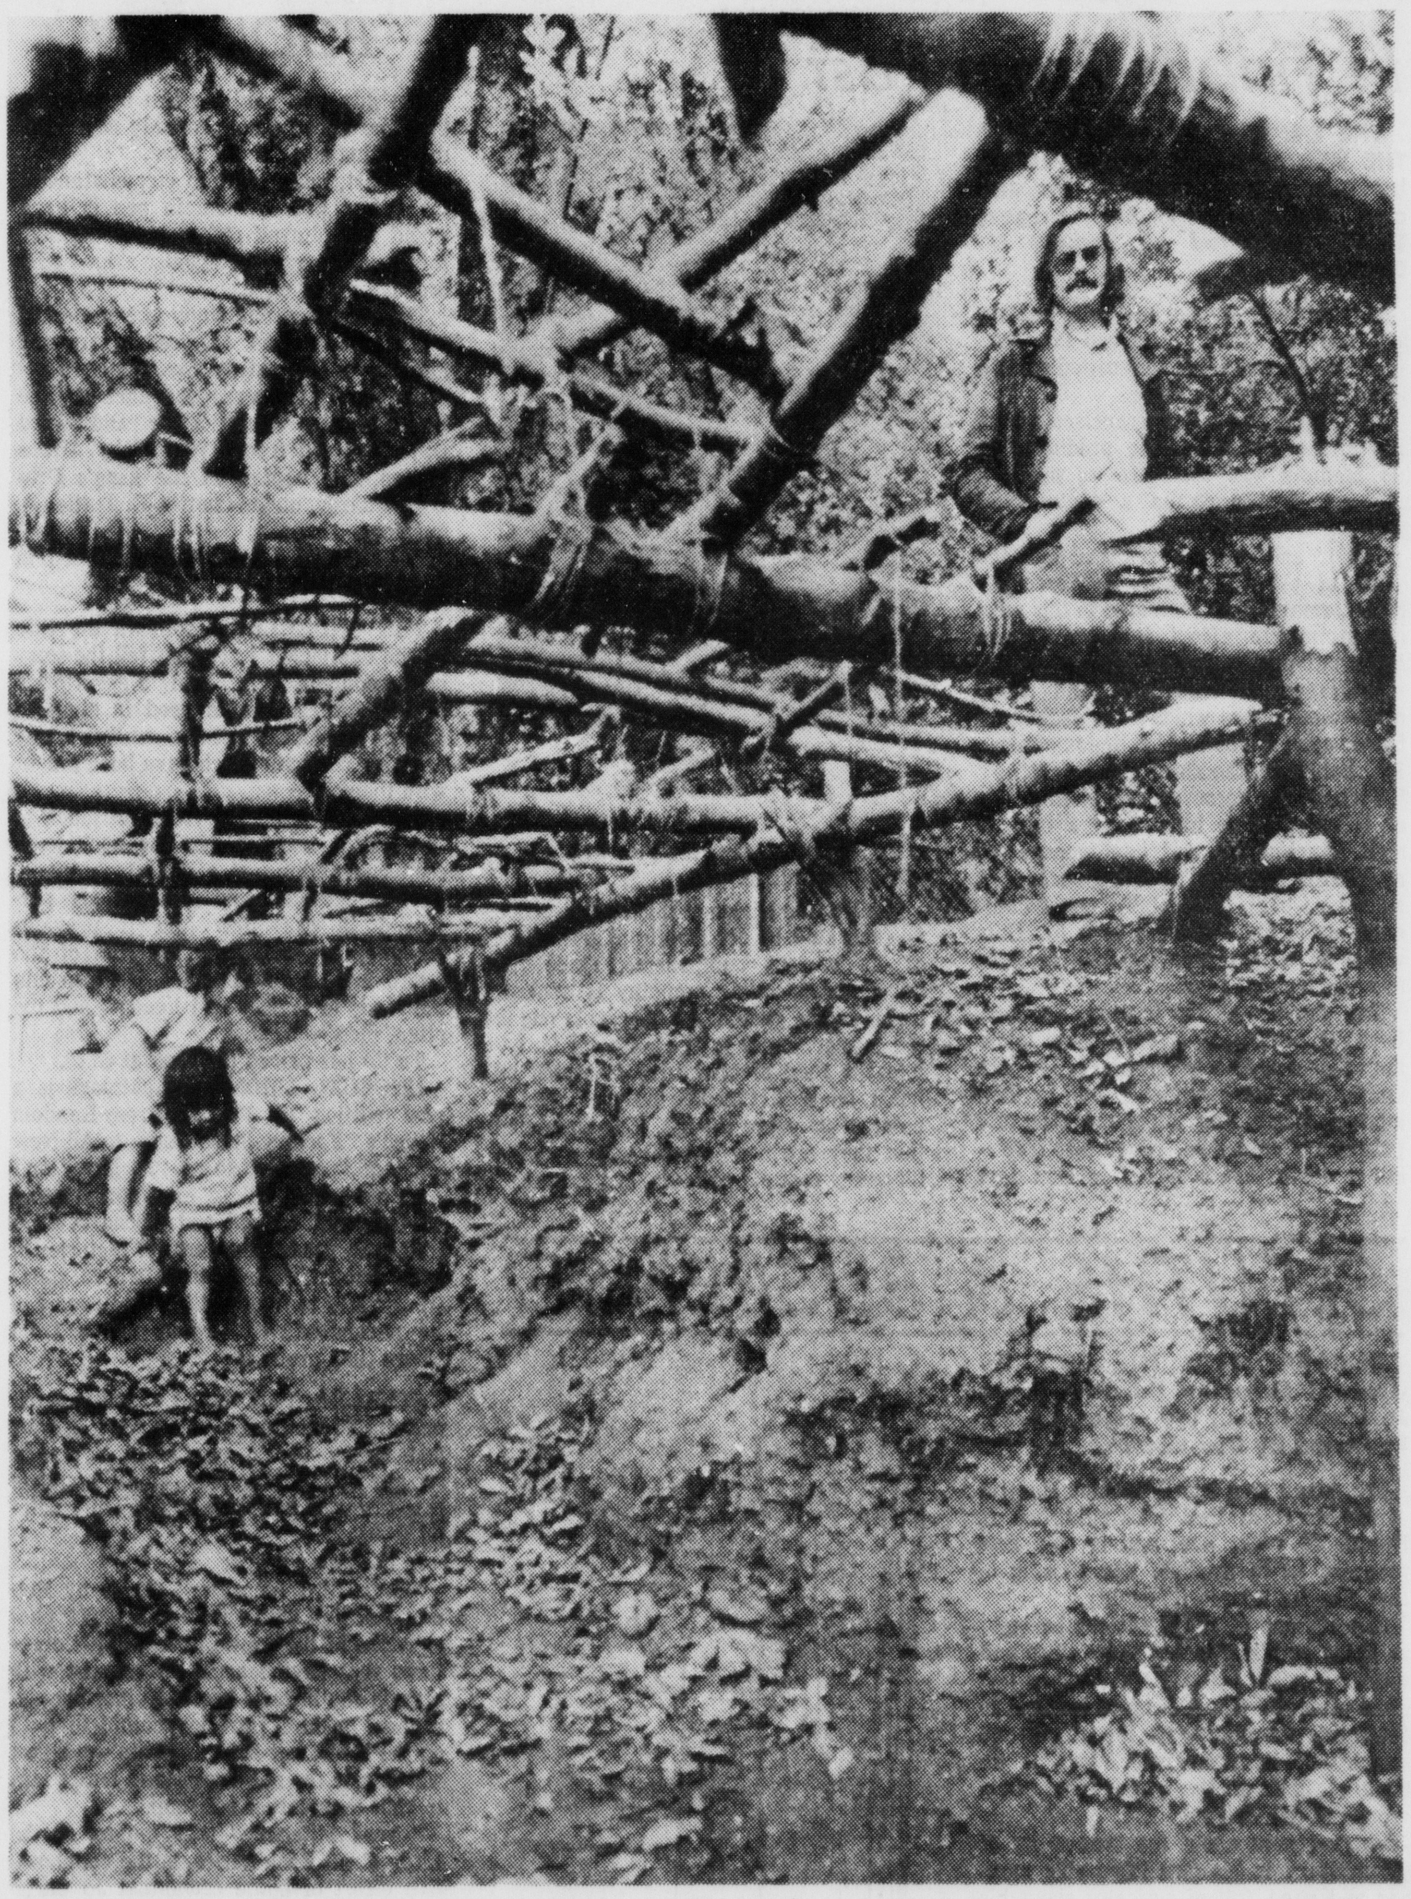
INDIAN SHELL MOUNDS identified and named by University of California faculty members almost 70 years ago are shown on this map of Marin. Awani-Wi, at the southern end, is on today's Dominican College campus; Ewu, near the Civic Center, Cotomkotca, on Marinwood's Miller Creek; Puyuku, the former Pacheco Ranch; Chokeche, Novato's San Jose Village and Olompali, north of Novato. Countless other mounds were scattered on creekbanks across the county.



TODDLERS Kevin, left, and Winona McLean play at the entrance of a Coast Miwok sweat house at the Miller Creek mound that centuries ago was a central village called Cotomkotca ("grasshopper houses.") Marin's Indian men usually lived and gambled in the sweat houses four days before hunting in an effort to rid themselves of human scents. This house was one of several building remains unearthed by archaeologist Charley Slaymaker, right, that are now included in an outdoor museum operated by MAPOM.

STORY OF CREATION

Even before the first people, the bird race, coyote was. After a time he took part of himself and made light where there had only been darkness. Later he made mud and earth water and air and the sun and moon cast their light on these things. Then coyote made the bird people, the first people. He made old frog woman who became his wife and eventually they created hawk who today is ever a reminder of the craft and wisdom of coyote. Once coyote became angry and he caused a flood to come across the land. Hawk flew away, frog woman swam to the top of the sweathouse and coyote just smiled. After the flood coyote made our people, the michako from the mud and sticks left over when the waters receded. We are the second race to inhabit this land. The bird people were first. They shall always be our great doctors and headmen. When they soar our spirits are lifted and we fly too.

Last year at the suggestion of the Novato Planning Commission the developer gave MAPOM permission to hold Saturday archaeological field classes led by Thomas (Tom) Jackson, then working for a master's degree at California State University, San Francisco.

Before the bulldozing, Gregoire said, artifacts and objects had been removed and identified to preserve the historic value of the site.

If we can't preserve the actual mound either by legislative action or by working with the developer, he said, we can preserve knowledge by opening the site.

DURING a stop at the Olompali site where Slaymaker was ending a day's digging and study over a cold beer, we found a rolling meadow that less than 200 years ago had been a central village for about 350 Coast Miwok Indians.

On the southern bank of a creek that divides the village into two three-acre sites, Slaymaker pointed out an excavation that reveals a ceremonial dance house where not too long ago Marin's Indians shook their rattles and danced traditional ceremonials.

To the West was a cluster of units where the inhabitants manufactured large quantities of artifacts.

Olompali was a central village for a 50 square mile area extending from today's Black Point to San Marin.

(The Miller Creek site which has the remains of four ceremonial dance houses built within a 2,000 year period beginning in 700 B.C., was also a central village, for some 100 to 150 Indians, living in small villages between Lucas Valley's Big Rock, Puerto Suello and San Rafael, he said.)

BY FAR the largest settlement in the area (with more than 300 residents, it was gigantic compared to other villages such as Miller Creek where about 30 lived) Olompali was founded about 1200 A.D.

It was home to a prosperous people who lived off the nearby Petaluma marsh then filled with "wall to wall tule and waterfowl," he said. The nearby "salmon stuffed" creek was another food source.

Their other foods, according to Slaymaker, consisted of deer and elk, hunted all year round by men wearing hunting disguises and using bows and arrows.

Jackrabbits and cottontails were trapped in baskets; rats roasted over coals without removing the skins; grasshoppers roasted; basket-trapped quail; grey squirrels; salmon, either netted, basket-trapped or speared and ducks netted along the marsh.

They also dined on sturgeon, eel, soft shelled clams and shrimp.

PLANT FOODS included wild onions, clover, wild oats, acorns, blackberries, strawberries, thimbleberries, gooseberries, elderberries and manzanita and toyon berries. Honey was gathered from hives.

Arrows used in hunting large game and for war were tipped with obsidian from the Mount St. Helena region, he says. Arrows used for small game, deer and birds were made from wood.

Miwok men usually went naked while the women wore deerskin wraparound skirts. Both wore hairnets and men were tatooed on the arms, women on the face.

Each community had a headman (hoi-pu) and headwoman (maien) with only women inheriting titles in what he terms a "matriarchal society." Women also did most of the work.

According to Slaymaker clowns, firemen, magicians, fireeaters, headmen and headwomen were among those present at ceremonials in the dance houses.

THE LAST headman at Olompali was Camillo Ynitia, son of a chief who became the only Indian on record to be given a land grant by the Mexican government.

After the Act of Secularization closed California's missions in 1834 the government divided the former Indian-owned lands into grants measuring thousands of acres, parceling them out to settlers and colonists.

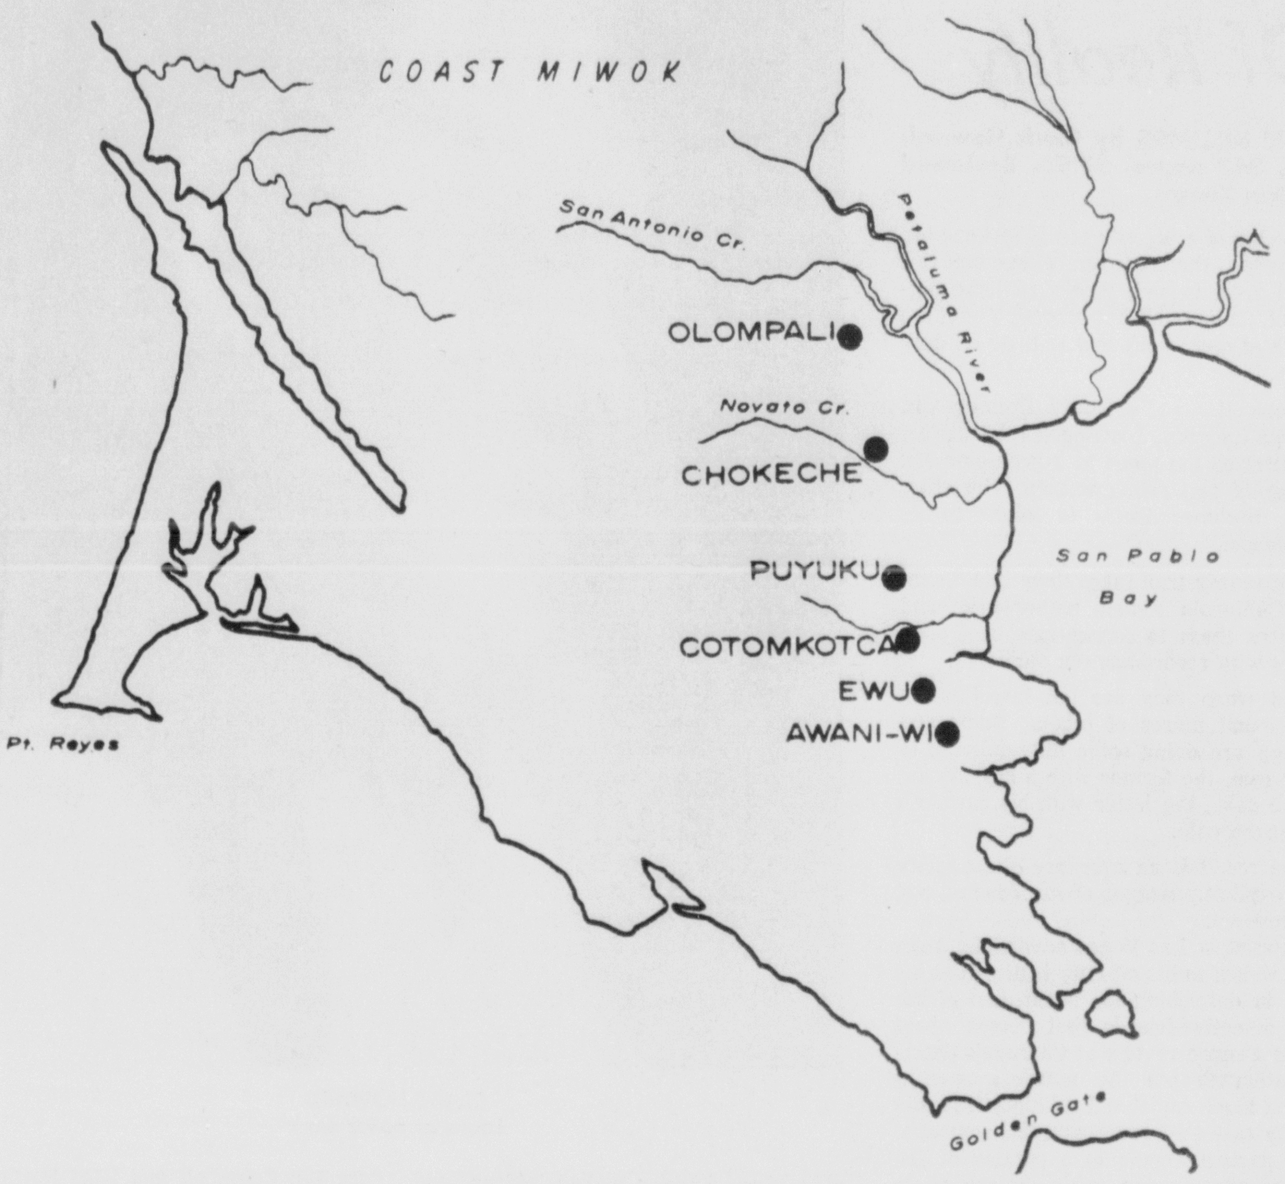
In 1856, four years after selling his ranch at Olompali to Scots-born pioneer James Black, Ynitia was murdered, possibly for the gold from the sale of the land.

Walls from an adobe built by Ynitia some 130 years ago — the only ones surviving from the 19th century — still stand on the land, survivors of a fire that destroyed the Burdell mansion in 1969.

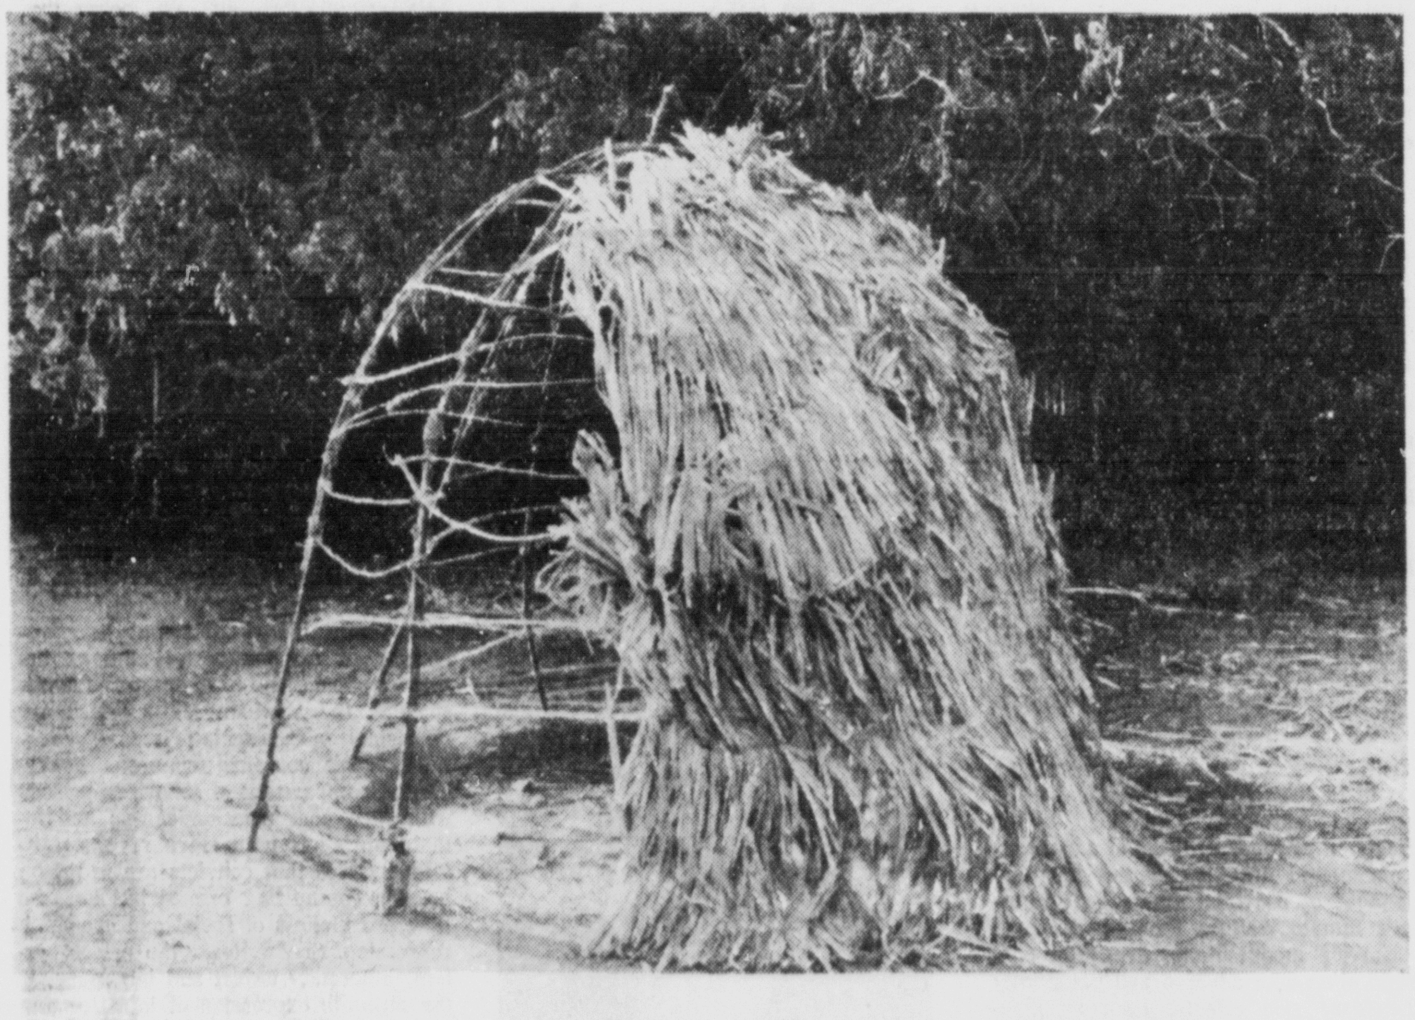
The land is owned today by the University of San Francisco who purchased the property in 1948.

IN ORDER to acquaint the public with the ways of Indian life MAPOM is sponsoring a lecture series on Indian culture for five consecutive Tuesdays beginning Oct. 16 at 8 p.m. at the Miller Creek School.

Information may be obtained from Jerry Gregoire at 400 Miller Creek Road, Marinwood or Mrs. George D. McLean, 555 Cederberry Lane, San Rafael.



INDIAN SHELL MOUNDS identified and named by University of California faculty members almost 70 years ago are shown on this map of Marin. Awani-Wi, at the southern end, is on today's Dominican College campus; Ewu, near the Civic Center, Cotomkotca, on Marinwood's Miller Creek; Puyuku, the former Pacheco Ranch; Chokeche, Novato's San Jose Village and Olompali, north of Novato. Countless other mounds were scattered on creekbanks across the county.



THIS RECONSTRUCTED Indian dwelling was built by students at the Miller Creek School in Marinwood on the Indian shell mound in back of the school. The mound, now operated as a museum by the Miwok Archaeological Preserve of Marin, was toured by almost 1,500 local school children last year.

SWINGING A SCREENING DEVICE, MAPOM's Paul Beber Venzo, a Terra Linda High School student from Lucas Valley, shakes midden loose from objects and artifacts left buried on the former Pacheco ranch centuries ago. To the left, Mrs. Sylvia Thalman, MAPOM's secretary and library clerk at the Mary E. Silveira School, meticulously picks out objects from her screen to be identified, catalogued and later placed in local museums.

TODDLERS Kevin, left, and Winona McLean play at the entrance of a Coast Miwok sweat house at the Miller Creek mound that centuries ago was a central village called Cotomkotca ("grasshopper houses.") Marin's Indian men usually lived and gambled in the sweat houses four days before hunting in an effort to rid themselves of human scents. This house was one of several building remains unearthed by archaeologist Charley Slaymaker, right, that are now included in an outdoor museum operated by MAPOM.

STORY OF CREATION

Even before the first people, the bird race, coyote was. After a time he took part of himself and made light where there had only been darkness. Later he made mud and earth water and air and the sun and moon cast their light on these things. Then coyote made the bird people, the first people. He made old frog woman who became his wife and eventually they created hawk who today is ever a reminder of the craft and wisdom of coyote. Once coyote became angry and he caused a flood to come across the land. Hawk flew away, frog woman swam to the top of the sweathouse and coyote just smiled. After the flood coyote made our people, the michako from the mud and sticks left over when the waters receded. We are the second race to inhabit this land. The bird people were first. They shall always be our great doctors and headmen. When they soar our spirits are lifted and we fly too.

Cop Orgy Falls Shy Of Reality

The life of a big city cop is just one big sex orgy — that is, if you believe that this novel does, indeed, give a realistic portrayal, as its publisher claims, of modern police at their work and in their off-duty hours.

Clark Howard's Eddie Fenner and George Cascade, Los Angeles detectives, are first on the scene at a gruesome sex killing of two young women. The case, then, becomes theirs to follow to its conclusion.

The seamy trail takes them into Southern California lesbian netherworld, and requires them to concentrate, too, upon males with records as sex offenders.

And when they are not investigating the sexual mores of others, Eddie and George are doing some dilly-dallying of their own, the former with a key witness in the case, the latter with his partner's estranged wife.

One result is an overdose of depravity and explicit passages of sex conduct and misconduct.

Howard, a Las Vegas advertising man who writes in his off-duty hours, is at his best in describing the separation of the two detective-friends that comes about when Fenner revolts at Cascade's determination to pin the murders upon a young black rapist and rid himself finally of the case that has begun to haunt him. The partners come to a parting of the ways, and Fenner works feverishly to uncover the real truth.

"The Killers" leaves a bad taste. One suspects that Joseph Wambaugh's "The Onion Field," based upon a real murder of a Los Angeles police officer and reviewed here recently, gives a more accurate picture of what the work and life of a policeman is really like than does this sensationalized treatment. And tht Ian Campbell and Karl Hettinger of "The Onion Field" were far more authentic depictions of the metropolitan police officer than Eddie Fenner and George Cascade of "The Killings."

Author Discovers Father In Tidbits From Past

THE EMINENT YACHTSMAN AND THE WHOREHOUSE PIANO PLAYER by Don Asher; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 256 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Francis M. Dozier Jr.

The memory of his late father, Dan, had, understandably, disturbed Don Asher for many years. He committed suicide when the author was three.

For Asher, now a San Francisco writer and former musician, the producing of his memoir was therefore as much a learning experience as a professional project.

Father and son are reunited and the mood of pre-World War II Worcester, Mass., remarkably recreated in this most commendable effort fashioned from imaginatively expanded shards of remembrance, conversations, and newly discovered letters which were exchanged by the elder Asher and his lifelong friend, S.N. Behrman, the noted playwright.

Through the correspondence, Dan Asher is revealed to have been a man of high, fanciful wit and intelligence who revelled in Behrman's soaring success. A success, which, incidentally, never came near obscuring Behram's love for Dan, whom he most sympathetically depicted in a posthumous play.

The author and his brother, Leonard, however, were long shielded from knowing the actual circumstances of the death. They were originally told by their mother, Daisy, that father had died of a pulmonary embolism. Which was true — but a death that occurred several days after he had slashed his own wrists in a mental institution.

Much of the charm of this reminiscence is generated by the family album effect of its various components. Once the hoped for nostalgic empathy is evoked, lesser facets glisten. An enjoyable one is the humor found in the author's forays into the field of chemistry in which he holds an M.S. Considering the vantage point of 20 years though, it is suspected that they are now imbued with a comic flippancy that did not exist at the time.

BROWSING BOOKMAN

The guy who said the pen is mightier than the sword quite probably never felt the cutting edge of the latter.

At least, under certain circumstances, the fellow with a fountain pen in hand would feel himself rather poorly armed, if facing an angry antagonist armed with broadsword or epee.

The collection and study of swords and other armour has acquired a growing impetus in the last decade. Hence, especially timely is the reappearance of "The Sword and the Centuries" or "Old Sword Days and Old Sword Ways," by Alfred Hutton, late captain of the King's Dragoon Guards, under Charles E. Tuttle Co. auspices.

The original edition was published in London in 1901.

THE UNDERLINES beneath the title on the dustjacket just about tell the story of the contents: ". . . being a description of the various swords used in civilized Europe during the last five centuries, and of single combats which have been fought with them."

There's a delightful Victorian touch to the Hutton text, so that the book itself seems something of a collector's piece. Various weapons and combats are portrayed in drawings. And it provides insights, not only into the role of the sword and its development, but also into the kinds of society that lived — and too often, died — by it.

Tuttle has priced the book at $8.50.

UNUSUAL AMONG the catalogs is a new edition of Pequot Press-Random House's "Factory Store Guide to All New England," credited to an "A. Miser and A. Pennypincher." In an appropriately old-fashioned format and priced at $2.95 softcover, the book covers 167 factories in northeastern United States where goods from shoes to toys and braided rugs can be purchased at bargain prices from where they are made.

STERLING Publishing Co. remains the undisputed champion in the field of craft and hobby books, producing a steady stream of unpretentious, small manuals that are modestly priced and truly helpful.

In the latest batch:

"Cage Bird Identifier" ($3.50) by Helmut Bechtel, with spectacular color photographs of the exotic little winged creatures that have learned to co-exist with man in the latter's home. Author-photographer Bechtel provides complete data on the birds, but it is his photo work that will dazzle the non-expert and tempt him to visit the nearest pet shop.

"Cross Stitchery" ($2.95), part of the Little Craft Book Series, is the collaborative effort of home economist Jo Christensen and needleworker Sonie Ashner, who have produced earlier successful books as a team, and who in this one explain the various stitches from the basics to the most complex, and provide directions on how these skills can be used to produce functional and ornamental items.

"Leathercrafting" ($2.95) is part of the same series and the work of Grete Petersen, who with text, photos and diagrams tells you how to create with hides projects ranging from leather hats to shoulder bags and country-style jewelry. It's a craft currently very popular with the younger set.

"Finger Weaving: Indian Braiding" ($2.95) by Alta Turner revives an old craft that flourished with the Indian tribes in the 18th and 19th centuries, and survives today, but with less attention than it deserves. It is offered as "easier than macrame" and with just as many exciting possibilities for finished products — scarves, purses, blankets, etc.

MAIGRET AND THE BUM by Georges Simenon; Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc., 149 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This small gem with Inspector Maigret at his cerebral best was published in French 10 years ago, and is only now reaching us in English. The passing of time has not injured its quality.

Beneath one of Paris' famous bridges, an aging bum is attacked in his sleep and thrown into the Seine. He is rescued just short of death. But it is up to Maigret to determine the motive for the attack, the identity of its perpetrator, and as an integral part of the puzzle the background of the victim.

Maigret goes about the unraveling of the mystery in his own inimitable manner and pace, full of curiosity about his fellow man and given to perceptive insights. An earlier drowning at another Seine bridge figures in the plot. So do the barge people, the derelicts on the shore, and the kin of the assault victim.

In a minimum of words and pages, Simenon wraps up a neat, cohesive, sound and entertaining story. And for the conclusion he holds back a special surprise for those of us who have followed Maigret admiringly to past triumphs over criminality and injustice, and who may have grown a trifle complacent and over-confident.

NEW BOOKS FOR JUNIOR READERS

One of the happier developments in children's literature is the availability of good quality, low cost paperback books for the tykes.

A recent batch of "Please Read to Me" books from Random Huse is representative of the best of these.

At a bargain 95 cents per book, boys and girls can choose from among the likes of "The Berenstain Bears' Nursery Tales" featuring the delightful family of bruins created by Stan and Jan Berenstain; Laurent de Brunhoff's "Meet Babar and His Family," starring you know who; a "Mother Goose" compilation with dandy illustrations by Aurelius Battaglia; "Wild Animals from Alligator to Zebra," featuring the beautifully realistic watercolors of Arthur Singer; Richard Scarry's "Find Your ABCs"; P. D. Eastman's uproarious "Big Dog . . . Little Dog"; the tender and exquisite "Poems and Prayers for the Very Young" chosen and illustrated wonderfully by Martha Alexander; and "Roses Are Red, Are Violets Blue??," Alice and Martin Provensen's ingenious introduction to the world of color. And Peter Lippman's "Busy Wheels" — every bit as busy as its title implies.

All these books are alive with color of the kind you expect in the highest quality hardcover books. All are the work of topnotch writers and artists.

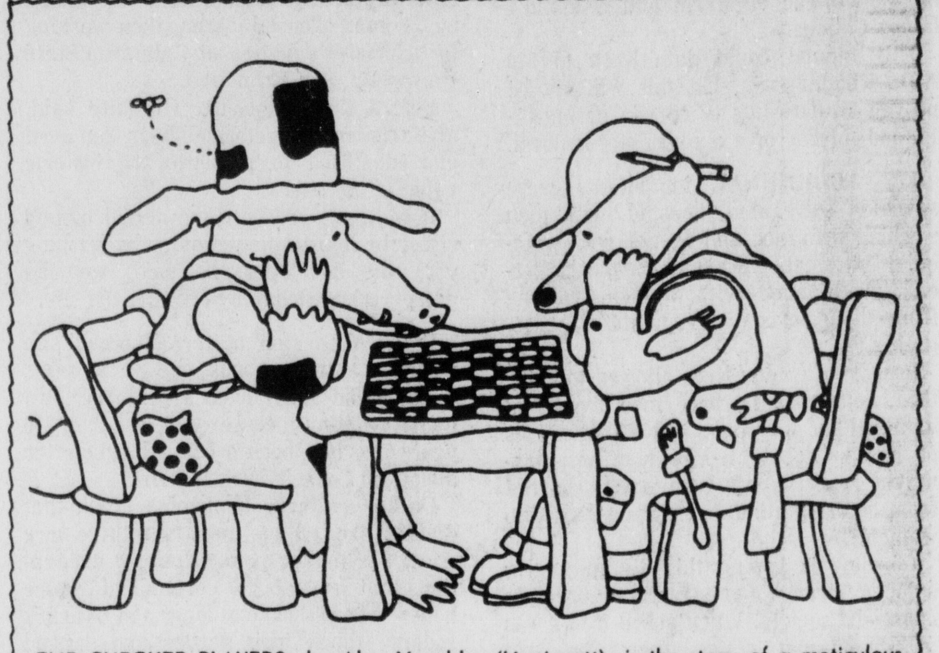
Also priced at 95 cents are Pantheon's Pinwheel Books, and here the child can pick from such as an adventure of a longtime favorite of the kindergarten set, "Our Veronica Goes to Petunia's Farm" by gifted Roger Duvoisin; "Red Riding," Jean Merrill and Ronni Solbert's original treatment of an old classic; "The Biggest House in the World," a delightful fable by popular Leo Lionni; "A Day of Autumn" by Betty Miles, with illustrations in appropriate fall hues by Marjorie Auerbach, and Barbara Brenner's entertaining "The Five Pennies."

Then there's Juliet Kepes' very different artwork in "Frogs Merry."

"Mother Goose" is a thicker $1.45 softcover Golden Book from Western Publishing Co. of Racine, Wis., and its Golden Press. Hilary Knight has packed the pages with lively, droll, amusing illustrations to accompany the familiar and beloved nursery rhymes. And the 64 pages should represent hours of repeated delight for the small ones.

Richard Scarry and other top writers and illustrators have also been representd in the Golden Books series of outstanding values.

For its Owlet Books, yet another series of high quality paperbacks for youngsters, Holt, Rinehart and Winston has issued a guide to promote the most effective use of its editions. Allen Yeager, a native of Sebastopol, a teacher of Waldo Rohnert School in Rohnert Park, has done the guide, cover the Owlet Books alphabetically to assist teacher, parent or librarian in making the "reading" of the picture book a learning exercise as well as recreation. The guide, itself a paperback, sells for $2.95.



THE CHECKER PLAYERS, by Alan Venable, (Lippincott), is the story of a meticulous carpenter and a carefree tinker, whose checker games always end in either squabbles or disasters until they learn to pool their talents.

THERE IS something about the humor of America that reflects the country at its best and seems to be especially appealing to the youngsters. Alvin Schwartz has put together an excellent collection of time-tested rib-ticklers, "Witcracks: Jokes and Jests from American Folklore" (Lippincott, $4.95), and Glen Rounds has done some appropriate drawings. For example, in the riddle category: "Why does a cow wear a bell? Its horns don't work." And: "What did the baby porcupine say when it backed into the cactus? Is that you, Mother?" Not the most sophisticated kind of humor, to be sure, but the kiddies want laughs and fun, not sophistication. And so do a good many of the rest of us. am, a Santa Barbara resident, tells it with the flourish of the balladeers of old.

YOUNG READERS interested in oceanography will not find any better introduction to the fast growing science than that given by Howard Pennington in "The New Ocean Explorers," Little, Brown, 282 pages, $5.95. This book, with plenty of photos and a solid index will interest adults as well.

IN HER "The Treasure Is The Rose," (Pantheon, $4.50), Julia Cunningham has created the kind of story of another time tht has captivated small girls for generations. The period is the 12th Century, the heroine the widow Ariane, the villain the Baron de Rincon, and the scene, the Chateau de Mon Coeur in France. And naturally, there's a hero. Knights and damsels in distress and derring-do are an old, old formula that has lost none of its charm when well done. Miss Cunningh-

American Penal System Under Fire In Mitford's Lates Social Study

In KIND AND USUAL PUNISHMENT, Jessica Mitford, author of "The American Way of Death," unleashes the fury of her pen in a new direction: the American penal system. Her latest book is a long and in-depth look at the numerous abuses and injustices in our prisons, particularly those of California.

These include prison wages averaging two to 16 cents per hour; medical tests, frequently carelessly supervised, of the effects on prisoner subjects of dangerous experimental drugs; apparent mismanagement of convicts' money in California's Inmate Welfare Fund; and use of "behavior modification" drugs on convicts, often with adverse and potentially disastrous side effects, such as glaucoma, bladder paralysis, or cessation of respiration for several minutes.

Many other abuses are chronicled in "Kind and Usual Punishment." One example is the questionable operations of the Solano Institute for Medical and Psychiatric Research at the Vacaville Medical Facility which hires convicts to take experimental drugs, work as laboratory aides, technicians, clerks, etc., despite the fact that the contracting out of convict labor is illegal in California.

JESSICA MITFORD
Criticizes prison system

Despite the impressive research Jessica Mitford has done on American corrections, "Kind and Usual Punishment" is hardly an objective work. For example, in a chapter entitled "The Lawlessness of Corrections," she charges prison officials with many illegal acts but mentions nothing of rampant crime among the convict population nor of organized gangs such as the Mexican Mafia which are flourishing in California prisons.

The book contains numerous heavy-handed comparisons of American prisons with Nazi concentration camps and inmate uprisings with slave revolts. Mitford believes that convicts are in prison not for committing crimes but because they are victims of social and economic repression. She writes, "the prison system, inherently unjust and inhumane, is the ultimate expression of injustice and inhumanity in the society at large."

Jessica Mitford's conclusion is that "prisons are intrinsically evil and should be abolished." Whether or not one agrees with her, those who are interested in the American penal system would be well advised to read "Kind and Usual Punishment."

Compassionate View Of General Through Victory And Defeat

THE LAST ENCOUNTER by Robin Maugham; McGraw-Hill Book Co., 176 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by John D. Yates.

"If Khartoum is relieved I shall go down as a hero. If Khartoum falls "I shall be presented to the public as a general who defied his orders" thus wrote Major General Charles George Gordon in his journal as he waited for the final attack of the Mahdi's forces.

Actually he was wrong in his predictions — Khartoum did fall but due to the bungling of Britain's Pro-Consul in Cairo, Sir Evelyn Baring, and to the reluctant inheritor of Britain's new and expanding Empire, Prime Minister William Gladstone.

Gordon's greatest champion was Victoria herself who upon the fall of Khartoum and the death of Gordon unleashed a withering blast against her Prime Minister from which he barely recovered, and Gordon became the peerless martyr/hero.

Much has been written about Gordon the soldier — the greatest commander of irregular troops of all times who performed miracles at the head of his Chinese 'Ever Victorious' army in the 1860's, dodging bullets and cannon balls and armed only with his bamboo cane (and innumerable brandies and sodas). Much has been written about Gordon the mystic, but nothing has been written before as compassionate as this novel about Gordon the man. Robin Maugham, nephew of the old master story teller, Somerset, using material gathered over a period of twenty years, has created a story based upon the supposed discovery of Gordon's missing last journal.

Gordon is revealed under seige both physically and emotionally as he questions his ambivalent sexuality, and his motives for accepting the job as Governor General of the Sudan. He records how he adopted several boys of poor families when he was stationed near the slums of London: ' . . . I am still in the bondage of my despicable temptations . . . I loved the boys I adopted, I desired them and that was sin enough . . . "

However tardily a relief expedition was prepared to rescue Gordon after he had been given an opportunity to leave. He receives this information with little emotion and then with horror that he has involved his country in what might really be an inherent death wish: " . . . Did I come out here to Khartoum only because I was yearning for death, but was afraid of accepting my nature and because I was afraid of committing the crime before God of killing myself? . . . "

Maugham's novel adds to the legend, gives a stark and moving picture of the last days of Khartoum, and leaves us wondering whether Britain's Empire could have ever survived the Victorian era without these strange saintly misfits who were so frequently to be found in the Army's officer corps, and who would not be tolerated in today's world.

Robin Maugham is a peer of the realm, inheriting his title from his father who was Lord Chancellor of England (and brother of Somerset). Robin Maugham has written many books of fiction and non-fiction, and one of his most successful was his recent autobiography, Escape from the Shadows, in which his famous Uncle 'Willie' plays a most prominent part.

NEW BOOKS FOR JUNIOR READERS

One of the happier developments in children's literature is the availability of good quality, low cost paperback books for the tykes.

A recent batch of "Please Read to Me" books from Random Huse is representative of the best of these.

At a bargain 95 cents per book, boys and girls can choose from among the likes of "The Berenstain Bears' Nursery Tales" featuring the delightful family of bruins created by Stan and Jan Berenstain; Laurent de Brunhoff's "Meet Babar and His Family," starring you know who; a "Mother Goose" compilation with dandy illustrations by Aurelius Battaglia; "Wild Animals from Alligator to Zebra," featuring the beautifully realistic watercolors of Arthur Singer; Richard Scarry's "Find Your ABCs"; P. D. Eastman's uproarious "Big Dog . . . Little Dog"; the tender and exquisite "Poems and Prayers for the Very Young" chosen and illustrated wonderfully by Martha Alexander; and "Roses Are Red, Are Violets Blue??," Alice and Martin Provensen's ingenious introduction to the world of color. And Peter Lippman's "Busy Wheels" — every bit as busy as its title implies.

All these books are alive with color of the kind you expect in the highest quality hardcover books. All are the work of topnotch writers and artists.

Also priced at 95 cents are Pantheon's Pinwheel Books, and here the child can pick from such as an adventure of a longtime favorite of the kindergarten set, "Our Veronica Goes to Petunia's Farm" by gifted Roger Duvoisin; "Red Riding," Jean Merrill and Ronni Solbert's original treatment of an old classic; "The Biggest House in the World," a delightful fable by popular Leo Lionni; "A Day of Autumn" by Betty Miles, with illustrations in appropriate fall hues by Marjorie Auerbach, and Barbara Brenner's entertaining "The Five Pennies."

Then there's Juliet Kepes' very different artwork in "Frogs Merry."

"Mother Goose" is a thicker $1.45 softcover Golden Book from Western Publishing Co. of Racine, Wis., and its Golden Press. Hilary Knight has packed the pages with lively, droll, amusing illustrations to accompany the familiar and beloved nursery rhymes. And the 64 pages should represent hours of repeated delight for the small ones.

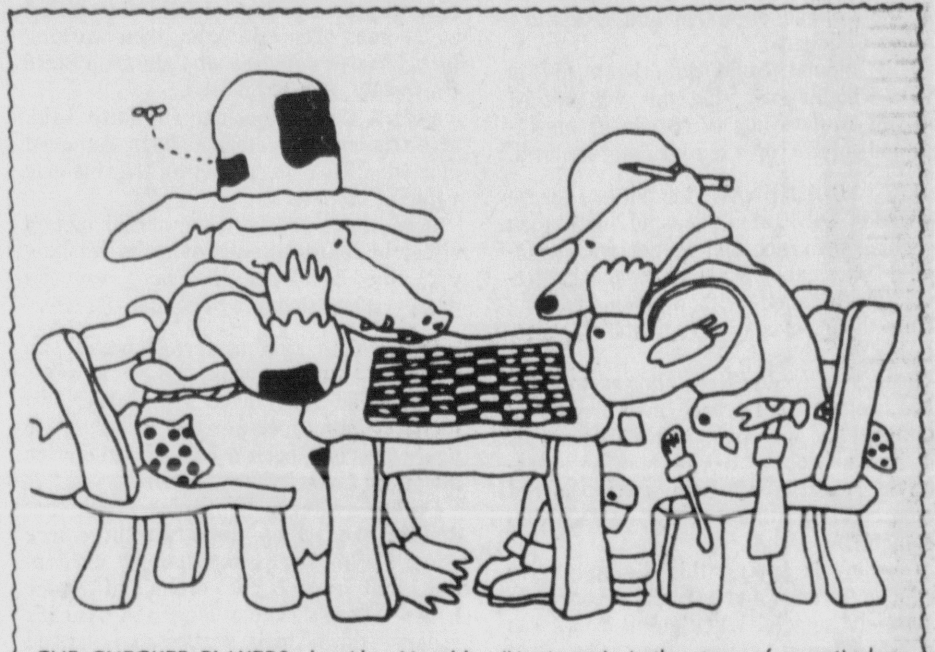
Richard Scarry and other top writers and illustrators have also been represented in the Golden Books series of outstanding values.

For its Owlet Books, yet another series of high quality paperbacks for youngsters, Holt, Rinehart and Winston has issued a guide to promote the most effective use of its editions. Allen Yeager, a native of Sebastopol, a teacher of Waldo Rohnert School in Rohnert Park, has done the guide, cover the Owlet Books alphabetically to assist teacher, parent or librarian in making the "reading" of the picture book a learning exercise as well as recreation. The guide, itself a paperback, sells for $2.95.

THERE IS something about the humor of America that reflects the country at its best and seems to be especially appealing to the youngsters. Alvin Schwartz has put together an excellent collection of time-tested rib-ticklers, "Witcracks: Jokes and Jests from American Folklore" (Lippincott, $4.95), and Glen Rounds has done some appropriate drawings. For example, in the riddle category: "Why does a cow wear a bell? Its horns don't work." And: "What did the baby porcupine say when it backed into the cactus? Is that you, Mother?" Not the most sophisticated kind of humor, to be sure, but the kiddies want laughs and fun, not sophistication. And so do a good many of the rest of us. am, a Santa Barbara resident, tells it with the flourish of the balladeers of old.

YOUNG READERS interested in oceanography will not find any better introduction to the fast growing science than that given by Howard Pennington in "The New Ocean Explorers," Little, Brown, 282 pages, $5.95. This book, with plenty of photos and a solid index will interest adults as well.

IN HER "The Treasure Is The Rose," (Pantheon, $4.50), Julia Cunningham has created the kind of story of another time tht has captivated small girls for generations. The period is the 12th Century, the heroine the widow Ariane, the villain the Baron de Rincon, and the scene, the Chateau de Mon Coeur in France. And naturally, there's a hero. Knights and damsels in distress and derring-do are an old, old formula that has lost none of its charm when well done. Miss Cunningh-



THE CHECKER PLAYERS, by Alan Venable, (Lippincott), is the story of a meticulous carpenter and a carefree tinker, whose checker games always end in either squabbles or disasters until they learn to pool their talents.

In KIND AND USUAL PUNISHMENT, Jessica Mitford, author of "The American Way of Death," unleashes the fury of her pen in a new direction: the American penal system. Her latest book is a long and in-depth look at the numerous abuses and injustices in our prisons, particularly those of California.

These include prison wages averaging two to 16 cents per hour; medical tests, frequently carelessly supervised, of the effects on prisoner subjects of dangerous experimental drugs; apparent mismanagement of convicts' money in California's Inmate Welfare Fund; and use of "behavior modification" drugs on convicts, often with adverse and potentially disastrous side effects, such as glaucoma, bladder paralysis, or cessation of respiration for several minutes.

Many other abuses are chronicled in "Kind and Usual Punishment." One example is the questionable operations of the Solano Institute for Medical and Psychiatric Research at the Vacaville Medical Facility which hires convicts to take experimental drugs, work as laboratory aides, technicians, clerks, etc., despite the fact that the contracting out of convict labor is illegal in California.

Despite the impressive research Jessica Mitford has done on American corrections, "Kind and Usual Punishment" is hardly an objective work. For example, in a chapter entitled "The Lawlessness of Corrections," she charges prison officials with many illegal acts but mentions nothing of rampant crime among the convict population nor of organized gangs such as the Mexican Mafia which are flourishing in California prisons.

The book contains numerous heavy-'handed comparisons of American prisons with Nazi concentration camps and inmate uprisings with slave revolts. Mitford believes that convicts are in prison not for committing crimes but because they are victims of social and economic repression. She writes, "the prison system, inherently unjust and inhumane, is the ultimate expression of injustice and inhumanity in the society at large."

Jessica Mitford's conclusion is that "prisons are intrinsically evil and should be abolished." Whether or not one agrees with her, those who are interested in the American penal system would be well advised to read "Kind and Usual Punishment."

Compassionate View Of General Through Victory And Defeat

"If Khartoum is relieved I shall go down as a hero. If Khartoum falls "I shall be presented to the public as a general who defied his orders" thus wrote Major General Charles George Gordon in his journal as he waited for the final attack of the Mahdi's forces.

Actually he was wrong in his predictions — Khartoum did fall but due to the bungling of Britain's Pro-Consul in Cairo, Sir Evelyn Baring, and to the reluctant inheritor of Britain's new and expanding Empire, Prime Minister William Gladstone.

Gordon's greatest champion was Victoria herself who upon the fall of Khartoum and the death of Gordon unleashed a withering blast against her Prime Minister from which he barely recovered, and Gordon became the peerless martyr/hero.

Much has been written about Gordon the soldier — the greatest commander of irregular troops of all times who performed miracles at the head of his Chinese 'Ever Victorious' army in the 1860's, dodging bullets and cannon balls and armed only with his bamboo cane (and innumerable brandies and sodas). Much has been written about Gordon the mystic, but nothing has been written before as compassionate as this novel about Gordon the man. Robin Maugham, nephew of the old master story teller, Somerset, using material gathered over a period of twenty years, has created a story based upon the supposed discovery of Gordon's missing last journal.

Gordon is revealed under seige both physically and emotionally as he questions his ambivalent sexuality, and his motives for accepting the job as Governor General of the Sudan. He records how he adopted several boys of poor families when he was stationed near the slums of London: ' . . . I am still in the bondage of my despicable temptations . . . I loved the boys I adopted, I desired them and that was sin enough . . . "

However tardily a relief expedition was prepared to rescue Gordon after he had been given an opportunity to leave. He receives this information with little emotion and then with horror that he has involved his country in what might really be an inherent death wish: " . . . Did I come out here to Khartoum only because I was yearning for death, but was afraid of accepting my nature and because I was afraid of committing the crime before God of killing myself? . . . "

Maugham's novel adds to the legend, gives a stark and moving picture of the last days of Khartoum, and leaves us wondering whether Britain's Empire could have ever survived the Victorian era without these strange saintly misfits who were so frequently to be found in the Army's officer corps, and who would not be tolerated in today's world.

Robin Maugham is a peer of the realm, .inheriting his title from his father who was Lord Chancellor of England (and brother of Somerset). Robin Maugham has written many books of fiction and non-fiction, and one of his most successful was his recent autobiography, Escape from the Shadows, in which his famous Uncle 'Willie' plays a most prominent part.

Zion Park — "Personal"

Zion National Park is sort of the Grand Canyon in reverse. You view the magnificence by looking up.

It's a personal park, almost vest-pocket in size, compared with the Grand Canyon National Park and its Utah neighbor, Bryce National Park.

It houses such wonders as the world's largest monolith, "The Great White Throne," which is hard by towering peaks called the Three Patriarchs. Still, all of its wonders are within a few minutes' riding or walking time from the Zion Lodge and cabins, according to TWA Services, Inc., which now operates all three of the parks facilities.

ONE OF the favorite walks is an easy one to Weeping Rock, the sheer wall of a box canyon from which water tumbles or seeps, depending on the season, less than a half mile and a half hour away.

A full range of services is available from bicycles, through nature walks supervised by members of the National Park Service, swimming, amateur theatricals by the staff, and even campfire lectures.

Prices at Zion Lodge range from $7 a day for a single in a standard cabin, to as little as $19 for a family of four in a two-room cabin.

Motor bus tours from Cedar City, Utah range from one to five days covering all three of the parks. TWA flights into Las Vegas and Phoenix connect with bus and other air services into Cedar City.

A Lazy Day On Bicycles At Yosemite

By MARY JO HINTON

The scraping of gravel and leaves under our wheels welcomed the beginning of a sunny day cycling in Yosemite.

Being that I haven't ridden a bike in years, and that my friend was very proficient on her bike, I was glad to see that the cycling routes on the valley floor were fairly flat, just so I could keep up and not show obvious signs of fatigue.

We turned onto the eight-mile El Capital Loop following the flow of traffic. We eased along taking in the fresh morning air and feeling very sensitive and alert.

On one of the foot-bike trails that occasionally came up, we detoured to cross a calm meadow. There, feeding in the waist high grass, was a doe and her fawn. They didn't seem to notice us, and we watched in silence.

WHEELING ALONG at a leisurely pace, stopping when something of interest catches our eye, then moving on again without the hassle of fighting city streets and irate commuters in a hurry. Visitors to Yosemite are on vacation, and most share the relaxed mood that the valley encourages.

We could have covered nearly 20 miles of paved roads in the valley floor alone if we wanted to, without much change in elevation. The highest point is Mirror Lake at the east end of the valley (4,039 feet) and the lowest is at the Pohono Bridge at the west end (3,817 feet).

By mid-morning we found company while cycling. Whole families on bikes, even toddlers in kiddie-seats, were out enjoying the spectacular scenery. It's easy enough for families to rent bikes from either Curry Village or Yosemite Lodge rental shops.

John Muir, who discovered the valley, described his feelings towards it as "things frail and fleeting and types of endurance meeting here and blending in countless forms, as if into this one mountain mansion Nature had gathered her choicest treasures. . ."

IN THE EAST end of the valley, private motor vehicles are prohibited and the roads are shared by bicycles and shuttle buses only. We found the route runs from Curry Village to Happy Isles, which is the trailhead to Vernal and Nevada Falls, then on to Indian Caves.

Since coaster brakes are not designed for down grades such as the Mirror Lake hill, we were cautioned to make the trip from Indian Caves to the lake on foot. This is the only steep grade on the valley floor. I am the first to admit I don't want skinned knees, so we made the short walk in no time and with no incidents.

We moseyed away the day exploring the terrain, pitching rocks in the river, chatting with other pedaling adventurers.

We stopped to talk to some people who had cycled into the high country and spent several days going up. The park has 150 miles of paved roads, all are available for bicycling in the spring, summer and fall, and many, weather permitting, in the winter.

With the final braking, we returned our bikes at one of the bike rental shops, and called it a day — and an enjoyable day at that.

A Bit Of Old England In The New World

The picturesque village of Como in Quebec was so named by pioneer settlers because the magnificent beauty of its surroundings reminded them strongly of Como in Italy.

Today, this quiet Canadian community has another link with the Old World — the village inn known as Willow Place, run by English-born Pat Garbutt and his Scottish-born wife Zena.

Because it represents an escape from the noisier type of holiday resort, the 20-room inn does a year-round business, chiefly with sportsmen and sportswomen who enjoy horse-riding, husky dog racing, sailing, and old fashioned hospitality.

With its white stucco walls, high sloping roofs, black shutters, and red doors, Willow Place looks like a flashback to the Europe of another more gracious period of history.

The menu specialty is traditional English: roast beef, Yorkshire pudding, steak-and-kidney pie, washed down with the inevitable flagon of brown ale.

Host Pat Garbutt describes his hostelry as "a place where people can drop in for a quiet drink and a good meal like your mother used to make."

HISTORIC BASEL, at the elbow of the Rhine, is a "devoted patron of the arts" and a host to many throughout the centuries.

BASEL—Ancient Host To Wanderers

BASEL, SWITZERLAND — Tourists entering Switzerland here at the "Three Countries Corner" usually see little more of Basel than the inside of its huge railway station.

It's a shame, especially for those with a sense of history. For the ancient Roman town that flourished at the height of the Renaissance still ranks as one of Europe's most devoted patrons of the arts. And it's a charming host to international wanderers as well.

Now a booming chemical center and the home of a quarter of a million Swiss, Basel owes much of its past prosperity to its superb location. It sits on both sides of the mighty Rhine as the river bends and surges northward to form the French-German border.

MERCHANTS thrived in this "free city" of the late Middle Ages, thanks to its bustling port and guildsmen's fair. In 1971 Baslers marketed the wares from the rest of Europe for the 500th year. Each October the fair's stalls and amusement park fill Petersplatz, the square vis-a-vis the university that was founded in 1460.

Basel built its reputation as a cultural center during the Renaissance and Reformation. Charlemagne had commissioned the imposing cathedral, or Munster, but it passed into Protestant hands in 1523. Erasmus of Rotterdam, the university's most noted scholar at the time, guided the reformers to a humanistic outlook which survives even today.

Visitors can admire the art masterpieces in Erasmus's collection at the Basel Kunstmuseum (one of 23 local museums!) These include many treasured paintings by Hans Holbein the Younger. Roughly 3,000 other works of art have joined the Holbeins since Rembrandt's day.

IRONICALLY, the Kunstmuseum is best known for the 20th-century art displayed in its third-floor galleries. During the 1930's it became a refuge for works condemned as "decadent" by Germany's Third Reich.

Today the museum can boast of owning Europe's most impressive collection of modern art.

Discerning visitors will naturally be drawn to Basel's old quarter. Many of the shops and houses along these narrow, winding streets and alleys date back to the 1400's. The best of the restored medieval architecture can be seen on a foot tour along the Nadelberg, a street above the busy Marktplatz.

History buffs will also want to view the last remains of the ancient city walls near the St. Alban's Gate. Two other gates, St. Johann's and the famous Spalentor, give tourists some concept of the city's defenses in the Dark Ages.

FOR THOSE intent on wowing the folks back home a trip to the Three Countries Corner is advised. This point lies in the Rhine harbor and is reached by way of Fasel's Kleinhuningen section. A pylon monument marks the Swiss, French, and German frontier juncture. You obviously can't straddle it, but a "round trip" through all three countries can be run in about five seconds.

Animal lovers have a treat in store at Basel Zoo, one of the world's best. Somehow zookeepers here coax many species that seldom breed in captivity to produce offspring. The zoo's pride and joy is its uniquely designed ape house; but the new vivarium, housing fish and reptiles, also merits a lingering visit.

Music and theatre lovers, especially those with a command of German, will find an evening at the Basel Stadttheater well spent. The city's new theater and opera house, a massive modern complex, was to stage its first performance in September. The old Stadttheater will become yet another museum.

Getting around Basel is no problem. The inner city, with its many historic landmarks, is compact enough to be explored conveniently by foot. But shiny green trams and buses provide remarkably good service elsewhere.

Basel is also a natural embarking point for a four-to-five day Rhine trip by luxury liner to the Netherlands. Or a debarking point from cruises originating in Rotterdam.

For A Different Vacation—Green Hell

By ROBERT BROWN

It used to be called the Green Hell, that portion of the Brazilian Amazon basin where the jungle grows wild and so do the Indians.

Impenetrable, full of mystery, an area where explorers tended to disappear and legends arose of strange animals and even stranger tribes.

The increasing popularity of Manaus, a major port midway up the fabled river from Belem, began the tourism trend to the Green Hell. And now Santarem, this second-largest of the jungle cities in the river basin is sprouting resort characteristics.

THE RECENTLY-opened Tropical Santarem Hotel, a subsidiary of the nation's airline, Varig, has already made the name a stylish addition to the "my trip was more exotic than yours" game. It is actually situated on the Tapajos River, one of the great tributaries of the Amazon, and the river has the same characteristics as the Rio Negro in that it is totally clear — but deep green from vegetation and bark.

To witness the meeting of the dark, awesome Amazon and the green waters of the Tapajos River is an unforgettable experience — an experience that has been virtually built into the Tropical Hotel Santarem. All 120 guest rooms are laid out in a semi-circular design as if to encompass the view they share. Each has air conditioning, radio, television and individual refrigerator. Tropical gardens open up still other vistas of exotic plants and flowers. Bathers can enjoy any of the hotel's several swimming pools.

In the city of Santarem — the hotel's guests are offered varied sightseeing attractions: colorful religious feast days, unusual handicrafts, and shopping for articles of wood from the neighboring forests of the Amazon.

(Varig's Tropical Hotel Co. has hotels also in Manaus, Sao Paulo, Bahia, Iguazu, Joao Pessoa, and Natal as part of a strong program to lure the tourist out into the vast country.)

WHITE SAND beaches make river swimming a refreshing delight — and the notorious pirahna, which can strip man or beast of flesh in seconds, hasn't found this tributary yet.

This city of 200,000, perched mid-way between Manaus and Belem, and booming partly because it is the crux of a new highway from Belem to Brazilia, is a timber and mining center. But for the vacationer there are safaris, fishing and local hunting.

The great safari trophy is, of course, the jaguar — and in Brazil it is not an endangered species, for the big cat is a marauder and frequently plunders the isolated farms and Indian villages. The jaguar is hunted along the river banks in the uninhabited areas and is almost never found where there is any degree of civilization.

In addition the lynx, tapir, capybara (a large rodent) and mountain lion are hunted.

LOCAL SHOOTING around Santarem is limited to smaller game: wild turkeys, ducks, and crocodile (which is fried and eaten as an hors d'oeuvre).

The fishing in the area brings such incredible specimens that a sportsman will have a hard time persuading the folks back home that he's not lying about his catch. There are catfish in the rivers that weigh up to 300 pounds, and take all day to land. The smaller ones are as succulent as snapper, and the Brazilians smother them with onions, tomatoes, and herbs for a delicate entree.

Portuguese, of course, is the first language of Brazil, but the hotel personnel is conversant in English as are many of the townspeople.

Some Sights To See In Old San Antonio

As the premier shrine of Texas independence, the Alamo is the number one tourist attraction in San Antonio. Almost as popular is the Spanish Governor's Palace, a faithfully restored building which once housed Mexican officials when they ruled the region. It was finished in 1749 and has been labeled the most beautiful building in San Antonio by the National Geographic Society.

IRONICALLY, the Kunstmuseum is best known for the 20th-century art displayed in its third-floor galleries. During the 1930's it became a refuge for works condemned as "decadent" by Germany's Third Reich.

Today the museum can boast of owning Europe's most impressive collection of modern art.

Discerning visitors will naturally be drawn to Basel's old quarter. Many of the shops and houses along these narrow, winding streets and alleys date back to the 1400's. The best of the restored medieval architecture can be seen on a foot tour along the Nadelberg, a street above the busy Marktplatz.

History buffs will also want to view the last remains of the ancient city walls near the St. Alban's Gate. Two other gates, St. Johann's and the famous Spalentor, give tourists some concept of the city's defenses in the Dark Ages.

FOR THOSE intent on wowing the folks back home a trip to the Three Countries Corner is advised. This point lies in the Rhine harbor and is reached by way of Fasel's Kleinhuningen section. A pylon monument marks the Swiss, French, and German frontier juncture. You obviously can't straddle it, but a "round trip" through all three countries can be run in about five seconds.

Animal lovers have a treat in store at Basel Zoo, one of the world's best. Somehow zookeepers here coax many species that seldom breed in captivity to produce offspring. The zoo's pride and joy is its uniquely designed ape house; but the new vivarium, housing fish and reptiles, also merits a lingering visit.

Music and theatre lovers, especially those with a command of German, will find an evening at the Basel Stadttheater well spent. The city's new theater and opera house, a massive modern complex, was to stage its first performance in September. The old Stadttheater will become yet another museum.

Getting around Basel is no problem. The inner city, with its many historic landmarks, is compact enough to be explored conveniently by foot. But shiny green trams and buses provide remarkably good service elsewhere.

Basel is also a natural embarking point for a four-to-five day Rhine trip by luxury liner to the Netherlands. Or a debarking point from cruises originating in Rotterdam.

For A Different Vacation—Green Hell

By ROBERT BROWN

It used to be called the Green Hell, that portion of the Brazilian Amazon basin where the jungle grows wild and so do the Indians.

Impenetrable, full of mystery, an area where explorers tended to disappear and legends arose of strange animals and even stranger tribes.

The increasing popularity of Manaus, a major port midway up the fabled river from Belem, began the tourism trend to the Green Hell. And now Santarem, this second-largest of the jungle cities in the river basin is sprouting resort characteristics.

THE RECENTLY-opened Tropical Santarem Hotel, a subsidiary of the nation's airline, Varig, has already made the name a stylish addition to the "my trip was more exotic than yours" game. It is actually situated on the Tapajos River, one of the great tributaries of the Amazon, and the river has the same characteristics as the Rio Negro in that it is totally clear — but deep green from vegetation and bark.

To witness the meeting of the dark, awesome Amazon and the green waters of the Tapajos River is an unforgettable experience — an experience that has been virtually built into the Tropical Hotel Santarem. All 120 guest rooms are laid out in a semi-circular design as if to encompass the view they share. Each has air conditioning, radio, television and individual refrigerator. Tropical gardens open up still other vistas of exotic plants and flowers. Bathers can enjoy any of the hotel's several swimming pools.

In the city of Santarem — the hotel's guests are offered varied sightseeing attractions: colorful religious feast days, unusual handicrafts, and shopping for articles of wood from the neighboring forests of the Amazon.

(Varig's Tropical Hotel Co. has hotels also in Manaus, Sao Paulo, Bahia, Iguazu, Joao Pessoa, and Natal as part of a strong program to lure the tourist out into the vast country.)

WHITE SAND beaches make river swimming a refreshing delight — and the notorious pirahna, which can strip man or beast of flesh in seconds, hasn't found this tributary yet.

This city of 200,000, perched mid-way between Manaus and Belem, and booming partly because it is the crux of a new highway from Belem to Brazilia, is a timber and mining center. But for the vacationer there are safaris, fishing and local hunting.

The great safari trophy is, of course, the jaguar — and in Brazil it is not an endangered species, for the big cat is a marauder and frequently plunders the isolated farms and Indian villages. The jaguar is hunted along the river banks in the uninhabited areas and is almost never found where there is any degree of civilization.

LOCAL SHOOTING around Santarem is limited to smaller game: wild turkeys, ducks, and crocodile (which is fried and eaten as an hors d'oeuvre).

The fishing in the area brings such incredible specimens that a sportsman will have a hard time persuading the folks back home that he's not lying about his catch. There are catfish in the rivers that weigh up to 300 pounds, and take all day to land. The smaller ones are as succulent as snapper, and the Brazilians smother them with onions, tomatoes, and herbs for a delicate entree.

Portuguese, of course, is the first language of Brazil, but the hotel personnel is conversant in English as are many of the townspeople.

Some Sights To See In Old San Antonio

As the premier shrine of Texas independence, the Alamo is the number one tourist attraction in San Antonio. Almost as popular is the Spanish Governor's Palace, a faithfully restored building which once housed Mexican officials when they ruled the region. It was finished in 1749 and has been labeled the most beautiful building in San Antonio by the National Geographic Society.

Most Home Gardeners Are Too Soft-Hearted When It's Pruning Time

By FRANK J. TAYLOR

"That's not pruning you're doing. It's mayhem." protested one of my gardening pals, as he watched me one day in late Fall whacking the branches off our fuchsia plants, leaving only bare leafless trunks.

"It's not mayhem," I countered. "It's surgery. Fuchsias thrive on it. I've been doing this every year."

Most home gardeners are too soft-hearted. They can't steel their hearts for a complete job on fuchsias, roses, hydrangeas or a lot of other plants that need heartless pruning come winter.

OUR FUCHSIAS are an example. We have a dozen of them growing in planters that can be shifted around easily. They've been boxed for more than five years and are undoubtedly rootbound. I compensate for that with frequent feedings of 8-8-8. We also have two dozen fuchsias growing by the fence and the house, rooted in the open soil.

Late in November I lop them all back to their trunks, which are a yard high and fastened to stout stakes. Some of the trunks are two inches in diameter. Everybody who inspects these barren trunks is sure we'll have no fuchsias next summer. Everybody but me, that is.

Every Spring, tiny pink buds burst out of the bark. In a month they are lush shoots, some a foot long. Another two months and they are cascades of blossoms, for the rest of the summer. Before I can snip them off at the tips, the little pink buds have grown into branches a yard or more in length. The planter box fuchsias make new growth as luxuriantly as those rooted in the ground. The summer-long fuchsia display is our best flower show, thanks to my heartless pruning.

THIS ROUGH treatment works wonders on other shrubs, too. I cut off hydrangeas about eight inches above the ground. They like it. The new shoots, each bearing a huge cluster of flowers, put on three feet of stout growth in the Spring.

Same with the rose bushes. A hard-hearted job cuts them back to eight-inch stubs. "You've killed them," wails the Chairman of the Rose Committee. But she changes her tune when the stout new shoots are one yard tall and loaded with rose buds by early summer.

My zeal carries over to the soft stalk plants. As soon as the dwarf dahlias finish their first crop of blossoms, I clip the stalks back to four or five inches. They put out new branches and we have another dahlia show in August. Pruning is a must with our 'mums. They grow six feet tall before the blossoms burst, if I don't cut them back at least twice during the summer, and the heavy load of bloom bends them to the ground.

I don't say every plant thrives on heartless surgery but it pays off big with at least half of the flowers in our garden. That's why my motto is, "Treat 'em rough."

Dried Flowers Bring Color Into The Home

By EARL ARONSON

Dried flowers will add a touch of spring to your home this winter but only if you prepare now. The garden, the woods and fields have much to offer for the collecting.

You don't have to do much to get many varieties of blooms ready for the dried bouquet. Just hang them upside down in a dry, warm, dark place such as the attic or a closet you don't use much.

There is a big selection of plants. Strawflowers, celosia (cockscomb) statice, or the wild milkweed pods, goldenrod, Queen Anne's lace, sumac, curly dock, yarrow and many wild grasses. Globe amaranth and money plant are others that will give color and pleasure.

SEEDLINGS you bought early in spring and which developed abundant foliage and flower heads are fine to prune for dried flower material.

If you started your own plants from seed they may not have been developed long enough to have more than one set of flower heads before the threat of frost.

Strawflower, available in tall (12 inches) or dwarf sizes, producing many bright blooms. Pick forming buds before the flower opens.

CELOSIA, plume and crested. The tall plume celosia grows to 24 inches and the dwarf 10-12 inches. Pick prime plumes and hang them to dry. The crested types also come in tall and dwarf varieties.

Annual statice is available in peach, yellow, blue, rose and chamois. Pick flowering heads as soon as the center florets open.

In fact, pick all flowers intended for drying just before the centers of flowers unfold, or the bright colors will fade after they dry.

YOU CAN get help in drying your flowers, from sand-and-borax and from silica-gel.

Sand-borax. Mix one part borax and an equal amount of clean sand, cornmeal or vermiculite. The heavier sand is more apt to crush flowers during drying. Place the flowers in the mixture carefully and put the open container in a warm, dry place, generally for about two weeks.

Silica-gel. You can buy this in most garden centers or hobby shops. It absorbs moisture from flowers rapidly, thus preserving flower color better. It will dry many flowers in 36 to 48 hours.

You have to use silica-gel in an airtight container or it will absorb moisture from the air and flowers won't dry well. You can dry the product in a warm oven and re-use.

AMONG flowers that dry well in either material are marigold, zinnia, aster, rose, dahlia, chrysanthemum, carnation, larkspur, delphinium and snapdragon.

Many flower dryers remove the stems first. Before drying, florist wire may be used to fashion stems 4-6 inches long. Make a small hook on one end of the wire. Pull the straight end in the top of the flower until the hook catches in the flower and is hidden among the petals.

This is important in using the drying medium: Put the flower in the container on sufficient material so that the back row of petals is resting firmly.

Sift drying material around and among the petals so they are held in a natural position and the flower is completely covered. If you permit petals to flatten or fold they will dry that way.

"Lesser Bulbs" A Promise Of Spring

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

Autumn bulb planting may be considered incomplete unless it includes some of the "lesser bulbs" — those little charmers with their promise that spring is just around the corner and that the big show will be following later.

You may have to secure them through the mail-order nursery catalogs. Local garden centers sometimes have only the regulars like daffodils, tulips, and hyacinths. If so, order them soon. It is later than you think!

You can, however, get snowdrops everywhere. These earliest of spring-flowering bulbs are everybody's favorite. Grow them under shrubs or trees, in the rock garden or near an outside door.

LOVELY WHITE nodding blossoms on stems three to four inches tall, they come both single and double. Elweisli is a newer variety, large flowered, from Anatolia in Asia Minor.

Eranthis, or Winter Aconite, is another early bird. Clear yellow flowers like buttercups, with green-frilled collars, come into bloom before the crocuses.

If you go in for crocuses —and who doesn't —get top bulbs of the colorful Dutch crocus. A mixture will give you gorgeous shades of yellow, gold, white, blues, purples, striped and with contrasting or deeper stigmata in the cups. And do you know about the crocus species and crocus hybrids?

The species bloom much earlier, often before the snow is off the ground. They are also known as bunch-flowering and snow crocus (more than one bloom to a bulb).

Wide-open flowers with golden centers, in lovely pastel colors. They will multiply as do the Dutch, and bloom year after year if you don't cut the leaves until they have faded.

TRY THIS year some of the Spring Snowflakes for a different early surprise. One so seldom sees them. Laucojum vernum, they bloom in early April and are excellent for edging paths in semi-shaded areas and for naturalizing.

Glossy white flowers with green-tipped petals, they nod above clumps of shiny green foliage. There is a later variety that blooms April through May (L. aestivum).

You won't want to miss the miniature daffodils or narcissus. There are several. The Cyclamineus, or February Gold, very early, is an all-yellow with dainty trumpets and recurved perianths. Bulbocodium citrinus looks even more like a tiny cyclamen. It is sulfur yellow.

THESE AND several others among the miniatures are good in the rock garden or in a surprise corner by a rock.

If you don't know Fritillaria meleagris, the Checkered Lily or Mission Bells, do get acquainted with it. It flowers in April, with pendant bell-shaped crinkly blooms of various colors, chiefly bronze, purples, and white, all checkered, striped, or splashed with contrasting colors. Unbelievable! About six inches tall. So quaint and old-fashioned looking.

You probably have long enjoyed the wonderful blues of the Scilla siberica or Squill. A carpet of them under a tree, especially a white birch, is something to dream about. The S. campanulata or Wood Hyacinth, also lovely, blue, white, and pink, comes later, with the Darwin tulips.

Most of the so-called lesser bulbs are planted two and three inches deep and about the same distance apart. There are several more worth considering, and all are enchanting.

You will find them in your fall bulb catalogs and some of them in your local garden centers.

Marinite On Natural Gardens

Jack Kramer, Marin's very prolific gardening writer, has based his newest book upon a currently very popular topic, "Natural Gardens: Gardening with Native Plants."

Part of Charles Scribner's Garden Library series to which Kramer has been the principal contributor, the book is priced at $3.95 softcover, $6.95 hardcover.

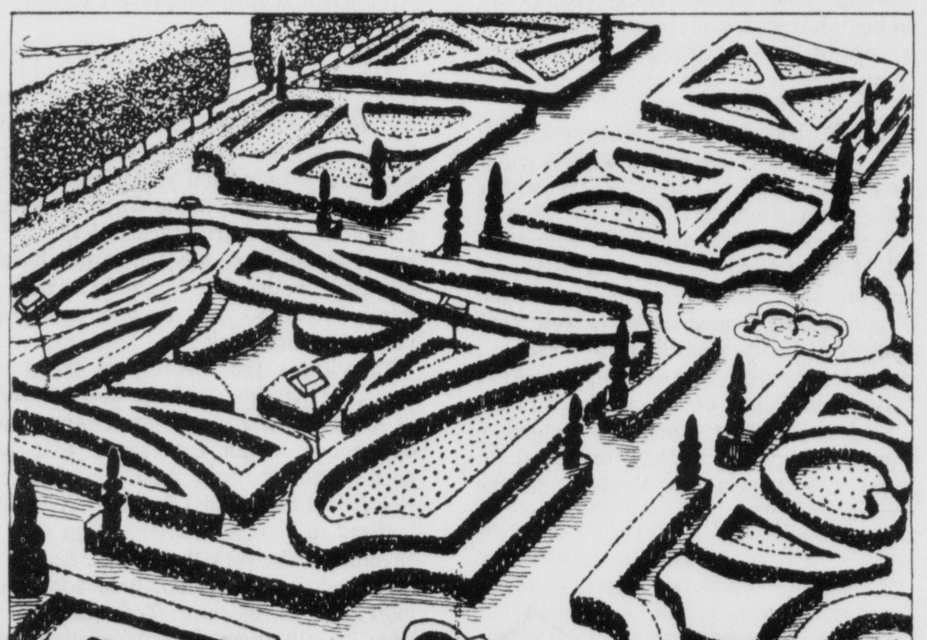
"A respect for our native plants years ago might have thwarted the dismal path we followed in the last two decades and might have prevented today's sorry ecological state," the author says.

Still, he finds hope in the belated but still welcome awakening of conservationists, gardeners and the public generally to the need to preserve and employ our native plants.

KRAMER covers the planning of natural gardens, the acquisition of the plantings, their cultivation and their maintenance. There are special chapters on wildflowers, trees, shrubs, vines, groundcovers, ferns, orchids and terrariums. There are listings of native plant sactuaries, sources of such plants, books on the subject and conservation groups.

"Too long we have depended on improved varieties of foreign plants and abandoned our American wild plants," Kramer asserts, hoping his new book will help to restore a balance and bring new recognition to the flowering dogwood, the foreget-me-not, the spring witchhazel, the yarrow, the black-eyed Susan, the hollyhocks and their beautiful like.

The book is profusely illustrated, and neatly and efficiently designed. D.K.



IN ELIZABETHAN ENGLAND, the maze was a feature in formal gardens on large estates, and in some countries during that era there was a great interest in shaping plant materials into interesting forms.

A GARDENER'S CHECKLIST

Here is the Marin gardener's check list for the coming week:

- ✓ Plant Freesias, Sparaxis, Ixias, and Dutch Iris without delay. This foursome likes to go into the ground as early as possible.
- ✓ Early-flowering Azaleas and Camellias are coming into bloom now. Shop for them while you can see the colors and flower forms.
- ✓ Plant lawns soon so they will become established before cold weather.
- ✓ Many spring and summer perennials are available in nursery flats this month. Fall is an excellent time to plant.
- ✓ Annuals should be planted immediately to assure you of color in the winter garden.
- ✓Now is the time to visit the nursery for flower bulbs. Don't wait until stocks have been picked over and the better ones taken.

CROCUSES BRIGHTEN YARDS

Home-Grown Herbs Have Fresh Aromas To Savor

Freshness is written all over home-grown herbs. All one has to do is crush some thyme and breathe in its fragrance, or savor the aroma of just-picked parsley to get the idea.

There is just no comparing the aromas given off by dried thyme or store-bought parsley with those that come right out of the garden and into the cook pot.

Herb gardens are an in thing today, and whether you favor the natural goodness of home garden varieties, or enjoy cooking with herbs, the amount of space required is minimal, advises the California Association of Nurserymen.

NURSERIES offer a wide selection of popular herbs. You can grow them in pots, or obtain racks that hold several containers, to hang on a wall near the patio or barbecue area.

It's possible to grow a variety of herbs in a redwood planter or window box. Growing the plants in containers is a happy solution for those gardening on apartment balconies, or for mobile home residents.

Feature herbs in sunny garden spots, or a corner of a flower bed. You needn't worry about them detracting from a planting of ornamentals. Most are as nice to look at as they are to eat.

Many gardeners use parsley as a border around a bed of flowering annuals. It serves as a unique and attractive edging for a brick walkway, too. In a garden setting, it looks as fresh as it tastes.

MINT IS a veteran of plantings in California gardens, especially by a water faucet where its breath can be savored whenever the gardener turns on the hose.

Personal preference will dictate which herbs are grown in the garden. Reliable standbys include thyme, marjoram, rosemary, sage, savory and basil. These are readily available in pots at your local nursery in the fall months, which is an excellent time to plant. You need only to transplant them into larger or decorative containers, or into the garden, to start enjoying the treat of fresh herbs in your cooking.

Plant Winter Vegetables Now For Early Harvest

Anticipating a typical mild winter, Californians can plant cool season vegetables now and reap an early harvest. Gardeners in the Golden State who plant right away can count on a bountiful harvest in a season when many an easterner can only dream of it.

This information comes from the California Association of Nurserymen which stresses that it is important to plant the right crop. Many a newcomer has sown tomato seed in October and wondered what happened. It's a hard way to find out that tomatoes are a warm season crop — as are such others as beans and certain squash.

IN WINTER, the vegetables to plant are those that bear edible roots or top growth. Of the so-called fruiting vegetables, only peas should be planted now.

The likes of carrots, radishes, beats, and turnips are cool season crops. So are spinach, chard and lettuce. All can be grown from seed, though many nurseries will have lettuce available as transplants in flats. You may also find in nursery flats such cool season favorites as cabbage, broccoli and cauliflower.

Always insure the best return from your vegetable garden. Much of the fun and excitement — and economic aspects — depend upon the quality of the product. Turn the soil deeply and work-in liberal amounts of organic material before planting.

WINTER RAINS can't be turned off and on like a sprinkler, so prepare for possible heavy rainfall by insuring good drainage. Organic material incorporated in the soil helps, but where drainage leaves something to be desired, plant in beds that are raised slightly by a framework of board or bricks.

Elizabethan Gardening

By MARY LYNNE OLSON

In England's medieval days, warfare rather than gardening was a pre-occupation. It was in the monasteries that the art of gardening was preserved. Monks grew herbs to cure the sick, flowers to decorate the churches, and food for the table.

Later, the mistress of the house had charge of the castle and the master of the domain went jousting, hunting, or joined the Crusades. Herbs and flowers were fixtures of the garden.

Organization of the garden in those early days was lacking and rather haphazard. It was not until the relative quiet of the Tudor era, the days of the reign of King Henvy VIII, that there was a chance to develop a more artistic garden.

THE STYLE then followed the formalized techniques of the French as observed by travelers visiting on the Continent.

Henry loved his garden and even imported a French gardener to improve upon it and care for it.

Much of England was a garden in Elizabethan days. Every cottage had its flower patch. Shakespeare certainly loved his garden and made frequent reference to plants and flowers in his writings. Queen Elizabeth's favorite residence, Nonesuch, had a beautifully patterned formal garden in the French formal style.

THE MAZE was a feature of the more formal gardens of the large estates, planted in lavender, marjoram, privet or thyme. Topiary — a Roman art where shrubs are trained and pruned into animal or geometric shapes — enjoyed a heyday in Elizabethan England. Novelties in garden flowers in those days were nasturtiums from the New World, fuchsias from India and tulips from Constantinople. (Turkey actually cultivated the tulip long before it was known in Holland).

'Just Add Water'

Featured in the new fall W. Atlee Burpee Co. catalog: a giant hybrid amaryllis, pre-planted and ready to grow. "Just add water and watch the stalks burst into bloom in four to six weeks," claims the nursery.

Autumn bulb planting may be considered incomplete unless it includes some of the "lesser bulbs" — those little charmers with their promise that spring is just around the corner and that the big show will be following later.

You may have to secure them through the mail-order nursery catalogs. Local garden centers sometimes have only the regulars like daffodils, tulips, and hyacinths. If so, order them soon. It is later than you think!

You can, however, get snowdrops everywhere. These earliest of spring-flowering bulbs are everybody's favorite. Grow them under shrubs or trees, in the rock garden or near an outside door.

LOVELY WHITE nodding blossoms on stems three to four inches tall, they come both single and double. Elweisli is a newer variety, large flowered, from Anatolia in Asia Minor.

Eranthis, or Winter Aconite, is another early bird. Clear yellow flowers like buttercups, with green-frilled collars, come into bloom before the crocuses.

If you go in for crocuses —and who doesn't —get top bulbs of the colorful Dutch crocus. A mixture will give you gorgeous shades of yellow, gold, white, blues, purples, striped and with contrasting or deeper stigmata in the cups. And do you know about the crocus species and crocus hybrids?

The species bloom much earlier, often before the snow is off the ground. They are also known as bunch-flowering and snow crocus (more than one bloom to a bulb).

Wide-open flowers with golden centers, in lovely pastel colors. They will multiply as do the Dutch, and bloom year after year if you don't cut the leaves until they have faded.

TRY THIS year some of the Spring Snowflakes for a different early surprise. One so seldom sees them. Laucojum vernum, they bloom in early April and are excellent for edging paths in semi-shaded areas and for naturalizing.

Glossy white flowers with green-tipped petals, they nod above clumps of shiny green foliage. There is a later variety that blooms April through May (L. aestivum).

You won't want to miss the miniature daffodils or narcissus. There are several. The Cyclamineus, or February Gold, very early, is an all-yellow with dainty trumpets and recurved perianths. Bulbocodium citrinus looks even more like a tiny cyclamen. It is sulfur yellow.

THESE AND several others among the miniatures are good in the rock garden or in a surprise corner by a rock.

If you don't know Fritillaria meleagris, the Checkered Lily or Mission Bells, do get acquainted with it. It flowers in April, with pendant bell-shaped crinkly blooms of various colors, chiefly bronze, purples, and white, all checkered, striped, or splashed with contrasting colors. Unbelievable! About six inches tall. So quaint and old-fashioned looking.

You probably have long enjoyed the wonderful blues of the Scilla siberica or Squill. A carpet of them under a tree, especially a white birch, is something to dream about. The S. campanulata or Wood Hyacinth, also lovely, blue, white, and pink, comes later, with the Darwin tulips.

Most of the so-called lesser bulbs are planted two and three inches deep and about the same distance apart. There are several more worth considering, and all are enchanting.

You will find them in your fall bulb catalogs and some of them in your local garden centers.

Marinite On Natural Gardens

Jack Kramer, Marin's very prolific gardening writer, has based his newest book upon a currently very popular topic, "Natural Gardens: Gardening with Native Plants."

Part of Charles Scribner's Garden Library series to which Kramer has been the principal contributor, the book is priced at $3.95 softcover, $6.95 hardcover.

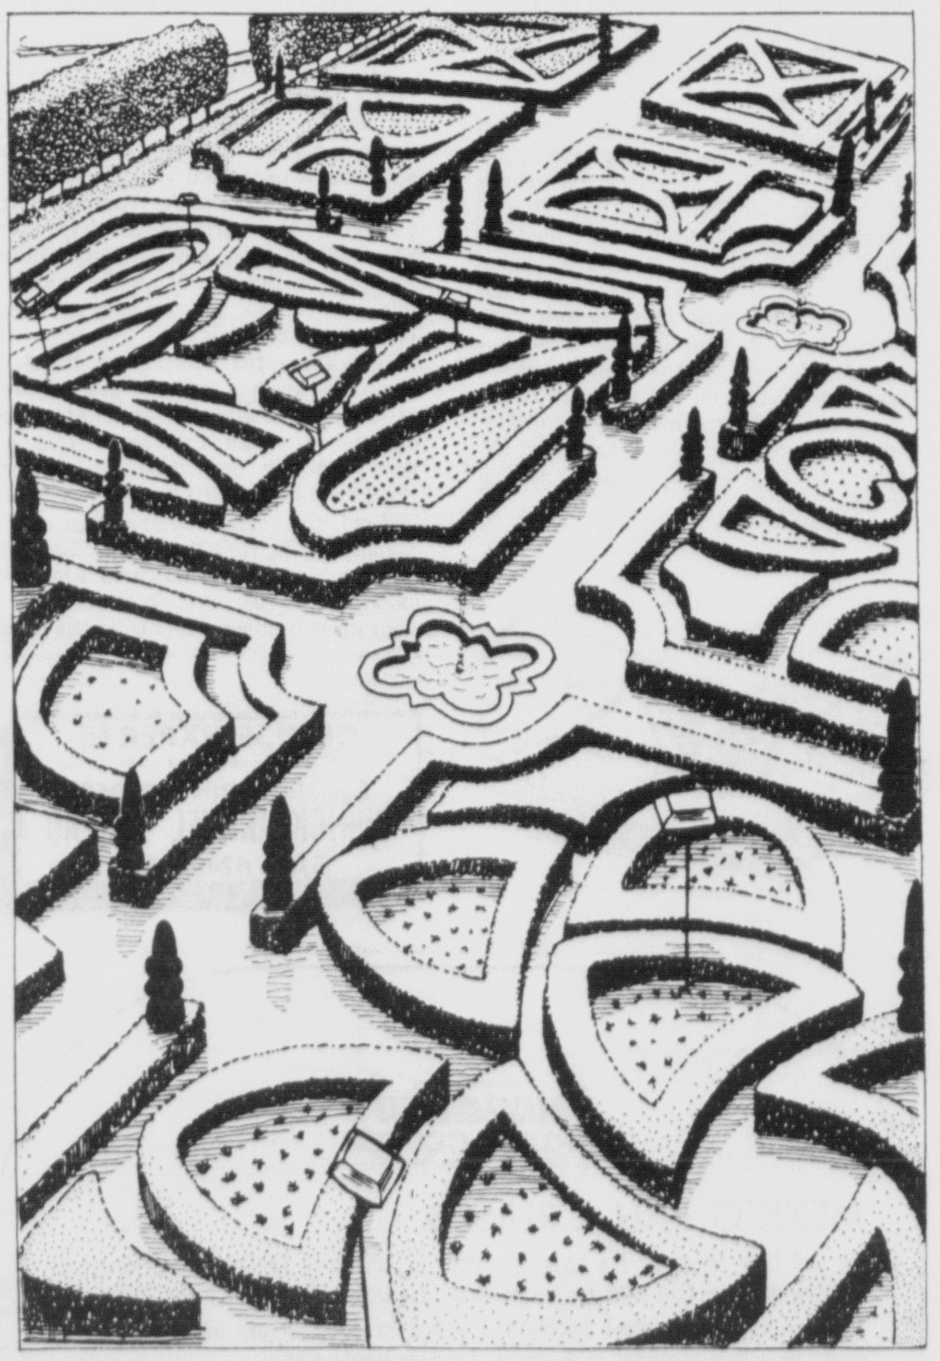
"A respect for our native plants years ago might have thwarted the dismal path we followed in the last two decades and might have prevented today's sorry ecological state," the author says.

Still, he finds hope in the belated but still welcome awakening of conservationists, gardeners and the public generally to the need to preserve and employ our native plants.

KRAMER covers the planning of natural gardens, the acquisition of the plantings, their cultivation and their maintenance. There are special chapters on wildflowers, trees, shrubs, vines, groundcovers, ferns, orchids and terrariums. There are listings of native plant sactuaries, sources of such plants, books on the subject and conservation groups.

"Too long we have depended on improved varieties of foreign plants and abandoned our American wild plants," Kramer asserts, hoping his new book will help to restore a balance and bring new recognition to the flowering dogwood, the foreget-me-not, the spring witchhazel, the yarrow, the black-eyed Susan, the hollyhocks and their beautiful like.

The book is profusely illustrated, and neatly and efficiently designed. D.K.



IN ELIZABETHAN ENGLAND, the maze was a feature in formal gardens on large estates, and in some countries during that era there was a great interest in shaping plant materials into interesting forms.

A GARDENER'S CHECKLIST

✓ Plant Freesias, Sparaxis, Ixias, and Dutch Iris without delay. This foursome likes to go into the ground as early as possible.

✓ Early-flowering Azaleas and Camellias are coming into bloom now. Shop for them while you can see the colors and flower forms.

✓ Plant lawns soon so they will become established before cold weather.

✓ Many spring and summer perennials are available in nursery flats this month. Fall is an excellent time to plant.

✓ Annuals should be planted immediately to assure you of color in the winter garden.

✓ Now is the time to visit the nursery for flower bulbs. Don't wait until stocks have been picked over and the better ones taken.

Home-Grown Herbs Have Fresh Aromas To Savor

Freshness is written all over home-grown herbs. All one has to do is crush some thyme and breathe in its fragrance, or savor the aroma of just-picked parsley to get the idea.

There is just no comparing the aromas given off by dried thyme or store-bought parsley with those that come right out of the garden and into the cook pot.

Herb gardens are an in thing today, and whether you favor the natural goodness of home garden varieties, or enjoy cooking with herbs, the amount of space required is minimal, advises the California Association of Nurserymen.

NURSERIES offer a wide selection of popular herbs. You can grow them in pots, or obtain racks that hold several containers, to hang on a wall near the patio or barbecue area.

It's possible to grow a variety of herbs in a redwood planter or window box. Growing the plants in containers is a happy solution for those gardening on apartment balconies, or for mobile home residents.

Feature herbs in sunny garden spots, or a corner of a flower bed. You needn't worry about them detracting from a planting of ornamentals. Most are as nice to look at as they are to eat.

Many gardeners use parsley as a border around a bed of flowering annuals. It serves as a unique and attractive edging for a brick walkway, too. In a garden setting, it looks as fresh as it tastes.

MINT IS a veteran of plantings in California gardens, especially by a water faucet where its breath can be savored whenever the gardener turns on the hose.

Personal preference will dictate which herbs are grown in the garden. Reliable standbys include thyme, marjoram, rosemary, sage, savory and basil. These are readily available in pots at your local nursery in the fall months, which is an excellent time to plant. You need only to transplant them into larger or decorative containers, or into the garden, to start enjoying the treat of fresh herbs in your cooking.

Plant Winter Vegetables Now For Early Harvest

Anticipating a typical mild winter, Californians can plant cool season vegetables now and reap an early harvest. Gardeners in the Golden State who plant right away can count on a bountiful harvest in a season when many an easterner can only dream of it.

This information comes from the California Association of Nurserymen which stresses that it is important to plant the right crop. Many a newcomer has sown tomato seed in October and wondered what happened. It's a hard way to find out that tomatoes are a warm season crop — as are such others as beans and certain squash.

IN WINTER, the vegetables to plant are those that bear edible roots or top growth. Of the so-called fruiting vegetables, only peas should be planted now.

The likes of carrots, radishes, beats, and turnips are cool season crops. So are spinach, chard and lettuce. All can be grown from seed, though many nurseries will have lettuce available as transplants in flats. You may also find in nursery flats such cool season favorites as cabbage, broccoli and cauliflower.

Always insure the best return from your vegetable garden. Much of the fun and excitement — and economic aspects — depend upon the quality of the product. Turn the soil deeply and work-in liberal amounts of organic material before planting.

WINTER RAINS can't be turned off and on like a sprinkler, so prepare for possible heavy rainfall by insuring good drainage. Organic material incorporated in the soil helps, but where drainage leaves something to be desired, plant in beds that are raised slightly by a framework of board or bricks.

Elizabethan Gardening

By MARY LYNNE OLSON

In England's medieval days, warfare rather than gardening was a pre-occupation. It was in the monasteries that the art of gardening was preserved. Monks grew herbs to cure the sick, flowers to decorate the churches, and food for the table.

Later, the mistress of the house had charge of the castle and the master of the domain went jousting, hunting, or joined the Crusades. Herbs and flowers were fixtures of the garden.

Organization of the garden in those early days was lacking and rather haphazard. It was not until the relative quiet of the Tudor era, the days of the reign of King Henvy VIII, that there was a chance to develop a more artistic garden.

THE STYLE then followed the formalized techniques of the French as observed by travelers visiting on the Continent.

Henry loved his garden and even imported a French gardener to improve upon it and care for it.

Much of England was a garden in Elizabethan days. Every cottage had its flower patch. Shakespeare certainly loved his garden and made frequent reference to plants and flowers in his writings. Queen Elizabeth's favorite residence, Nonesuch, had a beautifully patterned formal garden in the French formal style.

THE MAZE was a feature of the more formal gardens of the large estates, planted in lavender, marjoram, privet or thyme. Topiary — a Roman art where shrubs are trained and pruned into animal or geometric shapes — enjoyed a heyday in Elizabethan England. Novelties in garden flowers in those days were nasturtiums from the New World, fuchsias from India and tulips from Constantinople. (Turkey actually cultivated the tulip long before it was known in Holland).

'Just Add Water'

Featured in the new fall W. Atlee Burpee Co. catalog: a giant hybrid amaryllis, pre-planted and ready to grow. "Just add water and watch the stalks burst into bloom in four to six weeks," claims the nursery.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: Wood Hues

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

The adjectives we usually associate with wood are (ital) warm, glowing, gleaming, burnished, heavy, traditional (unital). Good words. But what about a few others that make good sense in interior living (ital) bright, light, reflective, decorative (unital)?

Hardwood surfaces don't have to be finished in dark tones. But it's hard to convince some homeowners who think that wood has to be dark to be rich looking. Don't you have friends (maybe your wife or husband) who refuse to paint those precious hardwood floors lighthearted or natural colors? Perhaps you should buy a piece of unfinished walnut or ash or teak — just to prove the point of the pleasing and naturally pale look of freshly cut wood.

SOMEWHERE along the line, man began manipulating wood and inventing stains and sealers that have changed the surface color. That darkened look sometimes increased with age. So now we're stuck with the idea that dark, old wood is better than clean new wood.

When Michael deSantis, NSID, tackled the dining room assignment shown here, he had to convert the clients to this new-old concept of wood as a base material.

Then he proceeded to lighten all surfaces — with one exception. That exception is the dining table, finished in highly reflective lacquer with a band of bright color.

Since the room lacked pattern, he decided to cover one wall and the carpenter-made window cornice in a shiny foil paper printed with a treillage design. But he used paint on all other fine, hardwood surfaces including the credenza, folding screen doors and floor.

MANY PROFESSIONAL designers are rubbing and sanding their floors down to a really natural exture, then sealing them with a clear coat of finish. One manufacturer, E. L. Bruce, actually produces a line of wood floor tiles in House & Garden colors — blues, greens, yellows, reds. And after years of importing and staining teak wood for their furniture, the Danes have discovered that their natural resource of beech trees provides a delightful light-looking wood for furniture and accessories.

So open you mind to wood as a basic structural ingredient for house anf furnishings. But stop thinking of it as something that can't be tampered with or embellished upon.

Overloading Top Cause Of Blown Fuses At Home

By ANDY LANG

There are two basic reasons why a fuse blows. Either the circuit protected by the fuse has been overloaded or there has been a short circuit somewhere in the line.

Overloading is the most common cause. This occurs when too much electricity is being used on a single circuit. Since appliances that heat up — such as a toaster, an electric iron or a broiler — draw the most electricity, the most likely cause is the use of one of those appliances on a circuit which already is carrying a considerable amount of current.

Or it may be that two or three of the "hot" appliances are being used at the same time on the same circuit.

IF YOU are reasonable certain that the circuit has not been overloaded and that a short circuit has occurred, disconnect everything on that line. Now replace the burned-out fuse.

If it blows immediately, then there is a short in the wiring and you will need the services of an electrician. If it does not blow, the chances are that the short circuit is in one of the appliances or other items that you disconnected.

Never forget that the fuse, is your protection against fire. Whe it blows, it is telling you that something is wrong. Without the fuse, the wires would become hot and cause a conflagration.

IT STANDS to reason therefore, that a person who uses a penny or anything else as a temporary or permanent substitute for a fuse is taking away the vital protection a fuse affords and is asking for trouble.

That is why it is so important to replace a fuse with one of the same size. If you remove a blown-out 15-amper fuse, replace it with a 15-ampere fuse. Replace it with a higher fuse, such as a 30, and the wires can get hit without affecting the fuse.

SOME HOUSES have so-called cartridge fuses or circuit breakers instead of the common screw-in type fuse. The cartridge fuse — it's a different shape and is generally used in circuits which handle large appliances —must be replaced with it blows.

With a circuit breaker, you merely reset a switch to restore the current to the line. In both of these cases, though, the principles explained above are the same as with an ordinary fuse.

With either the regular fuse or the cartridge fuse, it is important to keep a few spares on hand for an emergency. A fuse has a peculiar habit of blowing at a time when hardware stores are closed.

Q. — I have just bought a house and intend to start a home workshop. As I have read many times that a portable electric drill is a necessity for work around the house, I have been shopping for one, but I am puzzled by the different sizes — one-quarter inch, three-eighth inch, one-half inch and three-quarter inch. I have my eye on a three-eighth inch drill, but so often when I buy something I find later that I should have bought a larger size. Would I be better off buying a three-quarter inch drill to start with?

A. — No. Not unless you intend to use the drill professionally, which is why such drills are manufactured. Even a one-half inch drill is not the most popular of home models, since it is meant mainly for heavy duty use seldom required in work around the house. Also, it is rather heavy when used steadily. Select the three-eighth inch drill you like. It's a good choice.

Q. — A few weeks ago you advised someone about how to find the studs inside a wall by banging on the wall with the side of the fist. I have tried it many times since then without result. I know that a hollow sound means there is no stud at that point and that a solid sound means there is a stud there. Something must be wrong with me because I seem to hear the same sound no matter where I bang my fist. Isn't there some other way to locate studs?

A. — There's nothing wrong with you. Some persons seem to get the hang of locating studs this way very quickly. Other never do. You propably noticed that I said the fist method was only one of several used to find studs inside a wall. Try this one. Since most studs are spaced 16 inches apart on center — that is, 16 inches from the center of one to the center of the next — measure approximately 16¾ inches inward from one end of the wall. Directly below that point, a couple of inches above the baseboard, drill a hole. You'll know instantly whether the bit has gone through the plaster or gypsum board into a stud or has merely ended in space. If the latter, try again an inch or so away. When you have located a stud, the hole or holes in the wall can be filled with patching plaster so as to be unnoticed.

The Wives Now Wearing Workpants To Protect Shrinking Family Budgets

By VIVIAN BROWN

Goodbye expensive handyman, hello expensive handywoman.

Women are pictured climbing ladders, mowing lawns, weeding gardens, and what-all in lumber yard catalogues, lawnmower brochures and store advertisements.

Good reason. Many have become do-it-yourselfers to protect their shrinking piggy banks. But will they succeed?

SHE DEMANDS this new right, she gets it, may be the answer of an unsympathetic husband as he turns over in the hammock and snoozes to the zzzz of her power saw.

Women got into the handywoman routine because the short visits and lengthy bills of workmen were taking a big slice of the family dollar.

Now when the needlepoint group meets they may compare soldering irons, ladder range and the high cost of mitre boxes as they bemoan chipped finger nails and scraped knees.

BUT ONE far-sighted husband sees such conversational tidbits as leading to a neighborhood tool and equipment war of extensive proportions rather than a free home work plan. And because of the short term potential of his mate, he fears he may wind up with an expensive cache of unused tools and equipment.

He'll go a step further — a wife who carries a Vuitton tote bag to the supermarket and wears on Yves Saint Laurent pants suit to the lumber yard can't be far from a couture plumbing and carpentry kit, gold plated maybe, American merchandising being what it is. And the Courreges or Givenchy handywoman suits will not be far behind.

IF HE had fixed the faucet, puttied the windows and planed the sticky door, she might not have becomed intrigued with work tools, his wife remarked. Nor would she have found out how easy the jobs are that were costing so much.

Although some women get a lot of conversational mileage out of home projects, one husband insists it is more talk than action. In six months his wife has installed three shelves in the kitchen (for her cookbooks) but she has corralled more tools than the local builder.

But would she borrow her neighbor's casserole to serve her own Kartoffelkosse? Or Terrine of Duck Rouennaise? Huh?

ANOTHER husband fears the changing lifestyles. He thinks fondly of those ironed handkerchiefs and he misses fresn vegetables on his dinner plate. And her labor plan isn't exactly free when you compare the costs against the fait accompli.

For example, after a dizzifying day on her new lightweight aluminum ladder unplugging drains, patching a roof or washing down shingles, who can cook? Eating out is like found money, one wife says. (If only she would dig up enough to pay for her shiny new pitchford, her mate responds).

PERSONAL allowances have tripled, says one husband. It costs more for his wife's beauty parlor treatments, and she has had to acquire a masseuse — to unravel her kinks.

If rewards are in order, a woman who acquires a power saw is in a highly selective bonus category, advises one housewife, even if she uses it only occasionally. It may be parlayed into a cruise, a waterbed or something fashionable — a sterling silver Navajo belt to hold her shiny metal clip-on tape measure — a natural if ever there was one, she says.

Don't Overlook Walls When Redoing Room

Sometimes, homeowners who spend a great deal of time selecting furniture and accessories for a particular decorative period give only a passing thought to the walls. Yet, whether you're "going" French provincial, Early American, Scandinavian or Mediterranean — the look won't be complete without the "right" wall decor.

WALLS PLAY an important role in any room remodeling. They serve as a backdrop for furniture, accent drapery and paintings, and can even visually modify the size of a room by making it appear larger or smaller. Because of their importance, they merit better treatment than an occasional repainting or repapering.

For example, walls can introduce a rich-looking room dimension when paneled with prefinished hardboard. The panels are attractive, sturdy and easy to clean. They can be used to great decorative effectiveness in any room because of the variety of styles available and their low-maintenance qualities.

HARDBOARD panels come in a wide range of woodgrain designs, such as walnut, teak, oak and cherry, that can lend a rustic — or an elegantly formal — look. There are handsome "antique" finishes to set off Colonial and Early American furnishings.

For more contemporary decor, there are tapestry and travertine marble effects, murals, prints, solid colors and patterns that have unusual textured looks: corrugated, basketweave, wicker, and leather.

Because hardboard takes hard use without denting, marring or scuffing, the walls stay new-looking for a long time. An occasional damp wiping will keep them clean and fresh looking.

PANELING with hardboard offers an additional benefit. It's economical ano easily installed by a do-it-yourselfer. The panels go up over studs, furring strips or right on the existing wall. For a professionally finished look, there are special adhesives for nailless application, color-matched nails, and matching moldings and baseboards. Money saved by doing the job yourself can be put toward that "perfect" wing chair or lamp you thought would have to wait 'til next year.

ANOTHER husband fears the changing lifestyles. He thinks fondly of those ironed handkerchiefs and he misses fresn vegetables on his dinner plate. And her labor plan isn't exactly free when you compare the costs against the fait accompli.

For example, after a dizzifying day on her new lightweight aluminum ladder unplugging drains, patching a roof or washing down shingles, who can cook? Eating out is like found money, one wife says. (If only she would dig up enough to pay for her shiny new pitchford, her mate responds).

PERSONAL allowances have tripled, says one husband. It costs more for his wife's beauty parlor treatments, and she has had to acquire a masseuse — to unravel her kinks.

If rewards are in order, a woman who acquires a power saw is in a highly selective bonus category, advises one housewife, even if she uses it only occasionally. It may be parlayed into a cruise, a waterbed or something fashionable — a sterling silver Navajo belt to hold her shiny metal clip-on tape measure — a natural if ever there was one, she says.

Don't Overlook Walls When Redoing Room

Sometimes, homeowners who spend a great deal of time selecting furniture and accessories for a particular decorative period give only a passing thought to the walls. Yet, whether you're "going" French provincial, Early American, Scandinavian or Mediterranean — the look won't be complete without the "right" wall decor.

WALLS PLAY an important role in any room remodeling. They serve as a backdrop for furniture, accent drapery and paintings, and can even visually modify the size of a room by making it appear larger or smaller. Because of their importance, they merit better treatment than an occasional repainting or repapering.

For example, walls can introduce a rich-looking room dimension when paneled with prefinished hardboard. The panels are attractive, sturdy and easy to clean. They can be used to great decorative effectiveness in any room because of the variety of styles available and their low-maintenance qualities.

HARDBOARD panels come in a wide range of woodgrain designs, such as walnut, teak, oak and cherry, that can lend a rustic — or an elegantly formal — look. There are handsome "antique" finishes to set off Colonial and Early American furnishings.

For more contemporary decor, there are tapestry and travertine marble effects, murals, prints, solid colors and patterns that have unusual textured looks: corrugated, basketweave, wicker, and leather.

Because hardboard takes hard use without denting, marring or scuffing, the walls stay new-looking for a long time. An occasional damp wiping will keep them clean and fresh looking.

PANELING with hardboard offers an additional benefit. It's economical and easily installed by a do-it-yourselfer. The panels go up over studs, furring strips or right on the existing wall. For a professionally finished look, there are special adhesives for nailless application, color-matched nails, and matching moldings and baseboards. Money saved by doing the job yourself can be put toward that "perfect" wing chair or lamp you thought would have to wait 'til next year.

Billy Taylor—Pianist, Writer, Lecturer Would Like To Be Starting Now

By DAVID STERRITT

"There are lots of things I'd like to ask you about," I told jazzman Billy Taylor. "But before we start, I've got to know the answer to my own burning question: Where do you find the energy to do all these things?"

Musician-author-actor-etc. Taylor glanced over at the list his public-relations man had sent me — a long, long list of jazz-world projects, accomplishments, and honors. He smiled, settled back in his chair, reflected for an instant. Then he began to talk — not about himself, but about his wife.

He told me how lucky he was to have married her 26 years ago; gave her credit for raising their children; praised her as the first person he always turned to for an honest opinion; and cited her support during the most hectic periods in his career.

BY THE TIME his tribute ended, I had decided I was talking with a very nice guy — a man of constant activity who remains deeply in touch with the basic human values of his life.

Yet no amount of family support could wholly account for Taylor's remarkable string of achievements on the jazz scene. If you watch television, you probably remember him as the three-year musical director of "The David Frost Show."

If you collect records, you might have come across some of his nearly 30 albums. For music-book buffs, Taylor has written 12 volumes. Magazine readers may recall his articles in periodicals ranging from Esquire to the Saturday Review.

NOT TO mention his own TV and radio shows, his many media guest appearances, his engagements at prestigious jazz spots. Then there's the academic Taylor, active lecturer, teacher, and recipient of two honorary doctorates. The businessman Taylor, part owner of two radio stations and head of his own production outfit for commercials, records, and concerts. The thespian Taylor, who has acted on TV and in the Broadway hit "The Time of Your Life."

And, importantly, the public-servant Taylor — who has found time amid these activities for a host of socially oriented projects. Most recently, he was appointed for a six-year term to the National Council on the Arts, the advisory group to the National Endowment for the Arts.

THE APPOINTMENT seems a logical step for Taylor, who has also belonged to the New York State Commission on Cultural Resources, and the New York City Cultural Council.

Taylor has worked on cultural projects for years. One of his most successful efforts has been the Jazz-mobile, a concert on wheels that tours New York ghetto areas. This began in 1965 as a way of cooling the summer for ghetto youngsters — when Taylor was on the board of the Harlem Cultural Council. Today the Jazzmobile presents more than 100 concerts per year, in addition to lecture-demonstrations and teaching workshops.

BILLY TAYLOR
Busy jazz pianist

Such original endeavors keep Taylor well in touch with the worlds of youth, entertainment, and business. He remains optimistic about all three. "I wish I were a youngster coming along today," he says.

"EVEN AN underprivileged youngster?" I ask. "Yep," comes the answer with no hesitation. "The only way that you can be culturally underprivileged is to not be aware of the strength of your own ethnic group's contribution to the overall culture, and what you can do on a personal level to extend that contribution, if that is the area that you want to go into."

Taylor puts his reply on an "ethnic basis" because he feels that white subcultures can operate more easily than non-whites within the American entertainment mainstream. Yet he cites evidence from the film and music worlds that black-oreinted products are increasingly popular, and notes that an economically sound entertainment scene has thrived in black areas.

Speaking more personally, Taylor goes on to say that "one of the most meaningful things that's happened in recent years is the fact that a lot of young people are much more sincere about who they are, where they are, and a reflection of all the things that a religion is supposed to stand for in terms of living . . . This is why a lot of college kids put their chins out and got shot at Kent and Jackson State, and a lot less publicized things where they just got beat up . . . This is a kind of living witness of what to me is tied in communication and music and art . . ."

TAYLOR'S OWN family had a considerable influence on his choice of music as a way of life. He came from a musical household; and he insists that his first musical influence was a piano-playing uncle, who introduced him to the music of jazz greats Fats Waller and Art Tatum. He started as a child with piano lessons, "which I hated." His attitude changed for "social" reasons, when "I found that pretty girls sat on the piano bench when somebody played at a party."

The budding jazzman started at Virginia State College as a sociology major, because "coming from a middle-class black family, both of my parents felt 'Okay, so you're a pretty good musician, and you love it and everything, but you better get something you can earn a living at.' "But a music teacher noticed Taylor spending more time in the music department than in sociology, and the young pianist became a de-facto music student. He has been earning a living at it ever since, in a variety of ways.

TAYLOR's success at concertizing has been steady since he won the first Downbeat magazine critics' poll as "New star on jazz piano"; among other achievements, he holds the record for the longest engagement at the Birdland jazz emporium.

He has also written some 300 songs, and arranged special material for top performers. The need to contribute to musical education nonetheless remains a constant Taylor theme, and the artist has managed to combine this with commercial success through his radio work.

Even with the solid musical success he has achieved, Taylor well remembers the days when he "paid his dues" — dues exacted by financial and racial pressures on his earlier career. But he speaks eagerly when looking into the future. His next project will be to write a jazz concerto, commissioned by the Utah Symphony.

HE INSISTS that he is not "trying to make a lady out of jazz" through the symphonic writing; indeed, he maintains that jazz has always been "America's classical music." Yet he is fascinated by the prospect of writing for orchestral instruments and musicians.

In the end, however, the thrill of performing basic jazz before live audiences remains the staple of Taylor's musical life. He speaks sadly of the "insecure" musician's need for "yes men" who accept everything he does. And he insists that performing is not a matter of "handing something down from Mt. Olympus," but rather a "sharing" of experience with listeners.

"What I'm going to do tonight," he said — referring to a concert at Boston's National Center for Afro-American Artists — "a play from about 10 'till about 4 or 5 in the morning. I'll go back to the hotel and maybe lay my head down for a minute or so, catch a plane out of here at 8 or 9, and from 11:30 until 4 tomorrow I'll be teaching in New York. And the reason I do this is because the kids that are involved are so turned on by the potential of being able to express themselves . . . and you see a whole door opening for somebody . . ."

Soloists Star In Verdi's Requiem

By JOHN SUNIER

THE BEST of the virtuoso instrumentalists —Antonio Janigro conducting I Solisti di Zagreb; The Vienna State Opera Orchestra conducted by Rossi/Swarowsky and Prohaska — Vanguard/Ampex M509-10: This double-play collection is poorly titled. With the aid of a magnifying glass (I'm not exaggerating) one will discover it to contain a fine program of Baroque concerti featuring the above groups and such soloists as Julius Baker, flute and Andre Lardrot, oboe.

Included are three concerti by Vivaldi, an oboe concerto by Cimarosa, Mozart's Flute Concerto No. 1 and Weber's (the one Romantic period work) Concertino for Clarinet and Orchestra in C. A great deal of good music for the money and the sort of things that even those rarely giving time to the classics would probably enjoy immensely.

VERDI: REQUIEM (complete) Leontyne Price/Jussi Bjoerling/Rosalind Elias/Giorgio Tozzi/Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra/Chorus/Fritz Reiner conducting — London/Ampex D 31215 (set of 2 cassettes):

The soaring melodies and exciting theatrics of Verdi's popular Requiem have perhaps never had such a scintillating array of fine soloists and great conductor as in this classic performance recorded shortly before the death of Bjoerling some years ago.

It is for this, one of the only stereo recordings featuring the glorious tenor voice of Bjoerling, that I will long treasure this tape, though its sound is not up to current standards and is not Dolby-treated.

The "Sanctus" section is Bjoerling's chance to really shine, a moment of ineffable beauty. The "Dies Irae" section really puts the fear of God into the listener, even reduced to the cassette medium as it is.

This is a minor beef, but I would have rather Ampex had fitted the entire Requiem onto a single cassette with 50 minutes on a side instead of employing two cassettes. The "Dies Irae" must be split in the middle with this arrangement.

BRAHMS: A German Requiem; Four Serious Songs — Edith Mathis/Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau/Edinburgh Festival Chorus/London Philharmonic Orchestra/Daniel Barenboim, pianist and conductor — DGG-Ampex K 7066: A double-play 7-inch reel stereotape with a complete performance of another of the great Requiems of the Romantic period of music.

Brahms' creation is more subdued than Verdi's by a long shot. The text is not the standard Latin, but is selected from the Lutheran German Bible. Its theme is less severe and more gently hopeful than the Latin original. The Lutheran Chorale strongly motivates this work, and it is one of the finest choral works ever composed. The baritone soloist has an important part, which Fischer-Dieskau brilliantly handles. This performance is sung in the original German, though there are English language versions available on disc. The filler item, "Four Serious Songs," is for baritone and piano, four art songs that display some of the composers most affecting melodies. Barenboim steps down from podium to grand piano for these. Sound is excellent, and with 54 minutes on one side of the tape, breaks in the music are restricted to just one — which can also be avoided if your reel tape machine has auto-reverse.

DVORAK: Requiem Mass Op. 89 — Lorengar/Komlossy/Ilosfalvy/Krause/The Ambrosian Singers/The London Symphony Orchestra/Istvan Kertesz, conductor —London/Ampex K 90166: One would get the impression this writer is a nut on Requiems, right? Mere coincidence.

The Dvorak work possesses both some of the dramatics of Verdi and the gentleness of Brahms. It is a shame that this glorious work is not more often performed, as it was last season by the San Francisco Symphony.

Again, the complete work is contained on a double-play 7-inch reel. The tape medium — even non-Dolby —seems ideal for the massive and complex choral-orchestral sounds found in this music, and interruptions are minimized. Composed in 1890, the authentic full score was only just published in 1960. This Requiem was specifically designed for concert performances, not church use. It is full of imaginative settings of the parts of the familiar Latin tex[illegible] Simple treatments, almost like folk so[illegible] are contrasted with full orchestral tutti [illegible]o grand effect. The soloists are generally ideal, and Kertesz is well known his affinity to the music of Dvorak, having conducted all of his symphonies on London tapes and records.

FRANZ SCHMIDT: Symphony No. 4 in C Major — Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra/Zubin Mehta — London/Ampex L 480261: A Dolby tape, this reel-to-reel release is the first stereo recording of an important symphony by a Vienese composer who appears to be experiencing a small re-discovery. Schmidt followed in the footsteps of Brahms and Bruckner, carrying forward the Viennese classical-Romantic tradition without the experimentation of Mahler or Schoenberg.

Unlike most of his music, the Fourth Symphony is profoundly tragic in mood. It opens with a single trumpet and dies away at the end with a trumpet solo, reminding one of Ives' "Unanswered Question" in some ways. The meaning of his existence was a central search in his music, much as it was in Mahler's. Schmidt was a professor at The Vienna Academy, which Zubin Mehta (now conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic) attended and therefore has some affinity for. The sound of the tape is superb, but the second side contains 13 minutes of blank tape, which seems a serious waste.

DOHNANYI: Variations on a Nursery Tune Op. 25; Rachmaninoff: Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini Op. 43 — Julius Katchen, piano/London Philharmonic Orchestra/Sir Adrian Boult — London/Ampex L 80036: Not a new tape by any means, this one still sounds good and provides the only tape version of the delightful variations on "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star." A romping satire of over-blown piano concerti opens the work, which abounds in unusual sonorities and lovely melodies. Katchen's performance is of the best, and that goes too for the Rachmaninoff chestnut.

MARIN POET'S CORNER

ENERGY—A CRISIS

It rained all night the lights went out
The Wintry wind did blow
And we found out without a doubt
What we should already know.
Electric power is not our slave
And we should not abuse it.
We should be awed by what it gave
And humbly learn to use it.
The things we do depend on juice
And we take it so for granted,
But when it's gone it has no use
Even if we've raved and ranted.
I won't forget the cold and dark
When the power failed for sixteen hours
For I found out it's not a lark
To live with wind and showers.

SAN RAFAEL — AL MOSLEY

NIGHT THOUGHTS

I lie in my bed
Between the covers,
so warm.

Another day has passed,
A day no different than the past.
People were born,
People died,
Passing unknown to the outside world,
And buried
In the endless space of time.

I relive in my thoughts
What I had done during the day.
I try to foretell the future
And to remember the past.
My powers are unlimited
In the world of my thoughts,
As I lie cosily between the blankets.

Soon sleep will overcome me.
I will dream my fantasies,
Then awaken to find myself
In a new day.
A day of no significance,
Except, maybe, for those
Who are willing to remember it
In their world of thought.

MILL VALLEY — CHRIS BAUER

MY FATHER'S WAY

See the walk of a tired man;
Each step falls hard upon the ground,
Each shoe pressed out of shape and round
From inner sole to outward lean.
It's the weariest walk you've ever seen —
But such a straight path.

With the aid of a magnifying glass (I'm not exaggerating) one will discover it to contain a fine program of Baroque concerti featuring the above groups and such soloists as Julius Baker, flute and Andre Lardrot, oboe.

Included are three concerti by Vivaldi, an oboe concerto by Cimarosa, Mozart's Flute Concerto No. 1 and Weber's (the one Romantic period work) Concertino for Clarinet and Orchestra in C. A great deal of good music for the money and the sort of things that even those rarely giving time to the classics would probably enjoy immensely.

VERDI: REQUIEM (complete) Leontyne Price/Jussi Bjoerling/Rosalind Elias/Giorgio Tozzi/Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra/Chorus/Fritz Reiner conducting — London/Ampex D 31215 (set of 2 cassettes):

The soaring melodies and exciting theatrics of Verdi's popular Requiem have perhaps never had such a scintillating array of fine soloists and great conductor as in this classic performance recorded shortly before the death of Bjoerling some years ago.

It is for this, one of the only stereo recordings featuring the glorious tenor voice of Bjoerling, that I will long treasure this tape, though its sound is not up to current standards and is not Dolby-treated.

The "Sanctus" section is Bjoerling's chance to really shine, a moment of ineffable beauty. The "Dies Irae" section really puts the fear of God into the listener, even reduced to the cassette medium as it is.

This is a minor beef, but I would have rather Ampex had fitted the entire Requiem onto a single cassette with 50 minutes on a side instead of employing two cassettes. The "Dies Irae" must be split in the middle with this arrangement.

BRAHMS: A German Requiem; Four Serious Songs — Edith Mathis/Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau/Edinburgh Festival Chorus/London Philharmonic Orchestra/Daniel Barenboim, pianist and conductor — DGG-Ampex K 7066: A double-play 7-inch reel stereotape with a complete performance of another of the great Requiems of the Romantic period of music.

Brahms' creation is more subdued than Verdi's by a long shot. The text is not the standard Latin, but is selected from the Lutheran German Bible. Its theme is less severe and more gently hopeful than the Latin original. The Lutheran Chorale strongly motivates this work, and it is one of the finest choral works ever composed. The baritone soloist has an important part, which Fischer-Dieskau brilliantly handles. This performance is sung in the original German, though there are English language versions available on disc. The filler item, "Four Serious Songs," is for baritone and piano, four art songs that display some of the composers most affecting melodies. Barenboim steps down from podium to grand piano for these. Sound is excellent, and with 54 minutes on one side of the tape, breaks in the music are restricted to just one — which can also be avoided if your reel tape machine has auto-reverse.

DVORAK: Requiem Mass Op. 89 — Lorengar/Komlossy/Ilosfalvy/Krause/The Ambrosian Singers/The London Symphony Orchestra/Istvan Kertesz, conductor —London/Ampex K 90166: One would get the impression this writer is a nut on Requiems, right? Mere coincidence.

The Dvorak work possesses both some of the dramatics of Verdi and the gentleness of Brahms. It is a shame that this glorious work is not more often performed, as it was last season by the San Francisco Symphony.

Again, the complete work is contained on a double-play 7-inch reel. The tape medium — even non-Dolby —seems ideal for the massive and complex choral-orchestral sounds found in this music, and interruptions are minimized. Composed in 1890, the authentic full score was only just published in 1960. This Requiem was specifically designed for concert performances, not church use. It is full of imaginative settings of the parts of the familiar Latin tex[illegible] Simple treatments, almost like folk so[illegible] are contrasted with full orchestral tutti [illegible]o grand effect. The soloists are generally ideal, and Kertesz is well known his affinity to the music of Dvorak, having conducted all of his symphonies on London tapes and records.

FRANZ SCHMIDT: Symphony No. 4 in C Major — Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra/Zubin Mehta — London/Ampex L 480261: A Dolby tape, this reel-to-reel release is the first stereo recording of an important symphony by a Vienese composer who appears to be experiencing a small re-discovery. Schmidt followed in the footsteps of Brahms and Bruckner, carrying forward the Viennese classical-Romantic tradition without the experimentation of Mahler or Schoenberg.

Unlike most of his music, the Fourth Symphony is profoundly tragic in mood. It opens with a single trumpet and dies away at the end with a trumpet solo, reminding one of Ives' "Unanswered Question" in some ways. The meaning of his existence was a central search in his music, much as it was in Mahler's. Schmidt was a professor at The Vienna Academy, which Zubin Mehta (now conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic) attended and therefore has some affinity for. The sound of the tape is superb, but the second side contains 13 minutes of blank tape, which seems a serious waste.

DOHNANYI: Variations on a Nursery Tune Op. 25; Rachmaninoff: Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini Op. 43 — Julius Katchen, piano/London Philharmonic Orchestra/Sir Adrian Boult — London/Ampex L 80036: Not a new tape by any means, this one still sounds good and provides the only tape version of the delightful variations on "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star." A romping satire of over-blown piano concerti opens the work, which abounds in unusual sonorities and lovely melodies. Katchen's performance is of the best, and that goes too for the Rachmaninoff chestnut.

MARIN POET'S CORNER

ENERGY—A CRISIS

It rained all night the lights went out
The Wintry wind did blow
And we found out without a doubt
What we should already know.
Electric power is not our slave
And we should not abuse it.
We should be awed by what it gave
And humbly learn to use it.
The things we do depend on juice
And we take it so for granted,
But when it's gone it has no use
Even if we've raved and ranted.
I won't forget the cold and dark
When the power failed for sixteen hours
For I found out it's not a lark
To live with wind and showers.

SAN RAFAEL AL MOSLEY

NIGHT THOUGHTS

I lie in my bed
Between the covers,
so warm.

Another day has passed,
A day no different than the past.
People were born,
People died,
Passing unknown to the outside world,
And buried
In the endless space of time.

I relive in my thoughts
What I had done during the day.
I try to foretell the future
And to remember the past.
My powers are unlimited
In the world of my thoughts,
As I lie cosily between the blankets.

Soon sleep will overcome me.
I will dream my fantasies,
Then awaken to find myself
In a new day.
A day of no significance,
Except, maybe, for those
Who are willing to remember it
In their world of thought.

MILL VALLEY CHRIS BAUER

MY FATHER'S WAY

See the walk of a tired man;
Each step falls hard upon the ground,
Each shoe pressed out of shape and round
From inner sole to outward lean.
It's the weariest walk you've ever seen —
But such a straight path.

Barbara Walters Has Hectic Schedule

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Barbara Walters, as a member of the "Today" show, has the most interesting and exhausting job of any woman in television.

She meets the world's most fascinating people day in and day out, and pays for it by rolling out of bed at 4:30 every morning.

Separated from husband, Lee Guber, who owns a chain of theaters-in-the-round, Barbara shares her eight-room apartment in the heart of Manhattan with daughter, Jacqueline, 5, a nursemaid and a housekeeper.

Barbara needs all the help she can get. After arising she fixes herself a light breakfast of cereal and coffee and dresses quickly for the five-minute walk to Rockefeller Center where the NBC show originates.

SHE arrives at the studio at 5:30 a.m. to run through the commercials and major pieces of news of the day and checks up on unexpected interviews for the unrehearsed two-hour show.

Thereafter she goes through the grind of hairdressing and makeup. She is ready to go on the air at 7 a.m.

Barbara frets that her wardrobe is repetitious because the clothes are her own. But she is more comfortable in her own things and dresses as unspectacularly as possible to avoid distracting viewers from her guests and her own facial reactions.

"I'm well dressed," Barbara says, "but I'm no fashion leader."

WHEN the show goes off the air at 9 a.m. Barbara immediately prepares for her other daily show, "Not for Women Only," which she tapes at 10:15 twice a week-squeezing all five shows into the two work sessions. Happily the studio is also in Rockefeller Center.

Barbara then dashes home to arrive by 2 o'clock in the afternoon to spend some time with little Jacqueline who would rather watch "Captain Kangaroo" than her mother's shows.

The apartment is furnished colorfully with a combination of contemporary and traditional furniture. Many of the old pieces are from her parents' apartment, things she swore she would never have in her own home. Now she loves them.

ONE EXAMPLE is an antique gilded mirror in the dining room. And she treasures her father's collection of curious and ancient clocks. The whole apartment is awash with books, also a hobby of her father's and a result of hundreds of books sent her by authors who appear on "Today."

When Barbara first joined the show she continued to live what she considered a normal life, going out to dinner and attending parties. It meant getting only three or four hours sleep.

Now she gets to bed at 9:30 as often as possible. But she still goes out three or four nights a week, retiring about midnignt.

ON WEEKENDS Barbara takes Jacqueline bicycling in Central Park or to the playground or zoo. She is not athletically inclined and has no hobbies exept reading.

"It's the most interesting job possible," Barbara concludes.

"But no matter what anyone says, you never get used to the hours."

To Minimize Shock Danger

Since some sets retain an electrical charge, be sure the electrical current has been disconnected for several hours before removing the back of the set. A severe shock could result from touching the second anode lead to the picture tube. This could be extremely dangerous to a person with a weak heart.

TONY KUBEK, left, and Curt Gowdy, share the chores covering the World Series a best-of-seven series scheduled to start today on Channels 3 and 4.

HELEN HAYES RISES HIGHER THAN HEIGHT

When Helen Hayes was a young actress a producer told her that if she were four inches taller she could become one of the great actresses of her time.

"It really stuck in my craw that I was so short," says Miss Hayes, "but I decided to lick my size.

"A string of teachers pulled and stretched till I felt I was in a medieval torture chamber. I didn't gain an inch but my posture became absolutely military. I became the tallest five-foot woman in the world.

"AND MY refusal to be limited by my limitations enabled me to play Mary of Scotland, the tallest queen in history," said Miss Hayes, now starring in "The Snoop Sisters," which is part of the "NBC Wednesday Mystery Movie" (8:30-10 p.m. PT, in color) on the NBC television network.

Miss Hayes has been on stage for 65 years and she has no easy answer for her durability.

"I've never been glamorous, so I find it hard to explain the durability of my career and the loyalty of the audience.

"Perhaps it's just identification. I once was the typical daughter, then the easily recognizable wife, and then the quintessential mother. I seem always to have reminded people of someone in their family.

TV Crosses National Frontiers

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (UPI) — Some of the most important programs now being made for television are co-productions by companies in different countries combining to meet the ever rising costs.

Francis Essex, one of Britain's leading television experts, believes this is a good trend for the industry on both sides of the Atlantic providing it is not forgotten that local programming is also an important part of television fare.

Essex, who is production controller for Associated Television (AT), spoke at the 13th annual International Television Festival of Monte Carlo, sponsored by Prince Rainier. Into the daily run of big specials from a score of countries he dropped two programs — one on angling, one on gardening — which created a stir, though they cost only $3,300 each.

Essex said: "Technical know-how has long since overcome the language barrier in television and I can visualize major international programs being screened simultaneously at peak viewing hours in several countries. But the specialized program for smaller numbers of viewers must still be provided or networks will lose their own particular national flavor."

Students See 'Patients' On TV

By MARIA BRADEN

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The young man is given instructions to dress for the role, wait for the signal from the television crew, and make his entrance onto the set.

Despite appearances, he's neither an actor, nor is he taping a TV show. He's a first year medical student at the University of Kentucky getting "an introduction to the profession."

The rather unusual introduction is an attempt to help medical students develop professional skills in interviewing patients, an aspect of the profession that is often neglected in medical school.

DR. MYRON G. Sandifer Jr., assistant dean of the medical school and course coordinator, said the section on interviewing was created to "give motivation to kids used to seeing slides."

Actors and actresses are hired to play the role of "patients." They are assigned "situations" and given a description of the role they are to play.

The student receives only a situation sheet with pertinent information such as the patient's name and his complaints.

Then the student meets the actor-patient and the interview is video-taped. Immediately after the interview the student meets with a faculty member to discuss his performance.

"THE GOAL is not how skillful they are, but how comfortable they'll be next time," said Dr. Jean Wiese, a behaviorial scientist who prepared the course offering. "It's not the information they get, but how they go about getting it."

Students play themselves. I structions for interviewing include this advice:

"Dress appropriately for your role as a first year medical student assisting a family physician. (Please do not chew gum)."

The situations devised by Dr. Wiese are medically related, but do not require expert medical knowledge, she said.

ACTORS' roles have included that of a man with an ulcer, a suspected alcoholic, or a mother with a leukemic child. One of the situations required an actor and an actress to play a couple seeking advice on abortion.

On the whole the actors do a good job of imitating patients, except sometimes they talk too much, Dr. Wiese said. Instead of making the medical students work for answers they get involved in their roles and start declaiming, she said.

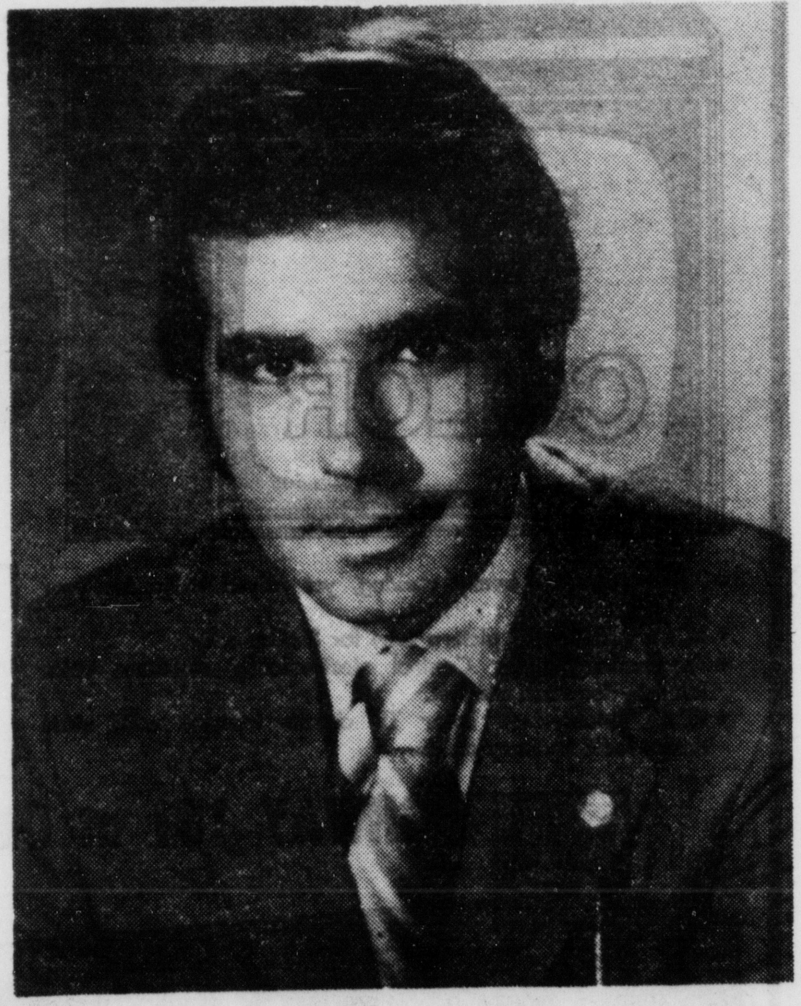
Why not let the students interview real patients? Dr. Wiese said it was a problem of time and scheduling.

"The overwhelming logistics of trying to schedule 210 interviews with real patients led to the use of actors," she said.

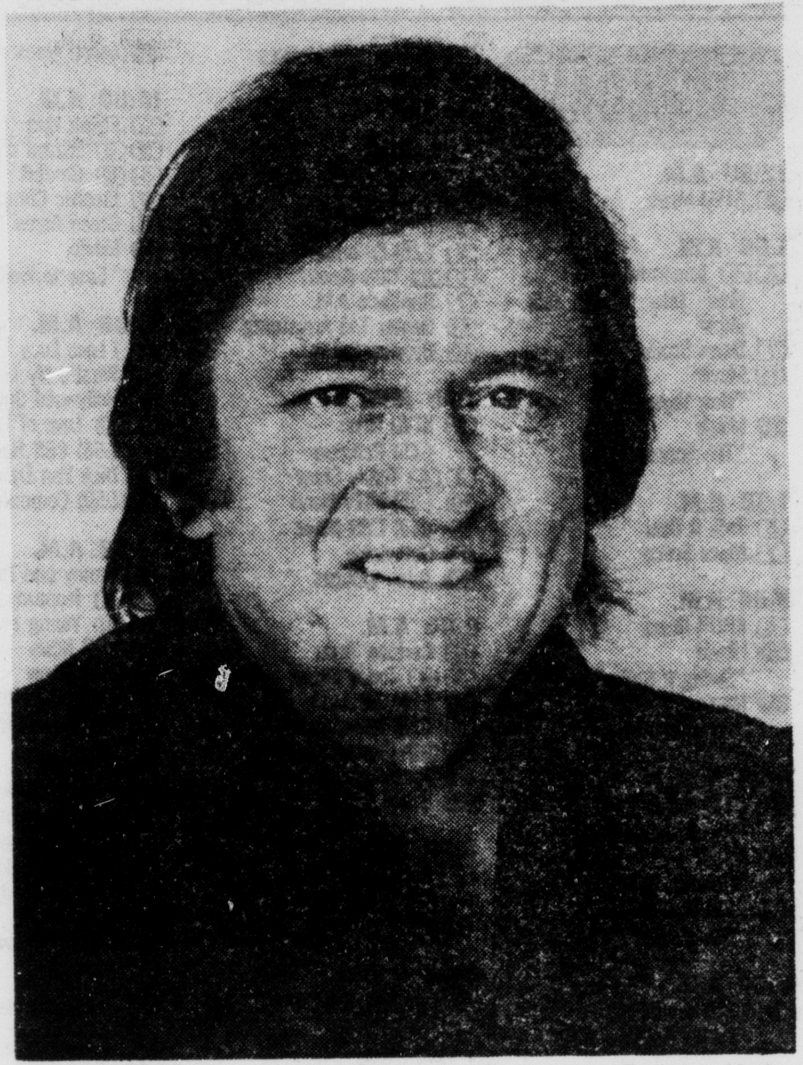
STUDENTS are evaluated on the basis of their use of interviewing techniques, such as questions asked and use of confrontation tactics, and for their personal style. That includes whether they're impersonal or empathetic, tense or calm and emotional or objective.

In addition to the actual interviews and evaluation, students are required to read additional material and to take an examination at the end of the semester.

The 'Introduction to the Profession" course also covers more traditional areas, such as emergency measures, human growth and development and how to give physical examinations. The section on interviewing is given in the spring semester.



TOM SNYDER, a controversial newsman, will be host of a new late talk show, "Tomorrow" to be shown at 1 a.m. Tuesday on Channels 3 and 4.



JOHNNY CASH, will host the seventh annual Country Music Association Awards to be telecast from the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville, Tenn., at 10 p.m. Monday on Channels 5 and 10.

Soap Operas Vs. Real Melodrama

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — At last count, 15 soap operas and 16 game shows were on the three TV networks on weekdays. But the familiar soap-and-games pattern could markedly change next season at CBS-TV.

Three half-hour daytime shows possibly may be replaced with a daily 90-minute effort bearing the all-purpose title of "CBS Daytime 90," according to B. Donald Grant, a top CBS executive.

But Grant, CBS' vice president for daytime program, emphasizes that such a move is by no means definite. He says it depends on how the network's current daytime shows hold up in the ratings this season.

HOWEVER, he says his network probably will know by the end of November whether "CBS Daytime 90" will be ordered up as daily fare — or only once a month — for viewers during the 1974-75 season.

CBS' new daytime concept had a trial run last Thursday, when the network pre-empted "The Price is Right," "The Match Game" and "Secret Storm" for "Tiger on a Chain," a romantic melodrama about the homecoming of an Air Force pilot from a North Vietnamese prison camp.

It was the first of eight 90-minute daytime melodramas now planned. Grant says the seven others aren't scheduled yet, but CBS may show three more this season and the rest in summer and next fall.

If CBS goes the daily 90-minute route, he says, it probably would run similar melodramas on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Unlike soap operas, none of the shows will have continuing characters or stories.

Tuesdays and Thursdays probably would feature 90-minute series much like these on evening TV, each with a regular cast, he said.

Grant said the project would work out to 130 first-run programs over a 26-week period, with 26 weeks of repeats; CBS probably would produce 78 of the shows itself and tape them in New York.

HE SAID the Tuesday and Thursday series might be done by outside production companies, but this isn't definite yet.

Whatever happens, the 90-minute daytime concept won't be just an eight-shot deal for CBS. Come next season, Grant said, "if nothing else, we will have a 'Daytime 90' once a month."

Dreyfus Case Is TV Drama

One of the most dramatic defenses of individual liberty in the history of the Western world — Emile Zola's intervention on behalf of imprisoned French Army officer Capt. Alfred Dreyfus — will be brought to life in a 90-minute special tentatively titled "The Dreyfus Affair," to be colorcast on the NBC Television Network.

A cast of internationally famous performers, to be announced, will star in the play. It will be filmed in Europe by Metromedia Producers Corp. for presentation on NBC-TV during the 1974-75 season.

Public television station KCET of Los Angeles will produce a special 90-minute broadcast for individuals and agencies concerned with America's senior citizens to use as a national rallying point.

The program, entitled "Wrinkles, Birthdays and Other Fables," is being underwritten with a grant from 3M Company, according to the station president and general manager, James L. Loper.

The major special will be an hour-long broadcast, incorporating entertainment forms to deliver information concerning the elderly, followed by a 30-minute discussion program. It will air nationally over the Public Broadcasting Service Oct. 29 at 8 p.m.

The one-hour segment is being produced for KCET by Bob Henry Productions Inc.

It's nice to know there's a Westinghouse security system at home when you're not.

Especially when you realize there's a home broken into every two minutes. The Westinghouse security system is more than a burglar alarm. Say you're away for the evening or off on a trip and someone breaks in. There's a loud alarm. Loud enough to scare him off. The system automatically sends a coded message to a 24-hour communications center, and they call the police. Same for fire. Loud alarm. Coded message. A call to the fire department. In other emergencies, direct voice contact with the center brings help. Send the coupon. Or call 479-8383

BILL RUSSELL, left, and Dewayne Jessie, clash in "Love and the Flunky" to be shown on "Love American Style," at 10 p.m. Friday on Channels 7 and 11.

The I-J is the county's number one daily, delivered into more homes in Marin than any other printed medium.

The Start Of One Career In Acting

"You might say I didn't follow the conventional routes to get into acting," says James McEachin with massive understatement.

About seven years ago he was crossing a Los Angeles street when a screenwriter he had met maybe once before ran into him and asked him if he was an actor.

"I told him no, but he said he had just written a script and that I would be perfect for the role," said McEachin, star of the NBC Television Network's "Tenafly" segments, part of the "NBC Wednesday Mystery Movie" series.

"I took the script and threw it into the back seat of my car and forgot about it. A week later he called and asked if I like it. At the time I had lost my job as a record company executive so I turned to my wife and asked her if I should become a movie actor. She said, sure, if that's what you want.

"It was an awful movie called 'I Crossed the Color Line.' Anyhow, I showed up on location for the filming and didn't know the first thing about what I was supposed to do. I didn't know how to act, or find my mark; I didn't even know you were supposed to memorize lines.

"Somehow I muddled through the movie, for which I was paid the grand sum of $100 a week. Later I went to a screening of the film and was so unbelievably bad I sneaked out of the screening room before the film was finished.

"I guess that's what made me become an actor," he smiled. "I was so bad I was determined not to quit with that film as my last acting effort.

"So I went to an actor's workshop for a while and the rest came naturally."

Author For Reality

"My books are real," says Los Angeles policeman-author Joseph Wambaugh, "and people like them, so they should like a real television show."

He's referring to NBC Television Network's "Police Story" (Tuesdays, 10-11 p.m. in color), the anthology series he created.

The realism of "Police Story" does not stop with the script, Wambaugh points out. Christopher Morgan, the show's associate producer, is responsible to find locations to match the script.

"IF WE'RE dealing with real situations, we should be showing them in real locations," Morgan says. "If we need a pool hall, it is a real pool hall in the area it's supposed to depict. It won't be on a movie lot."

The same holds true for exterior scenes. Morgan scouts locations mainly in the impoverished areas of Southern California, because "that's where most police work usually happens." And since most crimes are committed at night, a majority of the show is filmed during the evening hours.

It means strange hours for the 50-man crew, who often have a production call for 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. the next day. "That puts us in the real areas at the real times crime takes place," Morgan explains.

WAMBAUGH hopes the series' realism will destroy some fantasies about policemen that he thinks are harmful: "People who have false impressions of cops cherish those myths and could perhaps be shattered by their lack of validity some day. Others, who don't like Establishment symbols in the first place, get further turned off by being expected to swallow that stuff. Then we lose all communication with them."

The Start Of One Career In Acting

"You might say I didn't follow the conventional routes to get into acting," says James McEachin with massive understatement.

About seven years ago he was crossing a Los Angeles street when a screenwriter he had met maybe once before ran into him and asked him if he was an actor.

"I told him no, but he said he had just written a script and that I would be perfect for the role," said McEachin, star of the NBC Television Network's "Tenafly" segments, part of the "NBC Wednesday Mystery Movie" series.

"I took the script and threw it into the back seat of my car and forgot about it. A week later he called and asked if I like it. At the time I had lost my job as a record company executive so I turned to my wife and asked her if I should become a movie actor. She said, sure, if that's what you want.

"It was an awful movie called 'I Crossed the Color Line.' Anyhow, I showed up on location for the filming and didn't know the first thing about what I was supposed to do. I didn't know how to act, or find my mark; I didn't even know you were supposed to memorize lines.

"Somehow I muddled through the movie, for which I was paid the grand sum of $100 a week. Later I went to a screening of the film and was so unbelievably bad I sneaked out of the screening room before the film was finished.

"I guess that's what made me become an actor," he smiled. "I was so bad I was determined not to quit with that film as my last acting effort.

"So I went to an actor's workshop for a while and the rest came naturally."

Author For Reality

"My books are real," says Los Angeles policeman-author Joseph Wambaugh, "and people like them, so they should like a real television show."

He's referring to NBC Television Network's "Police Story" (Tuesdays, 10-11 p.m. in color), the anthology series he created.

The realism of "Police Story" does not stop with the script, Wambaugh points out. Christopher Morgan, the show's associate producer, is responsible to find locations to match the script.

"IF WE'RE dealing with real situations, we should be showing them in real locations," Morgan says. "If we need a pool hall, it is a real pool hall in the area it's supposed to depict. It won't be on a movie lot."

The same holds true for exterior scenes. Morgan scouts locations mainly in the impoverished areas of Southern California, because "that's where most police work usually happens." And since most crimes are committed at night, a majority of the show is filmed during the evening hours.

It means strange hours for the 50-man crew, who often have a production call for 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. the next day. "That puts us in the real areas at the real times crime takes place," Morgan explains.

WAMBAUGH hopes the series' realism will destroy some fantasies about policemen that he thinks are harmful: "People who have false impressions of cops cherish those myths and could perhaps be shattered by their lack of validity some day. Others, who don't like Establishment symbols in the first place, get further turned off by being expected to swallow that stuff. Then we lose all communication with them."

David Brinkley — 30 Years In News

The number 30 is often used in the field of journalism to end a news story. For NBC News correspondent David Brinkley however, it means something else. It means he will soon celebrate his 30th anniversary with the National Broadcasting Comapny.

For three decades the veteran NBC newsman has spent most of his time presenting the day's top stories from the nation's capital. Currently, he presents a series of personal reports of and about the news under the general title of "David Brinkley's Journal," colorcast five nights a week on "NBC Nightly News."

PREVIOUSLY, he was coanchorman of "NBC Nightly News," which began on the NBC Television Network Aug. 1, 1970, when "The Huntley-Brinkley Report" was expanded to seven days a week under this new title.

Chet Huntley and David Brinkley started saying "Good night, David" and "Good night, Chet" on Oct. 29, 1956, and it wasn't long before "The Huntley-Brinkley Report" became television's most popular news program.

The combination was a solid success because of their knowledgable and witty conversation. For 14 years the two anchormen complemented each other until Huntley retired in 1970 to head a recreation-resort project in his native Montana.

Brinkley was born July 10, 1920, in Wilmington, N.C. He started writing for his hometown newspaper, The Wilmington Star-News, while attending high school. He later attended the University of North Carolina and Vanderbilt University, and then joined United Press before entering the Army in World War II.

AFTER HIS discharge in 1943, he joined NBC News, operating in the network's Washington bureau, until he and Mr. Huntley were paired for the 1956 national political convention.

In his early days in Washington, Brinkley recalls they presented a daily newsreel on the local television station for those few people who were fortunate enough to own a television set. "I will not attempt to tell you how bad it was," said Brinkley. "It was a silent film, narrated by me, and I never got to see the film before it went on the air, and I had to take the cameraman's word for the names, places, facts and figures.

"And the engineers were as new at it as the rest of us. One night, our pitiful little newsreel had four stories in it. The first was a funeral of some Washington dignitary. And the last story was about some kind of experimental work being done at the Agriculture Department's sheep farm.

"For each story, since there was no sound on film, there was appropriate background music.

"THE PROGRAM started . . . I started reading my script . . . and the audio man started the background music, a funeral dirge. Then the film came up, and it turned out the engineer had loaded it backward tails out. So what we had on the air was an organ playing funeral music, Brinkley talking about the deceased dignitary, and on the screen a picture of a sheep, upside down!"

Brinkley has received every major broadcasting award, and his writing has been called the best ever done in television journalism. Says Brinkley: "One thing I've tried to do over the years is to write scripts with the utmost simplicity and clarity. If a line or two of background is needed first to have the main element of a story make better sense, I put it in, then get to the 'lead' a little later."

The quality most often identified with him is his sharp wit. He has the reputation as the country's wriest television commentator and has been described as "deliciously cynical" and "David of the devastating quip." During his years with NBC News, the word "Brinkleyism" was coined to describe his wry observations, and ever since, "Brinkleyisms" have often mirrored the events of our time.

BRINKLEY often presents the humorous angle to a story, touched with irony. There is, however, no doubt that he is serious about his work.

"I have always liked to include the funny, not to try to be a comedian," he explained, "because humor is one of the elements in the human experience and one that is very possibly essential to human sanity.

"I don't think I'm particularly funny, but I don't believe in reading headlines and wire copy and calling that the news. I like to think of myself as a writer. My style, if I have one, is to write and deliver the news in conversational English."

During the year Brinkley appeared with Chet Huntley on "The Huntley-Brinkley Report" he was often stopped in the street by people, always polite, who knew he was either Huntley or Brinkley, but weren't sure which, and so they would ask. After Chet retired and left for Montana, an old lady stopped David in Washington one day and asked, "Aren't you Chet Huntley?" Brinkley answered, "No ma'am, he's the one out West on a horse."

TUNING IN ON THE TELEVISION

By JACK GAVER

The first broadcast of "The Burt Reynolds Late Show" on NBC Oct. 13 will be devoted to a program filmed entirely on location at the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kans., where the star and guests will entertain the inmates and some of the prisoners also will entertain.

ABC sent a team of seven newsmen to the People's Republic of China to spend six weeks shooting film for a one-hour documentary.

CBS will present 11 animated specials during the new season that are based on literary classics. Included are such as "The Swiss Family Robinson," "The Three Musketeers," "Treasure Island" and "The Prince and the Pauper."

The so-called mini-series comes to NBC with the presentation of "The Blue Knight" in one-hour segments on successive nights, Nov. 13 through Nov. 16. The attraction is a dramatization of Joseph Wambaugh's recent best-selling novel about the impending retirement of a Los Angeles policeman. William Holden and Lee Remick have the top roles.

The new look to NBC's "Banacek" series starring George Peppard is supplied by Christine Belford, who plays a recurring regular role as Carlie Kirkland, an insurance investigator romantically involved with Banacek.

Nov. 22 is the air date for NBC's broadcast of the "My Fair Lady" movie starring Rex Harrison and Audrey Hepburn. It will run for three hours and 15 minutes.

SOME QUESTIONS FROM JOEY

Joey Bishop has pointed out that the small things in life are funny, particularly when questioned.

Why cars have speedometers that go up to 120 miles an hour even if the motor can't?

How your wife zipped up the back of her dress before she married you?

Why your kid, who can't remember his multiplication tables, can remember the lyrics of every song the Beatles ever did?

Why all doctors want you to stop smoking, yet in most of their waiting rooms there are ashtrays big enough to sit in?

Why your wife will burn up three dollars worth of gas to go across town to save 11 cents on a can of tuna fish?

If the guys who park your car drive their own cars that way?

Why women take two hours deciding on a pair of shoes and 10 seconds to say "yes" when proposed to?

Why, with the weathermen wrong so many times, people continue to turn on the radio in the morning for the weather report?

Why it always seems like two hours when you're waiting for the doctor, and that same wait in a dentist's office seems like two minutes?

A Lot Involved In TV Show Move

How does a nationally-syndicated television variety show move 2000 miles cross-country, and set itself up for two full weeks of shows in a theater-restaurant in a major hotel/casino?

Well, it isn't easy. But it was all done recently when The Mike Douglas Show moved lock, stock, and equipment to the South Shore Room at Harrah's Tahoe.

Lifted in entirety from its home base in Philadelphia, the Group W Production moved star, crew, television cameras, spotlights, and a myriad of gear and trappings to Nevada for the unique film tapings. The show goes on the road only 8-10 weeks of its 52-week filming commitment each year.

TO BRING the show to Lake Tahoe, negotiations between Harrah's and Douglas officials began last Spring, shortly after Douglas had to alter plans for a return engagement as a headliner at the nightclub in March.

Advance men visited the area in weeks prior to the arrival of Douglas and the TV show's production personnel.

Actual pre-taping preparations for the location filmings are almost endless. Here are some of the things that were done to convert Harrah's South Shore Room into a television studio:

Enlarge the performing area of the South Shore Room stage by nine feet on either side; install an eight-foot-wide runway in the midsection, extending 25 feet into the audience; outline the entrance stage in theatrical footlights.

Transform dressing rooms into double-duty areas to be used by TV people by day, South Shore Room performers by night. Diagrams help to insure complete restoration of the rooms for each usage. Performer's shoes are replaced in the exact spot in which they are previously left.

Utilize talents of resident and visiting artists in construction of unique art work, such as Douglas' familiar first name in over-sized letters — the letter "I" forming a door for his initial entrance before his TV audience.

A large, many-tabled restaurant capable of accommodating 800-900 dinner and cocktail show patrons, is rearranged into proscenium (row) seating for 1300 television studio guests.

THE CONVERSION to a TV studio, with banks of spotlights, four large rolling TV cameras, a dozen program monitors, specially-built stages, work tables, etc., takes about 30 men working at top efficiency only about two hours. They start around 2 a.m., after completion of the regular midnight show.

At the close of a day's taping (1 pm-3 pm), the room must again be converted into a complete restaurant. Dismantlement of the TV studio commences as the last studio guests are leaving, at approximately 3:30-3:45 p.m.

Restaurant set-up begins immediately. Tables, tray stands, risers, upholstered railings, booth cushions, decorations, etc., are returned to the dining room from their waiting place near the kitchen. The conversion, second within a 24-hour span, takes about an hour-and-a-quarter.

At 6 p.m., the first dinner patrons are escorted to their tables. TV-studio accouterments have been stored until the next dawn.

What does host Douglas say about all this?

"It's a breeze for me," he said in a backstage interview at Harrah's, "it's the crew that goes bananas when we're on location.

"Especially like this," the star gestured with one hand while his other held a cup of after-show coffee, "all I have to do is come downstairs from the hotel, and I'm ready to go. Not even any travel time!"

A Prescription For The Hypochondriac

Can watching "Medical Center" be beneficial to hypochondriacs? Dr. Stanley Morris, a San Diego, Calif., psychologist, thinks it can.

The series, starring Chad Everett as an associate professor of surgery at a large university medical center and James Daly as the center's chief of staff and medical director, is in its fifth season on the CBS network.

"I know it seems likely in theory that a hypochondriac could easily come up with a regular supply of imaginary new ailments by watching such programs as this one," said Dr. Morris during a recent visit to the "Medical Center" set at M-G-M Studios in Hollywood. "But I don't find that it actually works out that way.

"In fact, when I'm dealing with a patient who, I am forced to conclude, is suffering from hypochondria, I try to persuade him to watch 'Medical Center' by mentioning I'm a fan of it — which, indeed, I am — and discussing some of the stories and actors with him. If he's already a viewer of the program, so much the better."

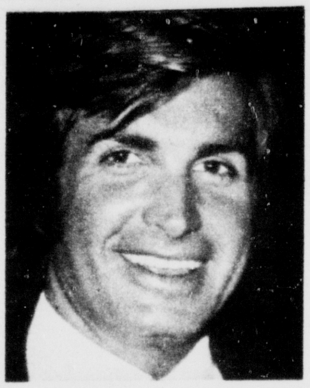
Ask Them Yourself

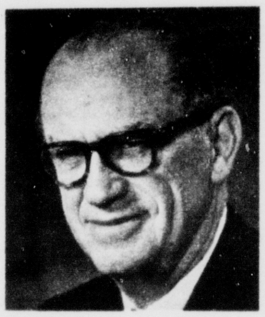
Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.



FOR GEORGE HAMILTON

How do you feel about all the trouble Burt Reynolds got into during the filming of "The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing" in Gila Bend?—A. Peters, Gadsden, Ala.

● The furor would never have happened in a big city. A small place like Gila Bend isn't used to having a film company there, so everything got out of proportion with the excitement. The man who killed himself was obviously a depressed and very unfortunate person. But the whole thing gave Hollywood a bad name, and actors a bad name. Being the star of the film, Burt was the obvious focal point. In my opinion he was not to blame. However, I think all the publicity will help sell the film.



FOR POSTMASTER GENERAL E. T. KLASSEN

Does the U.S. Postal Service plan to eliminate residential mail service on Saturdays?—Mrs. Laurel Aldridge, Hobart, Ind.

● No, but people are accusing us of it all the time. They may be confusing residential delivery with business delivery. Many offices and office buildings are closed on Saturday and such firms have requested that we do not deliver mail to them on Saturday, so we do not. Residential mail service as well as delivery to businesses that desire it will continue on Saturday.

FOR CHUCK CONNORS, actor

What was the funny comment you made after Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev hugged you and you lifted him off the ground in a friendly embrace?—John Lang, Green Bay, Wis.

● The thought that went through my mind as I lifted Brezhnev in farewell was "He's head of state—I'm surrounded by security men—I MUST be careful." And after the hugging incident, a TV interviewer kidded me: "So you're a card-carrying Communist, eh"? and I told him: "No, I'm a Communist-carrying card."

FOR BARBARA EDEN

Do you like your new role as a nightclub entertainer?—K. B., Green Bay, Wis.

● Well, yes, but. . . . On TV I was protected by the character I played. In nightclubs you are vulnerable because you are yourself—you aren't playing a role. And your audience is right there deciding if they like you or not. That's a terrific challenge. I had to get used to it—but I like it.

FOR SUSAN DEY, Laurie on "The Partridge Family"

Was there any resentment on the set of "The Partridge Family" when David Cassidy made it so big and the rest of you didn't?—M. H., Battle Creek, Mich.

● Yes, there was for a while. We resented the totem-pole status. But mainly the resentment that was felt for a time was not because David had become an overnight superstar, but because he was so busy and so very much with it. That was great! We all wanted that. I think it was a sign of maturity that we outgrew it.

FOR DR. BILLY GRAHAM, evangelist

I can't find anything in the Bible that says suicide is wrong. Why are you against it?—Donald Davidson, Durham, N.C.

● The Bible says positively that God has a plan for each of us. He alone knows when we have served our time. Interference on our part is presumptuous. The question is not when do we reach the end of our rope, but when do we reach the end of His rope.

FOR KAREN BLACK, actress

Would you rather be a leading lady or a character actress? —F. K., Visalia, Calif.

● I am a character actress. I always have been. In the old days you got to be a character actress when you were 47 or something like that. To me, you are always a character. Even people my age have so many different personalities: outgoing, vain, malicious, sweet—there are millions of ways to portray someone. All different. All characters.

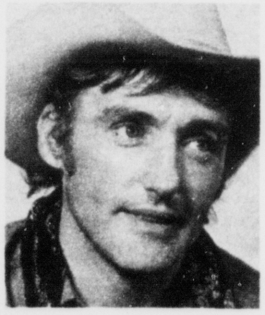
FOR CLARENCE M. KELLY, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation

How are criminals named to the FBI's "Ten Most Wanted" list?—Mark Waldkirch, DePere, Wis.

● In addition to current serious crime charges, "Top Ten" fugitives usually have a long history of violent criminal behavior and are considered an acute menace to society. Before it's published, the list gets its final personal approval from the director of the FBI.



FOR DENNIS HOPPER

There is a scene in "Kid Blue" in which you try to kill a chicken, and whack away at it with an ax. Was that for real? —R. G., Sarasota, Fla.

● It sure was! I told them before we started, "Get me a really sharp ax because I'm only going to do this once!" I guess they didn't listen to me. As a kid I was raised on a farm and I had to kill an awful lot of chickens. I don't enjoy eating chicken because I remember them as a dirty lot. I keep smelling those chicken houses I had to clean.

FOR GRAHAM KERR, "The Galloping Gourmet"

● "Eden Sur Croute," named in honor of Adam and Eve. I am convinced that the apple was not "the tempting fruit." (1) Take one fresh banana and slice into four chunks. (2) Place one slice of whole wheat bread into a toaster until lightly browned. (3) Butter heavily and smash banana chunks over the oozing toast. (4) Sprinkle with freshly ground parsley and top with ground black Telicheri peppercorns. (5) Now sink your teeth softly into it, and lo, Adam (or Eve) beckoneth!

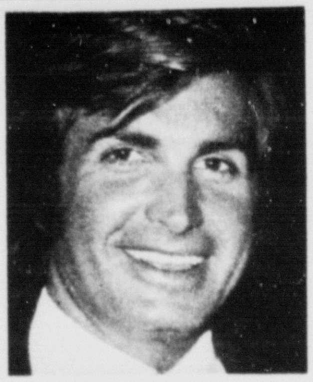
Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR GEORGE HAMILTON

How do you feel about all the trouble Burt Reynolds got into during the filming of "The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing" in Gila Bend?—A. Peters, Gadsden, Ala.



● The furor would never have happened in a big city. A small place like Gila Bend isn't used to having a film company there, so everything got out of proportion with the excitement. The man who killed himself was obviously a depressed and very unfortunate person. But the whole thing gave Hollywood a bad name, and actors a bad name. Being the star of the film, Burt was the obvious focal point. In my opinion he was not to blame. However, I think all the publicity will help sell the film.

FOR POSTMASTER GENERAL E. T. KLASSEN

Does the U.S. Postal Service plan to eliminate residential mail service on Saturdays?—Mrs. Laurel Aldridge, Hobart, Ind.

● No, but people are accusing us of it all the time. They may be confusing residential delivery with business delivery. Many offices and office buildings are closed on Saturday and such firms have requested that we do not deliver mail to them on Saturday, so we do not. Residential mail service as well as delivery to businesses that desire it will continue on Saturday.

FOR BARBARA EDEN

FOR CHUCK CONNORS, actor

What was the funny comment you made after Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev hugged you and you lifted him off the ground in a friendly embrace?—John Lang, Green Bay, Wis.

● The thought that went through my mind as I lifted Brezhnev in farewell was "He's head of state—I'm surrounded by security men—I MUST be careful." And after the hugging incident, a TV interviewer kidded me: "So you're a card-carrying Communist, eh"? and I told him: "No, I'm a Communist-carrying card."

"The Russians were smiling and happy at the sight of Big Red (my wife Norma) and me, particularly since I was dressed in my usual cowboy hat, boots and leather jacket."

An American Cowboy (and His Wife) Find Open Hearts in Lonely Russia

By Clair Huffaker

Author of "The Cowboy and The Cossack"

The first thing I liked about Russia was their word for "cowboy." The word is "cowboy," except that they usually say it more like "cowf-poy."

For a part-time cowboy on Russian soil for the first time, that was a good start.

My wife Norma—I call her "Big Red"—and I had just arrived by boat in Nakodka. Nakodka is a port on the southeast tip of the USSR, not too far from Japan. We were about to travel across Russia to research a novel I had in mind about cowboys and Cossacks. I intended to put those two unique, tough brands of horsemen together in terms of fiction. But I had to deal in terms of truth—to pick up a handful of Russian earth and get the feel of it. And most important, to find out as best I could what the grassroots Russian people were really like.

So far, they were smiling and happy at the sight of Big Red and me, particularly since I was dressed in my usual cowboy hat, boots and leather jacket. At the train station we managed to order two cups of coffee, and the young waitress grinned all over. "Cowf-poy?" she asked. "Amerikansky?" I nodded and said in my fluent one word of Russian, "Dah." She giggled with infectious good humor as she left.

Soon we were on an elegant red-velvet-draped train on our way north to Khabarovsk, the major city of Eastern Siberia, where we were to spend our first several days. The people on the train were almost overwhelmingly friendly. At dinner time we made our way to the dining car, where we were met by a small sea of smiling, nodding faces.

One evening in Khabarovsk, we got into a line at a bakery to buy some sweet rolls. There were about 30 people in front of us. A handsome young man near the front of the line turned and saw us. He came back to where we were and somehow made it clear in Russian, "You are guests of ours here, and you should go to the front of the line."

We tried to refuse, but everyone agreed with him, nodding and smiling as he led the two embarrassed Americans to the head of the line. (It's hard to argue, I found, when all you can say is "Dah.") Uncomfortable, yet deeply moved, I pointed at the sweet rolls and held up two fingers to indicate two of them, then quickly dug into my pocket for some kopecks. The middle-aged man behind the counter put two sweet rolls into a bag and handed it to me. I tried to pay him—but he shook his head.

So there we were at the head of the line with free rolls, and nothing we could say. All I could do was what Big Red was already doing—smile. Smile and mean it from the bottom of my heart. As we started from the bakery, the people in the line not only smiled back, but, suddenly and spontaneously, they applauded!

Two days later, we walked far off into the rolling mountains surrounding Khabarovsk, so I could pick up a handful of earth and see how it felt. Red thought it was silly, but I thought it was important.

"Well, how does it feel?" she asked, as we stood together on a high mountain slope.

"There is a forest there called the Siberian Taiga. The Taiga, by itself, is bigger than the entire U.S."

"About the same as back home in Utah."

She smiled, shrugging her shoulders. "I could have told you that 1,200 miles ago."

"I doubt it. Because I'm very good at judging the feel of dirt."

She looked at the mountains around us, with the sun about to set. "How good are you at finding your way home?"

"Terrific."

I insist to this day that we were never lost when it got dark, but it was nice to find a small farmhouse. The old man, his wife and their middle-aged son knew instantly that we were Americans, and that we were somehow off the track. They gave us strong coffee and delicious pieces of meat. And then the father and his son led us back through the night to where we could finally see the lights of Khabarovsk.

Before we could thank them, they disappeared in the darkness.

One evening, as Red and I were headed back to our hotel, we were approached by a tall young man with a couple of friends who'd all had a few drinks. The young man said something to us in a happy, good-natured way. We didn't understand, but we stopped to try a few words of conversation, and a crowd soon gathered around us. Fountain pens and pieces of paper appeared, and it became apparent that they wanted us to autograph on anything they had—matchbooks, packs of cigarettes, even photographs from their wallets. Red and I signed our names, laughing and speaking in English and fractured Russian.

An American Cowboy

Then the tall young man, who was wearing a white shirt, turned his back to me and made it clear he wanted me to boldly sign the back of his shirt. As I finished, the laughter and fun were stopped by a few snarled words in Russian. A husky young man stepped into the center of the crowd and angrily shoved the tall young man off-balance. His vicious tone of voice told us pretty much what he was saying. "How dare you cheapen yourself by letting an American write on your shirt!"

There was a moment of hard silence as they faced each other.

Suddenly, I got an idea. Grinning, I took off my jacket and handed the tall young man the pen. Then I swung my shoulder around so that he could sign his name on the back of my shirt, too. He laughed and signed my shirt. As the husky troublemaker stalked off, the relieved crowd started to talk and laugh again. But it had been a spooky few seconds.

"A husky young man stepped into the center of the crowd and angrily shoved the tall young man off-balance. His vicious tone of voice told us pretty much what he was saying. 'How dare you cheapen yourself by letting an American write on your shirt!' "

It came time to leave Khabarovsk. Red and I had brought a number of bolo ties and other American trinkets with us. We gave one, a black Apache tear, to the head waitress who had watched over us like a mother hen. She was almost overcome by the small gift. We always gave scarves or small pieces of jewelry when leaving the friends that we made. And our Russian friends would always give us something, no matter how small it might be, or how distressed they were not to have more. A tiny flask of perfume for Red, a pack of cigarettes or a postcard for me.

Compared with the elegant train that had brought us from Nakodka, the Trans-Siberian Express that was to take us some 7,000 miles to Moscow looked like a cattle car. Our small, dingy compartment was shared with another couple, an elderly Russian man and wife who were at first terrified of me and the way I dressed. Later, when we became friends, it turned out that they, like most Russians, knew about "cowf-poys" from American Western films, and they were concerned that I might be a "bad guy" instead of a "good guy."

To give an idea of the vastness of that huge country we were crossing, there is a forest there called the Siberian Taiga. The Taiga, by itself, is bigger than the entire U.S. And the silences are equally huge. One night in Siberia the train stopped for some reason and Red and I were standing at a window looking off at an endless dark plain leading to the far-off immensity of star-studded sky. We could hear each other breathing. But there was another sound that I couldn't quite place. Finally I realized it was the sound of the burning tip of my cigarette.

In our final stop, Leningrad, a four-year-old boy named Ivan fell in love with my cowboy hat in the elevator at the Hotel Europa. This led to our meeting his handsome young parents, Igor and Irenia. Igor spoke workable, self-taught English, and they wound up showing us their city.

On our last night in Leningrad, Igor and Irenia took us to dinner at a small family-run restaurant on the bank of the Niva River. Three big Russian men deep in their cups staggered over to sit, uninvited, at our table and ply us with loud, suspicious questions about America. They weren't really too bad, but they were noisy and out of line.

More and more embarrassed and confused, Igor tried to translate back and forth. But they felt that the louder they spoke, the more we would understand. And finally I leaned toward them and in a low, but very tough cowboy voice recited Lewis Carroll's nonsense poem "Jabberwocky." When I bellowed out the last rumbling line—"And the momeraths outgrabe!"—they didn't want to push their luck any more. They got up and left.

Two young Russian couples were sitting at a nearby table. Within a few minutes, they left, too. But one of the young men passed by our table and silently put a note in front of me that was written on a paper napkin. It read, exactly, "Excuse those three man for their behavior. Don't think that all Russian man are as those man. Don't mind it. And excuse also us. Goodbye."

That night Igor and Irenia took us to their small apartment, and they insisted on giving us two precious paintings of Irenia's that we had admired. Big Red gave Irenia her last necklace from around her neck. And I gave Igor my cowboy belt and buckle, so that my pants would be in danger of falling down all the way back to America.

We all Russian-hugged each other, and Igor said, "Did you like your trip away from home?"

Are you washing your face like a six year old?

Soap and water was all you needed when you were a kid. But you're not a kid anymore. That's why you need DuBarry's Penetrating Cleanser.

DuBarry's Penetrating Cleanser is a soft, creamy lotion that thoroughly cleans your face. Not just superficial milk bathed, but thoroughly clean. (That's why we call it Penetrating Cleanser.)

And, at the same time, it also moisturizes your skin while it's cleaning it. So, when you rinse it off with water (or tissue it off), your face is dewy clean. Not greasy. Or oily. Just plain clean and creamy-soft.

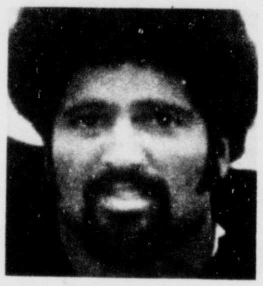
FRANCO HARRIS:

Pittsburgh Has a New Hero



"Franco's Army" doesn't carry guns or fight wars. It is an army of Pittsburgh football fans who proclaim their rabid worship of Franco Harris, star running back who last winter sparked the Steelers to their first pro football championship in their 40-year history. Harris won Rookie of the Year honors in the AFC by rushing over 100 yards in six consecutive games to tie a league record. He also grabbed a deflected pass to race for a winning touchdown in the last five seconds of the division conference championship game against Oakland. . . . Franco is one of nine children born to a black GI who landed on the Anzio beachhead in Italy during World War II and married an Italian war bride. A powerful 230-pounder, Franco was a tower of backfield strength both in high school play and for Penn State, the No. 1 Eastern college football team. The Steelers made him their No. 1 draft choice, and converted him to a runner. . . . The owner of an Italian-American bakery organized Steeler fans into "Franco's Italian Army." The "Army" wore helmet liners, waved Italian flags and made Frank Sinatra an honorary general. Soon, all other ethnic groups were clamoring to join the "Army" (Irish fans referred to the local hero as "Frank O'Harris").

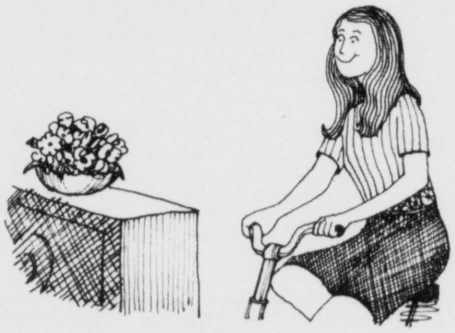
Mini-Exercises That Melt Off Pounds



Most people gain weight gradually, by taking in 100 to 200 calories a day more than they should—that is, more than they exercise off. Dr. Frederick Stare, professor of nutrition at Harvard, points out that any little extra exercise beyond our normal everyday activities can knock off those 100 to 200 calories and keep weight from accumulating. But how to find time for that "extra" exercise? One excellent way is to get up and jog occasionally during TV commercials, for a loss of 15 calories a minute. Or invest in a jump rope and do the same thing. Get into the habit of walking briskly up a flight of stairs instead of taking an elevator. If you own any exercise equipment, use it while you're doing something else. One woman keeps her exercise bicycle in front of the TV set. Riding it, she loses about 150 calories during a half-hour show she is watching. Wherever you go, walk fast. A fast half-hour's walk uses up 60 more calories than walking at a leisurely pace.

The Doctor Lets You In Venereal Disease: Don't Ignore It!

Many people think venereal disease is something that should be stifled or ignored, like a burp. Despite the success of penicillin and other drugs in curing gonorrhea and syphilis, both have again become epidemic. Millions of dollars are needed for research that would develop a gonorrheal blood test and a vaccine for both syphilis and gonorrhea. And people need to realize that venereal disease is not a punishment but a cold, hard fact, just like any other illness. . . . Sex is coincidental to venereal diseases: the same germs can be transmitted non-sexually. If you have a sore or discharge or itching on your genital parts, see a doctor at once. These diseases never go away by themselves. And remember, the only way you can betray someone you've loved is by not helping them get proper medical care. Otherwise, the disease will surely get back to you in time. It's a problem all must work against.

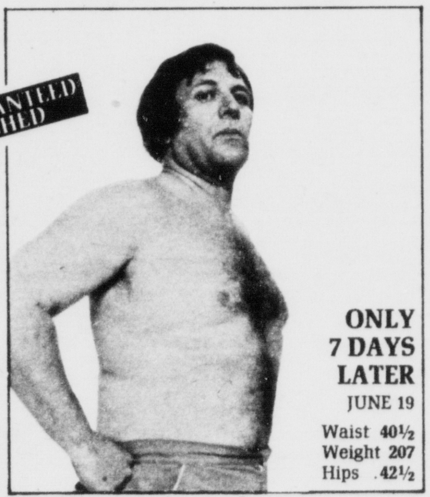
Jimmy as he looked when he started.



Only 7 Days Later Amazing Results — pot almost gone.

Joe Weider, fitness expert and trainer of champions since 1936 says:

"Give me 5 minutes twice daily for only 7 days and you'll lose up to 3 inches from your waistline, up to 6 pounds of unwanted weight, and 'shape up' — or I will return every penny."

LET'S FACE THE FACTS WHY YOU'RE OUT OF SHAPE

You eat the wrong combination of foods, you do not get enough exercise to thoroughly work your muscular, metabolic and respiratory systems daily. Because of this, fat accumulates around your waistline, heart and other body organs, slowing you down, aging your body and destroying your vitality, virility and youth. There is only one way to firm up and shape up: that is through proper exercise and proper nutrition. Effortless exercisers, reducing pills, sauna shorts, weighted belts, dangerous and painful diets and other gimmicks designed to appeal to your laziness will not work and have been exposed by the medical profession as frauds, ineffective and in some cases dangerous. They can only reduce your pocketbook.

Face up to it...If you want to slim down, firm and shape up, you must work off the inches, and there is no safer, faster and more enjoyable way to do it than with our patented, truly miraculous "5" Minute Body Shaper Plan.

HOW DOES THIS INGENIOUS "5" MINUTE PLAN SLIM, FIRM AND SHAPE YOU UP?

Its miraculous slimming action is based on doing one simple "5" Minute Continuous Rhythm coordinated exercise, lying on your back! That's all you do! That's all your body needs to help make up for the lack of activity it doesn't get most of the day. The action is designed to supply your waistline and hipline (where fat accumulates quickest, giving your body a flabby, weak and distorted look) with the activity it needs to slim you and keep you slim. Joe Weider, fitness expert and trainer of champions since 1936 says:

"Give me 5 minutes twice daily for only 7 days and you'll lose up to 3 inches from your waistline, up to 6 pounds of unwanted weight, and 'shape up' — or I will return every penny."

LET'S FACE THE FACTS WHY YOU'RE OUT OF SHAPE

You eat the wrong combination of foods, you do not get enough exercise to thoroughly work your muscular, metabolic and respiratory systems daily. Because of this, fat accumulates around your waistline, heart and other body organs, slowing you down, aging your body and destroying your vitality, virility and youth. There is only one way to firm up and shape up: that is through proper exercise and proper nutrition. Effortless exercisers, reducing pills, sauna shorts, weighted belts, dangerous and painful diets and other gimmicks designed to appeal to your laziness will not work and have been exposed by the medical profession as frauds, ineffective and in some cases dangerous. They can only reduce your pocketbook.

Face up to it...If you want to slim down, firm and shape up, you must work off the inches, and there is no safer, faster and more enjoyable way to do it than with our patented, truly miraculous "5" Minute Body Shaper Plan.

BARBECUED CHICKEN HICKORY

12-16 drumsticks (2½-3 lbs.)
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
Double-Triple Hickory Barbecue Sauce

To broil chicken:

1. Preheat broiler if necessary. Place drumsticks in shallow foil-lined pan, brush with butter.

2. Place drumsticks 5 inches below source of heat. For gas range, set thermostat at 450°F.; leave door slightly open. Broil for 20-25 minutes. For electric range, broil 20-25 minutes.

3. Turn drumsticks; broil 15-20 minutes. Brush with barbecue sauce; broil 5 minutes; turn and brush again. Continue broiling about 5 minutes, or until chicken is browned.

To grill chicken:

1. Preheat grill or prepare and light charcoal grill. Brush drumsticks with melted butter.

2. Place drumsticks on grill 5 inches above source of heat. Grill for 20-25 minutes. Turn drumsticks; grill 15-20 minutes. Brush with barbecue sauce; grill 5 minutes; turn and brush again. Continue grilling about 5 minutes, or until chicken is browned.

3. Brush with sauce and grill slowly 20-30 minutes longer, until glazed and tender. (This method keeps the sauce from burning excessively. It also allows more smoke flavor to penetrate through the ribs.)

4. Heat Double-Triple Hickory Barbecue Sauce and serve as a dip for ribs.

Tasty Rolls You Make with Buttermilk

bake 20-25 minutes, until light golden brown.*

Makes about 20 balls

*Make-ahead note: You may make Cheddar-Cheese Balls ahead, refrigerate them and bake just before serving. They may also be frozen and baked just before serving for 25-30 minutes. Do not thaw.

BUTTERMILK SESAME PAN ROLLS

5½-6½ cups unsifted all-purpose flour or enriched unbleached white flour
3 tablespoons sugar
2½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon baking soda
1 pkg. active dry yeast
1 cup buttermilk
1 cup water
⅓ cup margarine or butter
1 egg yolk
2 tablespoons water
3 tablespoons sesame seeds

1. In large bowl, mix 2 cups flour, sugar, salt, baking soda and undissolved active dry yeast.

2. Combine buttermilk, water and margarine in a saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquids are very warm (120°-130°F.). Margarine does not need to melt. Milk will appear curdled.

3. Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add 1 cup flour, or enough to make a thick batter. Beat at high speed 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough additional flour to make a soft dough. You will want to use your own well-scrubbed hands here to work in the flour.

4. Turn out dough onto lightly floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic, about 8-10 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

5. Punch down dough; turn out onto lightly floured board. Divide dough in half. Form each half into a roll 12 inches long; cut into 12 equal pieces.

6. To make Pan Rolls: Form pieces of dough into smooth balls. Place in 2 greased 9-inch round cake pans or on cookie sheets. Beat egg yolk with water. Brush surface of rolls with egg-yolk mixture; sprinkle with sesame seeds. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

7. Just before rising time is up, preheat oven to 375°F. Bake for 25 minutes, or until done. Remove from pans and place on wire racks to cool.

Makes 2 dozen rolls

Excuse us for butting into the recipes.

But we needed a little extra room to make the point that a pound of Miracle spreads 36 more slices than unwhipped margarine.

Whipping gives Miracle Brand Margarine six sticks instead of four. So a pound produces 36 extra pats.

Whipping means smoother, easier spreading, too. And whipping sacrifices none of that good, fresh Kraft margarine flavor.

They aren't. KRAFT Division of Kraftco Corporation

By Sophia Loren In conversation with Helen Dorsey

Sophia—whose cookbook, "In the Kitchen with Love," is published by Doubleday—tosses pizza batter in the kitchen of her Italian home.

I think food is important. It is a symbol of security, especially to those who have suffered hunger. As a child I was hungry six days a week and ate on the seventh. The idea of food as a festivity and a physical elation has become deeply rooted in my thinking. So now if I really like someone, I always associate him with one of my favorite dishes.

I call my husband "Involtini" [veal birds], because this is my favorite dish and he is my favorite man. Sometimes I've been known to call him "Eggplant Parmesan"! I call our son Chipi [Carlo, Jr.] "Spaghetti" because he loves it so. Sometimes I even think of myself in terms of food—like a pizza, which I happen to like very much. Being Neapolitan, I see myself as the classic pizza made with tomato and mozzarella. Why pizza? Because pizza is common, and I think I'm a very common housewife. Every woman should have a husband to love, babies to hold and meals to cook!

I like to entertain only close friends, people I know and am very comfortable with. I do not like to go out. I am really such a homebody. A house needs to be looked after. I like to keep flowers in the room. I'm very responsive to color, and I use white, red and yellow roses.

My grandmother Luisa taught me how to cook. She also taught me the most indispensable ingredient of all good home cooking: love for those you are cooking for. It's not surprising my most successful meals have been for my family.

Gerber helps surround your baby with love.

All prepared with one thought in mind: to help provide your baby with proper nourishment for a healthier future.

Clothing him . . . You'll find little "extras" in babywear that carries the Gerber name. Like bind-free seamless underarms in our cotton shirts. And nylon finished edges on our vinyl pants. Our stretch socks really stretch. Your baby may outgrow Gerber babywear, but chances are he'll never outwear it.

And Babygro® by Gerber sleepwear is flame retardant. You'll find it in leading department stores and infant specialty shops.

Soothing him . . . Gerber also takes special care of baby in the nursery, with vaporizer-humidifiers that provide comfort whenever it's needed. "All the American woman needs now to become the world's greatest cook is one small touch of witchcraft—or Frenchcraft, if you prefer."

Each time I come back from the States having gained a few pounds on ice cream, apple pies, cheese cake or Idaho potatoes, my French compatriots stare at me in astonishment and say: "I thought one could not eat a decent meal in the States."

In my opinion, it is easier to produce a marvelous meal in the U.S. than it is in France. This is because of all the frozen foods you can find in American supermarkets. Even in a French three-star restaurant (and we have only 16 left), I never got spinach as delicious as some of the frozen brands in America. Frozen buttered mushrooms in the U.S. are better than any canned brand you can find in France, and I think I could launch the most successful "patisserie" on the Champs-Elysees using American frozen fudge, cheese cake and lemon chiffon pies. All the frozen croissants, buns, etc., are as delicious as the ones we get baked freshly every morning—and what a luxury to get them hot from the oven!

For example:

- Half a glass of dry Vermouth adds glamour to any frozen fish or scallops. As a matter of fact, dry Vermouth is the best white wine to use in sauces.
- Put one package of frozen mushrooms and one package of frozen scallops into a covered saucepan, on low heat. Add minced garlic or onion, fresh parsley, salt, pepper, and two or three spoons of Vermouth. Let it boil for 15 minutes, remove from heat, and add a little sour cream. Serve in the middle of a crown of rice.
- A can of lobster bisque or crab soup, which you can find on any gourmet counter, gives you the key to haute cuisine. Mix the soup with Vermouth instead of water, then

Sprinkle with grated cheese, add a few balls of butter and put in very hot oven until it gets nicely browned (about 20 minutes to get the inside very hot). This is called a "Parmentier" (Monsieur Parmentier was the man who brought the first potatoes to France).

If you ever invite some French people to dinner, here are some tips:

—First, don't serve them "French dressing" on their salad! (Heaven knows how that mixture got called "French"—it was never served in France!) This is how we do our salad dressing: one dessert spoon of hot mustard, two of wine vinegar, a good sprinkle of ground pepper, four spoons of oil (preferably olive oil). Use these ingredients in that order if you want a smooth sauce. Add any fresh herbs you can find—dill, chives or tarragon. Notice that there is no salt, as the mustard is already salted.

—All French people will love American mixed salads, but they don't care for fruit in them, and they usually don't appreciate fruit gelatin served as a first course.

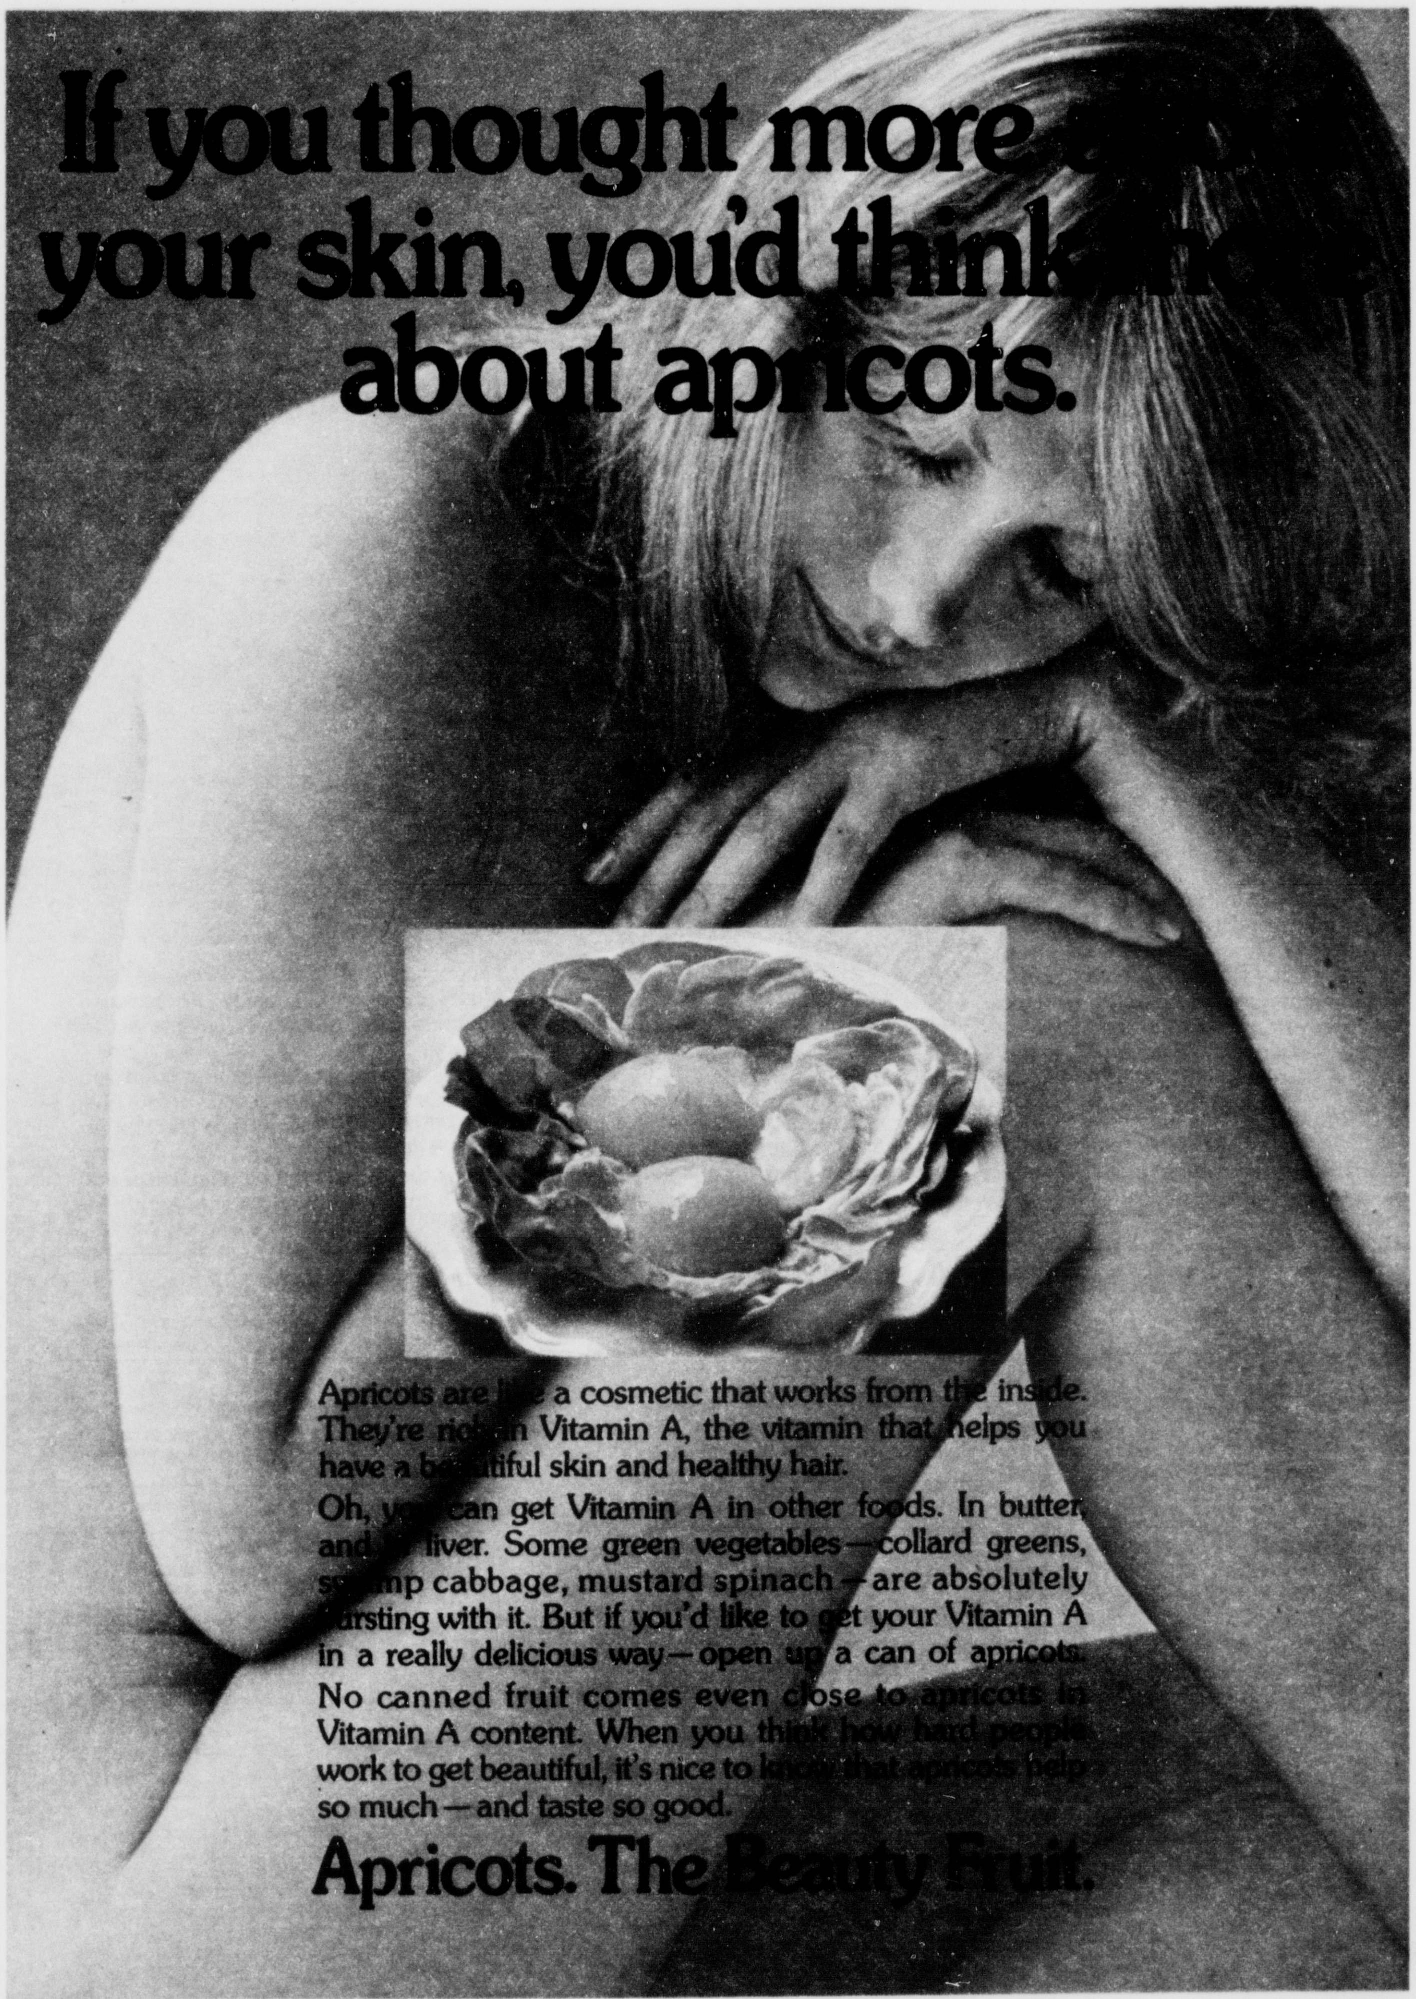
—Most Frenchmen appreciate American clam chowder, American roast beef, good Idaho potatoes and a salad. Never begin the meal with a salad. Serve it with the meat and don't give any with fish. (We get good beef very rarely in France, so it is sure to be a treat. A Maine lobster served hot with melted butter is also sure to be a success.)

—For dessert, serve your sundaes (caramel pecan, butterscotch sauce, hot chocolate, etc.).

—With your meal, serve a good red California wine. This will interest Frenchmen much more than the wine they get every day on their tables.

—Remember, too, that Jewish delicatessen foods are quite a treat for French people, who must shop in certain areas to find that kind of special cuisine. They are likely to rave about simple corned beef or hot pastrami served with coleslaw. On the other hand, artichokes, which are considered such a delicacy in the States, are quite ordinary and inexpensive in France.

—Finally, if you offer French people some chocolates, never give them mint chocolates, but they will love all your fudgy sorts. Good chocolate costs twice as much in France, so it always makes a very presentable gift.



If you thought more about your skin, you'd think more about apricots.

Apricots are like a cosmetic that works from the inside. They're rich in Vitamin A, the vitamin that helps you have a beautiful skin and healthy hair.

Oh, you can get Vitamin A in other foods. In butter, and in liver. Some green vegetables—collard greens, swamp cabbage, mustard spinach—are absolutely bursting with it. But if you'd like to get your Vitamin A in a really delicious way—open up a can of apricots. No canned fruit comes even close to apricots in Vitamin A content. When you think how hard people work to get beautiful, it's nice to know that apricots help so much—and taste so good.

Hot and Hearty French Onion Soup

By Marilyn Hansen

When the weather gets blustery, one recalls the delicious aroma authentic French Onion Soup. I like to serve it "gratiné"— with melted cheese, ladling it out to guests in front of a glowing fire.

FRENCH ONION SOUP
(Soupe a l'Oignon)

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
6-7 cups (2 lbs.) thinly sliced yellow onions
½ teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons flour
5 cans (10½-oz. size) condensed beef bouillon
3 soup cans water
1 teaspoon salt
Several twists freshly ground black pepper
½ cup burgundy or dry red wine
¼ cup Madeira or port wine
8-10 slices toasted French bread
2 cups grated natural Gruyère, Swiss or Parmesan cheese

1. In 4-6-qt. Dutch oven or kettle heat butter and oil until hot. Add onions and sugar. Cook over medium heat for 20-30 minutes, stirring frequently, until onions are lightly browned and bottom of pan is lightly glazed.

2. Scrape glaze from bottom of pan and blend in with onions. Stir in flour and cook 1 minute.

3. Stir in beef bouillon, water, salt and pepper. Bring to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer covered for 30 minutes.

4. Stir in burgundy and Madeira. Taste for seasoning. Pour into tureen or ladle into soup bowls* over rounds of bread. Pass grated cheese separately.

Makes 2¾ qts., 8-10 servings

To serve gratiné: Preheat oven to 450°F. Pour hot soup into oven-proof tureen or casserole. Place 8-10 slices toasted French bread on surface of soup and sprinkle thickly with 1½-2 cups grated Gruyère or Swiss cheese. Bake for 15 minutes, then place under broiler for a few minutes to brown top lightly. Ladle into soup bowls in front of guests, serving a slice of bread and melted cheese in each bowl. Or you may prepare individual oven-proof soup bowls as directed above.

HINTS FOR SUCCESSFUL ONION SOUP

1. Cook onions slowly in butter and oil for even browning.

2. Extra wine and seasonings may be added at end of cooking to suit taste.

3. As with all soups, serve steaming hot!

While Terri and the giraffe stood looking eye to eye, each deciding if the other were friendly, all of Terri's friends came running out onto Sandy Lane.

First came her sister, Susan. Then her friend, Herbert, and even her dog Skippy. And then a whole gang of other kids.

2 cups grated natural Gruyère, Swiss or Parmesan cheese

1. In 4-6-qt. Dutch oven or kettle heat butter and oil until hot. Add onions and sugar. Cook over medium heat for 20-30 minutes, stirring frequently, until onions are lightly browned and bottom of pan is lightly glazed.

2. Scrape glaze from bottom of pan and blend in with onions. Stir in flour and cook 1 minute.

3. Stir in beef bouillon, water, salt and pepper. Bring to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer covered for 30 minutes.

4. Stir in burgundy and Madeira. Taste for seasoning. Pour into tureen or ladle into soup bowls* over rounds of bread. Pass grated cheese separately.

Makes 2¾ qts., 8-10 servings

To serve gratiné: Preheat oven to 450°F. Pour hot soup into oven-proof tureen or casserole. Place 8-10 slices toasted French bread on surface of soup and sprinkle thickly with 1½-2 cups grated Gruyère or Swiss cheese. Bake for 15 minutes, then place under broiler for a few minutes to brown top lightly. Ladle into soup bowls in front of guests, serving a slice of bread and melted cheese in each bowl. Or you may prepare individual oven-proof soup bowls as directed above.

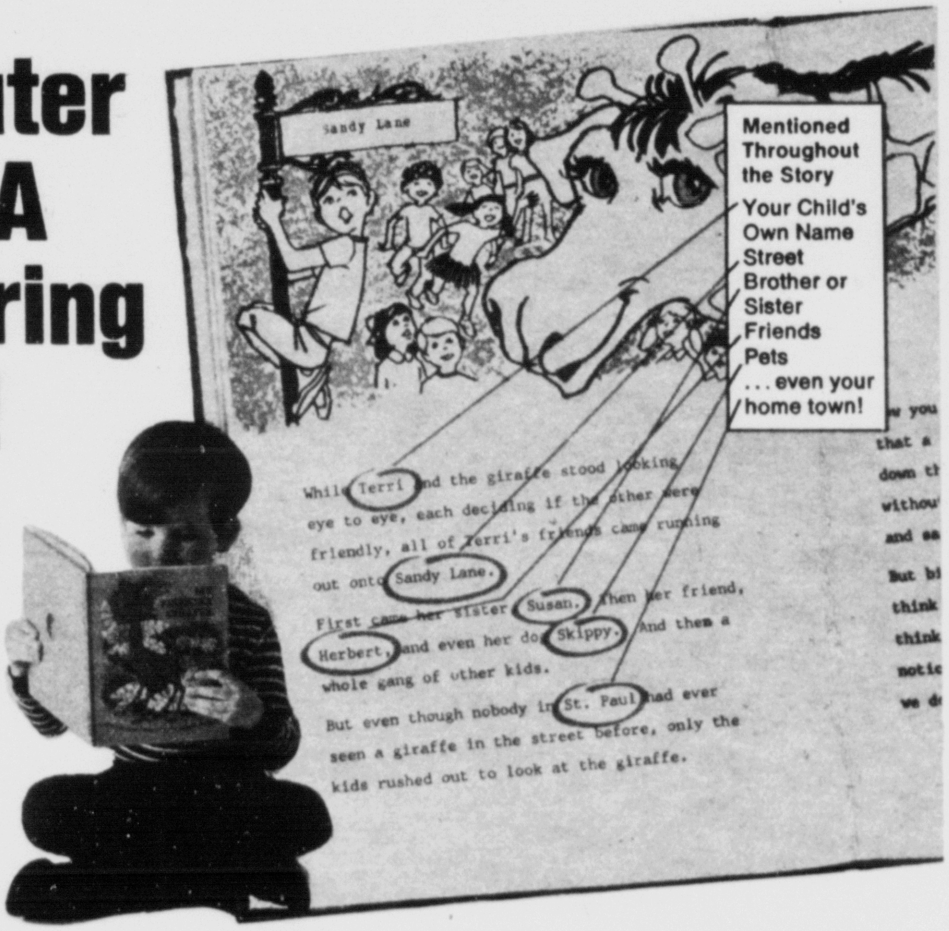
HINTS FOR SUCCESSFUL ONION SOUP

1. Cook onions slowly in butter and oil for even browning.

2. Extra wine and seasonings may be added at end of cooking to suit taste.

3. As with all soups, serve steaming hot!

Our Computer Will Write A Story Starring Your Child!



Sandy Lane
Mentioned Throughout the Story
Your Child's Own Name
Street
Brother or Sister
Friends
Pets
. . . even your home town!
While Terri and the giraffe stood looking eye to eye, each deciding if the other were friendly, all of Terri's friends came running out onto Sandy Lane.
First came her sister Susan. Then her friend, Herbert, and even her dog Skippy. And then a whole gang of other kids.
But even though nobody in St. Paul had ever seen a giraffe in the street before, only the kids rushed out to look at the giraffe.

Yes, we will actually write a book about your child, his home, his friends and his pets all mentioned by name!

Imagine your child's delight in becoming the leading character in a story! Whether you read this charming ME-BOOK to your child or he reads it himself, think of his surprise as his name appears over and over again in a story that's filled with people and places he knows.

Never before has there been a book like "My Friendly Giraffe." It's a true product of the Computer Age. The story is a delightful one. Your child will step into a marvelous fantasy world as he meets the friendly giraffe in front of his own home, then rides away on the giraffe's back (together with a friend whose name you'll send us) to a magical jungle adventure. It's all completely believable because the names of your child and his friends are repeated throughout.

Builds Learning Skills For Children Ages 3 To 9

Educators welcome personalized reading as a major breakthrough in learning. This ME-BOOK completely involves the child and holds his attention as no ordinary book can. As a result, his interest and enjoyment in reading grow at a rapid pace.

Your child or grandchild, niece or nephew deserves this book—not just for the fun it provides, but for the learning stimulation too. It's for children too young to read to themselves, as well as for youngsters just learning to read. Even older children will enjoy it, because no child ever outgrows his interest in himself.

Give this wonderful gift to a child you love. Or for an extra-special treat, give two ME-BOOKS: just check the box on the order form to receive "My Birthday Book" too. Fill out the coupon below and mail it to us with your check today!

THE SPIRIT OF '76

First in a series of four superbly sculptured heirloom plates to be struck in honor of our nation's 200th anniversary in Solid Pewter and 24Kt Gold on Pewter

THE year was 1773 . . . and in colonial America small bands of patriots gathered together to discuss their desire for complete "freedom" from the domination of British rule. As the appeals to the Crown became more and more ignored, our young country, with its ragged bands of farmers, businessmen, students . . . almost everyone who longed for a feeling of independence, joined together in what was to become America's Colonial Army of Independence. With the first shot "heard around the world" from the slopes of Bunker Hill, America began its most dramatic moment in history. . . . The American Revolutionary War.

And now, in commemoration of America's 200th Anniversary, The Hamilton Mint has created a special series of proof-quality Pewter Plates that depict the most significant events of this important period in our nation's history. And, if you act promptly, you may become a participant in this unique and truly worthy offering.

OUTSTANDING PLATE COLLECTION

To fittingly record and commemorate the major events and individuals in the founding of our country, The Hamilton Mint has commissioned master sculptor Alfred Brunettin to create the four most significant events in our long struggle for independence: "The Spirit of '76. . . America's ageless symbol for the fighting men of this war and all other wars since; "Paul Revere's Ride" . . . an expression of the individual's willingness to risk life or limb for the cause of independence; "Betsy Ross Creates The First Flag" . . . America's banner of freedom and liberty that has survived, almost in its original form, for over 200 years; and finally, "Washington At Valley Forge". . . a graphic dedication to the bravery and suffering of America's first army.

Each plate in this series measures a full 9″ in diameter and is struck in high bas relief to bring out all of the sculptured detail and drama of these important scenes. Created by The Hamilton Mint, America's Fine Art Mint, your plates will represent an outstanding collection of meaningful significance that you will be proud to display in an honored place in your home or office.

Your first plate, "The Spirit of '76", will be sent to you as soon as your order is received. Then, every three months you will be notified by mail of the availability of the next plate in the series. It is important to remember however, that only those individuals who order "The Spirit of '76" Bicentennial Plate now will be given the opportunity to order the remaining plates in this historic series.

PEWTER–THE TRADITIONAL METAL OF AMERICA

Because Pewter has traditionally been the metal of America's finest craftmen for over 200 years, it has been selected as the appropriate metal for this plate collection.

Pewter was not only used to a large extent in the households of Colonial America, but our first American Continental Dollar was actually fashioned from Pewter. Today, Pewter has gained an enormous revival of interest among artists and collectors because of the metal's ability to reflect the finest details of the designs that are struck into its surface and because its brilliance resembles fine silver so much.

AVAILABLE IN SOLID PEWTER AND 24 KT GOLD ON PEWTER

The Hamilton Mint's Bicentennial Plate Collection is available in your choice of Solid Pewter for just $25.00 per plate and 24 Kt Gold on Solid Pewter for only $40.00 per plate. If you prefer, you may order and pay for all four of the Bicentennial Plates now. The Four Solid Pewter plates, paid in full now, are just $90.00 complete (you save $10.00), or the four 24 Kt Gold on Solid Pewter plates are just $145.00 complete (you save $15.00).

STRICTLY LIMITED EDITIONS

A strict limit has been established by The Hamilton Mint on the quantity of Bicentennial Plates that will ever be issued in this edition. Only individuals who subscribe to the first plate in the series–"The Spirit of '76"–will be entitled to order the remaining three plates.

Each plate in the series will be individually minted by The Hamilton Mint and each subscriber will receive a registered Certificate of Authenticity attesting to his status as a collector of this limited edition series.

REMARKABLE INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITY

Even though prices in the International Metals Market have soared greatly during the past few years (and leading economists feel they will continue to climb) The Hamilton Mint has already committed for a sufficient quantity of Pewter and Gold to fully cover each subscription in this series. Therefore, you are guaranteed that these prices will not be increased for any plate in this series . . . no matter how high the price of Pewter and Gold rise in the months ahead.

In addition, collector plates have traditionally represented a fine investment opportunity. Certain limited edition collector plates, during the past several years, have soared in value from their original issue price.

To insure yourself of this opportunity to own these finely sculptured Bicentennial Plates, we urge you to send in your order today. It can only be accepted if it is received in time to be included within the edition limits.

Deluxe Version: 24 Kt Gold on Solid Pewter

The beauty of these Bicentennial Pewter Plates has been made even more exquisite and valuable with the addition of 24 Kt Gold richly layered on Solid Pewter. A limited quantity of these plates is available for just $40.00 each.

People Quiz

How Much Do You Know About What Intelligence Means to Us?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. People judge your intelligence more by what you do for a living than by your face, dress, or general appearance.

2. There's a lot more to intelligence than just thinking.

3. You can learn a lot about a person's general intellectual ability in just a few seconds.

4. If your mother had a higher IQ than your father, you're more likely to be smarter than if it was the other way around.

5. People with high IQ's tend to have authoritarian personalities—opinionated, dictatorial, seeking to dominate others.

6. If your job involves frequent stresses and pressures, this is likely to interfere with your capacity to think, reason and perform various mental tasks.

ANSWERS

1. True—according to studies at Southern Illinois University, where men and women were asked "to rate the personality characteristics of others who had been identified only by name and occupation." Findings: The degree of intelligence—as well as assertiveness and responsibility—was found to be highly related to the prestige of the person's occupation. Conclusion of the investigators: How intelligent people credit you with being depends far more on your occupation than the way you look.

2. True. As one authority observes, intelligence is an incredibly complex set of interrelated aptitudes and abilities, which are also affected by our moods, emotions and general outlook. Moreover, it is pointed out, a great deal of our thinking and problem-solving is done without us realizing how we do it—by what psychologists term "intuitive cognition." That's why, in many cases, people are at a loss to explain how they arrived at some of their best decisions.

True or False: People judge your intelligence more by what you do for a living than by your face, dress, or general appearance. (See number 1)

3. True. Here is a test, based on findings of a British psychological study, that will provide almost instant insight into a person's intellectual capacities. Simply give a person a sheet of paper on which 20 different numbers—ranging from 10 to 99—are written. Allow him five seconds to estimate the mean, or average, value. On the basis of experiments, this number-averaging ability is believed to be a "function of general intellectual capacity." It's pointed out that the ability to process such information quickly, efficiently and in a meaningful way is an important intellectual skill, and one related to achievement.

4. True—as evidenced by a University of Texas study of 104 families and their teenage children, in which both parents and offspring were subjected to a battery of intelligence tests. Findings: "Low-scoring children were found to have mothers scoring higher than fathers only 23 percent of the time, while high-scoring children had mothers exceeding their husbands 44 percent of the time." These results suggest that there is a very strong maternal effect on children's intellectual functioning.

5. False. Sociological studies conducted at the University of Illinois have shown the opposite to be true—that a person with these authoritarian characteristics tends to make low scores on intelligence tests. He's not nearly as smart as he likes to make people think he is. Interestingly enough, people with this type of personality tended to rate themselves as feeling powerless and lacking in inner strength.

6. False—according to the findings of two university investigators who made a study of the effects of stress on mental ability. It was found that subjects turned in superior performances after being subjected to stressful situations. It has been suggested that reaction to stress may manifest itself in increased drive in later performance.

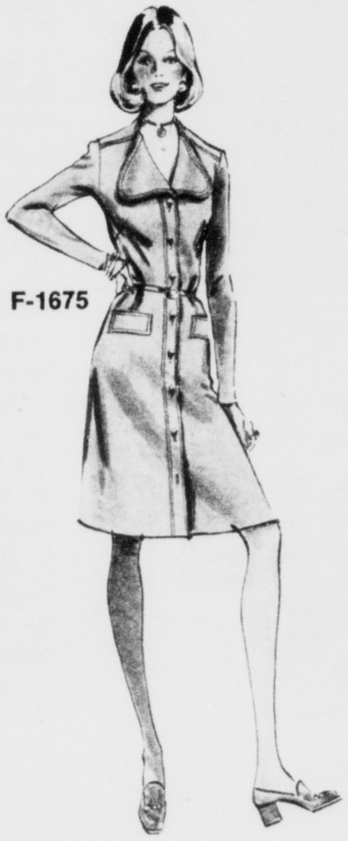
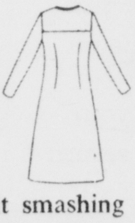
Shirtdress With a Difference



F-1675



How to update a classic? Don't change the shirtdress' comfortable fit or its easy front-button closing, but do give it smashing detail. Like this smart silhouette with unusual "Bassett-ear" collar, lots of top-stitching, a back yoke and mock pockets. Fabric suggestions: gabardine, wool jersey or blends.

Size 12 takes approximately 3¼ yards of 44-inch fabric. Standard body measurements for size 12 are: Bust 34, Waist 25½, Hips 36.

What am I?

I cannot be seen. Many times I go completely unrecognized—particularly in the very young. Because of me, children fail to learn and their speech will never be normal. They are labeled stubborn. Deficient. Or even retarded. Yet they are none of these.

I make the elderly suffer. When I strike, they often cut themselves off from family and friends. They feel misunderstood. And they know the heartbreak of loneliness.

In all, I rob more than 15 million Americans of much that is good in life. I undermine their confidence and eat away at their social life.

I am equally hard on the rich and poor. I cause trouble on the job and in the home. Yet, in spite of this, few of those I attack do anything to fight me, because no one wants to admit I exist.

I am a hearing problem.

EVONNE GOOLAGONG
Let the men wear telltale gray....

In these days of Women's Lib, one of the world's best-paid tennis champions hasn't been liberated from washing her own clothes. The problem is that Evonne Goolagong plays just about every day. Says Evonne, "I can't wear the same outfit twice without washing it. And tennis is a grueling occupation." So every morning (at least when she's home) tennis takes second place as Evonne hangs out a freshly washed white outfit for her day on the court. (See, Bobby Riggs? No ring around the collar!)

Marriage three decades from now: "By the year 2000 it will be feasible to insure that there will be no children in a union. By one of the several means currently under study, each individual will be assured of lasting infertility in early adolescence. It will take positive action, permissible only after a thoughtful decision, to reestablish fertility. . . . Also, computerized matching of prospective partners will be far more sophisticated. . . . It's becoming increasingly clear that a man-woman relationship will have permanence only to the degree to which it satisfies the emotional, psychological, intellectual and physical needs of the partners." From "Becoming Partners: Marriage and Its Alternatives," by Carl Rogers, Ph.D. (Delacorte, $7.95).

SEN. BARRY GOLDWATER
Turning off the leaks

QUOTE: Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) on running a government in public: "It is impossible to conduct the affairs of government in the window of Macy's department store. And it is a frightening thing to attend, as I did on one occasion, a meeting of top officials in the White House and read all about it in the morning paper the next day. I am not talking about just any meeting. I am talking about a meeting that I felt was so confidential that I did not even discuss it with my staff. Yet, the next day I found a completely accurate account in the newspaper. It was so accurate that even the words I spoke were correctly attributed. You almost have to have it happen to you to understand the feeling such an experience gives you. I called the President and suggested that something would have to be done to seal off the leaks of information from the executive branch." UNQUOTE.

Can a woman of 70, the mother of three grown sons and grandmother of nine, make it as a movie starlet? "Of course she can," says Terry Blake, "if she really wants to." This is no idle longing. Terry spends half of each waking day at calisthenics, the other hours in voice, dancing and acting lessons. She explains, "All my life I've wanted to be in show business, but I never got the chance. Now I have the time and the money. I bill myself as 'the world's most glamorous grandmother.'" Her objective, she modestly declares, is to match Marlene Dietrich. In fact, she's challenged the German songstress to a contest—in bikinis!

SPEED READER, TOO

I'm thinking of the meter reader
Who at our meter looks.
He reads our meter as, I guess,
Most readers must read books.

In fact, our meter reader may Find this a lot more fun.

We've used, before he's done.

Or if not water, then it's watts
He reads without restriction.
No characters, no plot (I hope)—

A rather prudish woman was strolling along the beach one day when she spotted a young girl clad in a very brief bikini. She was appalled and said to the girl in horrified tones, "Really, young lady, you should be ashamed of yourself. What would your mother say if she saw you in that suit?"

"She'd be plenty mad," the girl admitted. "It's her suit."

—Thomas LaMance

A man, boasting that his son had a wide range of interests, said, "You name it, he watches it!"

—Henry E. Leabo

A problem student was becoming too well acquainted with the principal's office. The frustrated principal finally showed his annoyance.

"This makes the fifth time I've had to punish you this week. What have you to say for yourself?"

Meet the real Perry Mason

He practiced law in Ventura, California and loved it. He was a master of logic, a born cross-examiner, and a wizard at the technical gymnastics of the law.

His name? Erle Stanley Gardner. And when he created Perry Mason in his own image, he became the most popular American writer of all time. (170 million of his books have been sold!)

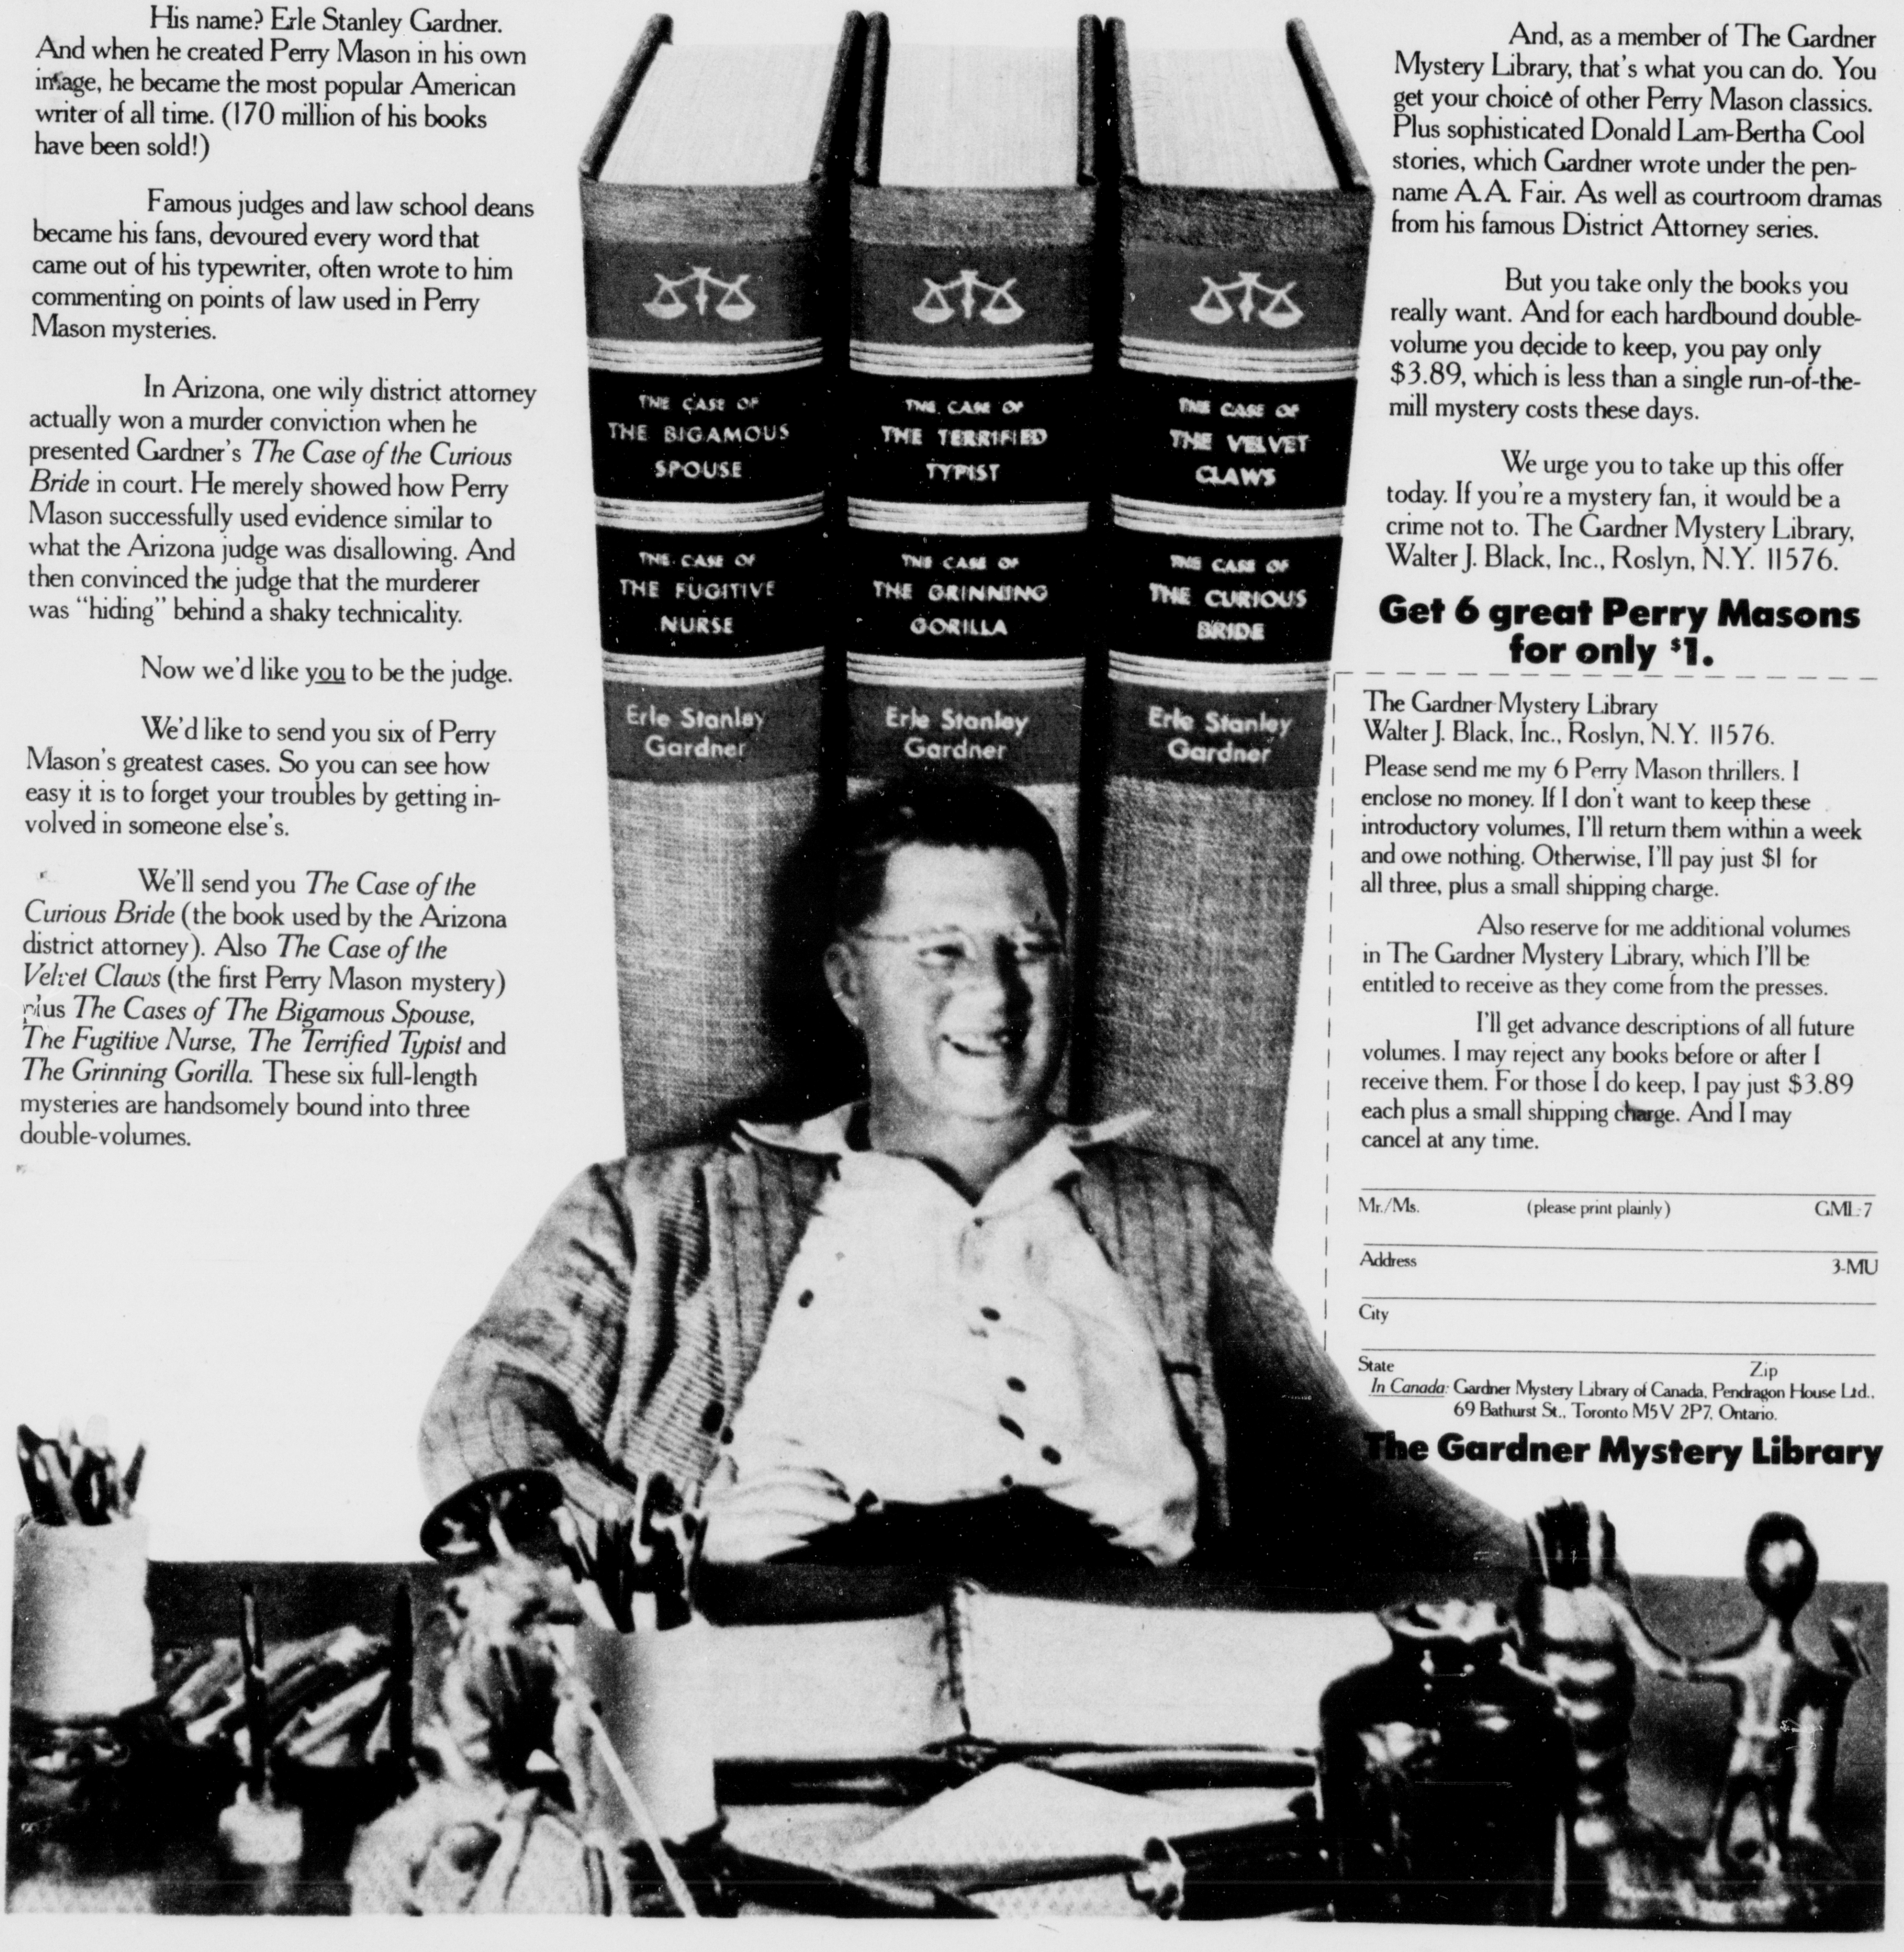
Famous judges and law school deans became his fans, devoured every word that came out of his typewriter, often wrote to him commenting on points of law used in Perry Mason mysteries.

In Arizona, one wily district attorney actually won a murder conviction when he presented Gardner's The Case of the Curious Bride in court. He merely showed how Perry Mason successfully used evidence similar to what the Arizona judge was disallowing. And then convinced the judge that the murderer was "hiding" behind a shaky technicality.

Now we'd like you to be the judge.

We'd like to send you six of Perry Mason's greatest cases. So you can see how easy it is to forget your troubles by getting involved in someone else's.

We'll send you The Case of the Curious Bride (the book used by the Arizona district attorney). Also The Case of the Velvet Claws (the first Perry Mason mystery) plus The Cases of The Bigamous Spouse, The Fugitive Nurse, The Terrified Typist and The Grinning Gorilla. These six full-length mysteries are handsomely bound into three double-volumes.



THE CASE OF THE BIGAMOUS SPOUSE
THE CASE OF THE FUGITIVE NURSE
Erle Stanley Gardner
THE CASE OF THE TERRIFIED TYPIST
THE CASE OF THE GRINNING GORILLA
Erle Stanley Gardner
THE CASE OF THE VELVET CLAWS
THE CASE OF THE CURIOUS BRIDE
Erle Stanley Gardner

We'll send you all six for $1, as your introduction to The Gardner Mystery Library. Because we think they'll make you want to read others by Erle Stanley Gardner.

And, as a member of The Gardner Mystery Library, that's what you can do. You get your choice of other Perry Mason classics. Plus sophisticated Donald Lam-Bertha Cool stories, which Gardner wrote under the pen-name A.A. Fair. As well as courtroom dramas from his famous District Attorney series.

But you take only the books you really want. And for each hardbound double-volume you decide to keep, you pay only $3.89, which is less than a single run-of-the-mill mystery costs these days.

We urge you to take up this offer today. If you're a mystery fan, it would be a crime not to. The Gardner Mystery Library, Walter J. Black, Inc., Roslyn, N.Y. 11576.
